MRS. VIOLETTA GRIMMER.

Oldest Person in Town Passes Away

At 9:30 o'clock Wednesday night, Mrs. Violetta Grimmer departed this life at her residence on Pitt street. Mrs. Grimmer was born on the 26th of March, 1816, making her age 83 years and 6 months. She was the oldest resident of Greenville.

Mrs. Grimmer's maiden name was Violetta Hearne. She was twice married, her first husband being Mr. Charles Johnston. She was left a widow in 1833 with one son, Mr. Charles H. Johnston, who now lives near Pictolus. In 1838 she was again married, her second husband being Mr. William Grimmer. To this latter union three children were born, two of whom are now living, Messrs. W. L. Grimmer, of Elm City and Mr. J. L. Grimmer, of Greenville. She was again left a widow in 1857, since which time she and her son Mr. J. L. Grimmer, have lived together.

Mrs. Grimmer joined the Methodist church at Atkinson's chapel in 1851. Her life was always that of a true Christian and honoring to her Savior. She was held in high esteem by all her acquaintances.

The funeral took place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Methodist cemetery, services being conducted at the grave by Rev. N. M. Watson. The pall bearers were Messrs. R. M. Starkey, J. C. Lanier, James Brown, Wiley Brown, J. White and A. B. Ellington.

Married.

At the home of the bride's brother, at Rountree's church, on Sept. 27th, Mr. James E. Cannon led to the Hymenial altar, Miss Alice, the beautiful daughter of Mr. Ed. Carman. The attendants were: J. J. Strand and Miss Hattie Cannon, Levi Holliday and Miss Olivia Phillips, Henry Pierce and Miss Alma Dawson, R. B. Dawson and Miss Blanch Brown. They had a nice reception. We congratulate James and Alice on making such a choice and wish them a long and happy life, S.

Everybody is expected to be here tomorrow.

W. C. NELSON ON TRIAL.

For the Killing W. N. M. Hammond

The defense finished putting on its testimony this morning, and the State then put on a few character witnesses and closed the evidence. Capt. Galloway made the first speech to the jury for the State and was followed by Mr. James for the defense. Solicitor Moore then spoke for the State. Mr. Aycock for the State and Col. Shinner for the defense follow.

At the time we go to press it is thought the argument will be finished and the case given to the jury by the hour of adjournment for the night.

Visiting Dewey.

By Telegraph to Reflector.

New York, Sept. 28.—Gen. Miles and other members of the President's commission visited Admiral Dewey this morning. Later the medals from Congress were distributed, the visitors being present during the distribution.

Gov. Roosevelt accompanied by full staff paid respects to the Admiral.

McArthur Occupies Porac.

By Telegraph to Reflector.

Manila, Sept. 28.—McArthur captured Porac this morning after hour's fighting with insurgents. There were no casualties on the American side.

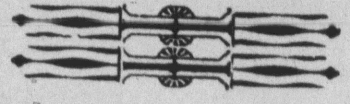

Straightening the Sidewalks.

The sidewalk in front of the stores of Patrick & Greene, J. A. Andrews, McG. Ernul, S. M. Schultz, J. C. Cobb & Son and the Bank of Greenville have been cut off in line with the others on that side of the block. It makes the street much better, and when all the sidewalks are laid in brick or cement the improvement will be even greater.

Watch the Fakir.

The Wallace show says no fakirs are along with it. Some may be following who are unknown to the circus management. If there are any and anybody allows himself to be swindled by them it is his own fault. Beware of the fakir if you see him. He is out after suckers and will try to pull you.

A More General Return to Simplicity in Funeral Ceremonies.

Among the outward and visible signs of progressive civilization one must note the change of tone in the arrangements attending a death in the family. This return to simplicity and Quaker quietness is a mark of good taste, of good sense and a step in the right direction. It shows consideration for the bereaved ones, and minimizes as much as possible the external demands made upon those who are sorely in need of quiet and peace.

Formerly all the details of pomp and circumstance were attended to with diligence, and dressmakers set up late at night to finish elaborate mourning costumes for those whose thoughts should have been elevated far above trivial questions of dress. It seems a mockery of the solemnity of death to be fussing about the dip of a trained skirt, or to be matching gimp and deciding momentous preference for crepe trimmings, and going of skirts, when the still form of the dear one lies speechless in the darkened room. In olden times when crepe was hung on the door bell it was churned incessantly by visitors demanding to see "some member of the family." This was obviously frowned as a kindness and mark of exceptional interest, although as a matter of fact it showed lack of true consideration for the sad family who were exhausted with grief and perhaps the strain of prolonged illness, and witnessing the progress of a downhill fight.

Peace and rest are doubly important for those who have suffered bereavement, at such a time. The few days intervening between a death and the funeral should be sacred from even kindly invasion. Messages, oral or written, can be left at the door, or offers of assistance can be made, but only the intimates should step across the portals in a house of mourning. Often now the funeral services and interment are private, thus leaving the family alone with their dead, and avoiding all publicity, which is hardest to bear at such a time. The older fashion of having the deceased exposed in a parlor to be viewed by the throngs who chose to enter is repugnant to persons of acute sensibility. It seems such a liberty to take with a fastidious individual, who in life would not have brooked such undesirable publicity. Quiet services and quiet funerals are a balm to the afflicted, unless their hearts are wedded to the "pompes funebres," as the French call it.

Therefore, intimations of "no flowers" should be carefully respected.—Ex.

Commissioner S. L. Patterson and John S. Cunningham, chairman of the Board of Agriculture, have called a meeting of the cotton growers of the State to meet in Raleigh on October 18, during the meeting of the State fair. The advantages for meeting at this place and time are reduced rates on all railroads and to see the fair which will be "better than ever before." As Col. Cunningham, we believe, is president of the fair, this looks like a little shop talk.—Tarboro Southerner.

No Longer the Plodding Merchant.

It is not unusual to find in the older books on commercial matters such expressions as "the slow-going storekeeper," "the laborious and plodding business man," etc. These terms can no longer be applied to the merchant. The up-to-date tradesman is not slow-going; he cannot afford to plod. True, he must be laborious. But the development of industry and trade in a great country like the United States requires that every ambitious merchant shall be alert, ingenious and energetic. In no lines of the tradesman's career are these qualities more needed than in his newspaper advertising, and when he puts them to persistent use in the columns of an excellent and popular journal they invariably render his business announcements a source of profit.—Philadelphia Record.

Teach Children to Read Aloud

A mother should take great pains to teach her children to read aloud acceptably. Much time and money are often expended in cultivating the voice for singing, and yet quite as much pleasure may be given by the person who reads aloud in a pleasing manner. No attempt need be made at elocution as the words are ordinarily understood; distinct utterance and proper emphasis so as to convey easily to the hearer the meaning of the sentences read are all that is necessary.—October Ladies Home Journal.

10 Cent Cotton.

A correspondent of the Charlotte Observer says he believes cotton will reach 10 cents by next May.

The following is what he says about it:

"Cotton will be 8 cents in January and 10 cents in May."

This statement startled all who heard and the man was called on for the proof.

He said: "Put together these things and it is plain:

"1. The cotton mills will use 11,000,000 bales.

"There are 2,000,000 bales of last year's crop now on hand, but of this 500,000 bales are bad cotton.

"There will be 9,000,000 bales (or at most 9,500,000) raised this year, making the supply only 11,000,000 bales of good cotton.

"4. A syndicate will buy and hold 2,000,000 of the best cotton, as it will cost only $70,000,000.

"5. The cotton mills cannot afford to stop, as they are making over 30 per cent. So they will see this, and hence will begin to buy a year's supply, which will put cotton at 8 cents by January.

"6. In May the mills, not supplied, will have to pay that syndicate 10 cents or shut down. They can make money even when cotton is 10 cents, and they will give it."

Will the mills squeezed by the syndicate be in the South, or in the North, or in Europe? I hope it will be Mr. Neill's friends and followers.

Showmen Who Are Courteous.

The Great Wallace Show is noted for nothing more than it is for its courteous treatment of patrons. Once they have paid their money and passed inside the mammoth stretch of canvas, they are regarded as guests, and are treated as such. All questions are politely answered, and parents can make the menagerie a good schooling for the children. Well informed attendants are constantly present to discuss the habits and natures of the many wild creatures which have been collected from all lands and seas of the globe. Everything possible is done to make the show both instructive and entertaining. At Greenville Friday Sept. 29.

The Mule.

Speaking of mules, how many men can call to mind an instance of a mule dying a natural death? They may die of starvation, if they find absolutely nothing to eat, but that is almost an impossibility. They may get choked to death under great provocation; they are sometimes killed by accident or design, and sometimes a stroke of lightning knocks one out, but to die a really natural death is against a mule's principles. They are not constructed that way.—Americus, Ga., Times-Recorder.
