The Boat Race.

By Telegraph to Reflector.
New York, Oct. 17.—The Shamrock crossed the line at 11:01:43 this morning, with the Columbia close behind in weather position.
11:27 A. M.—The Shamrock has just carried away her top mast, it was caused by her jumping a heavy sea, she is headed home. The judge's boat is gone after the Columbia.

The Meeting Closed.

The series of meetings at the Memorial Baptist church closed with last night's service. Owing to the fact that it occurred on an exceedingly busy time the attendance was not very large but the interest was kept up from the beginning to the close. Revivals are not to be estimated by the number of accessions but by the enlargement of life and Christian activity. It is too early to be sure about that, but we shall be disappointed unless we shall see these evidences of a revival.

Dry Salt Bath.

A dry salt bath is said to tone up the general system and renovate the complexion as if by magic.

"I never had anything to do me so much good," said a lady who has tried it. "I get that feeling of fatigue which oppresses me nearly every summer. My physician advised me to avoid tonics and to try dry salt baths instead.

"I fill a large earthen jar with the coarsest salt I can get, and add enough water to this to make a sort of thick paste but not enough to dissolve the mineral. Every morning when I get up I take this up in handfuls and rub it briskly over my body. Next I jump into a tub of clear, cold water, and take a thorough but quick dousing. This being done, I take a brisk rub down with a Turkish towel.

"The effect is delicious. It gives one a sense of exhilaration. But the best part of the dry salt bath is not the feeling of freshness and renewed life that it imparts, but the soft, satiny texture of the skin."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER, 17, 1899.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.
 WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 16, '99.

The Dewey fright of the McKinleyites is fast reaching an acute stage. It is no longer a secret that Senator Proctor is grooming Dewey for the Presidential nomination, next year, and a statement made to Vermont friends that "no man has ever yet refused to accept the Presidency", is significant of his belief that he can count upon Dewey's acceptance, if he can show him that he can be nominated. Said a prominent republican official: "Proctor's attitude must be highly enjoyable to Tom Reed, whom he betrayed in 1896. As a reward for betraying Reed at a time when McKinley's nomination was in doubt, Proctor has been given the disposition of more patronage under this administration, than any one man, excepting Hanna, of course, has had; and now he is showing his gratitude." Proctor's political shrewdness is unquestioned, and if the democrats can only carry Ohio, he will get all the assistance he wishes in booming Dewey for the republican nomination next year. Nothing short of overwhelming republican success in Ohio, can give Mr. McKinley a reasonable degree of certainty that he will be renominated, and that seems doubtful indeed, at this time. A Vermonter, who claims to know Senator Proctor's plans says he has no intention of bringing Dewey out as a candidate unless he is certain that he can be nominated, that he is only preparing things so that he can use him to supplant Mr. McKinley, if he thinks it advisable to do so.

Col. Isaac Hill, who has been an official of the House for many years, says of the Ohio campaign, in which he has been participating: "The democrats have the best chance they have had in years to carry this fall's election in the buckeye state. They will poll the full strength of the party and capture many votes besides, while the disaffection among the republicans will keep several thousand of them from the polls. The McLean forces are thoroughly united, and are making the greatest canvass ever conducted by the democrats in Ohio. I am going back in a few days to again take a hand in the campaign."

Admiral Schley's response to a committee from the Woman's National Industrial League, which called on him to present a copy of a resolution adopted by the League, asking contributions from Industrial workers to purchase a home for him was worthy of the man and his record. He said: "While I feel deeply touched by the desire of your committee, which the resolution brings to my attention, and sincerely appreciate the purpose and wishes you so kindly suggest to me, I feel that I ought to ask you to defer this matter until the wants and needs of a cold winter now coming on, have passed, and its demands in the households of some of the great army of industrial workers have first been met before any provisions is made for me. With expressions of deep gratitude to you, the matter is left to your considerations."

Representative-elect Roberts of Utah, now in the East says the fight against him is largely political and that he intends to stand up for his rights all the way through. He says he was elected as a democrat, not as a Mormon; that prominent Mormons were on the stump against him, and that he carried a number of non-Mormon voting districts. He denies that he came East to avoid a warrant issued for him in Utah; also that he has ever violated the anti-polygamy law. He expresses confidence that he will serve his full term in the House. The fight against Mr. Roberts promises to be one of the bitterest ever made against any man's retention of his seat in either branch of Congress.

There is no limit to the claims that republicans are willing to make for the administration, but there is a limit to the imposition that can be practiced upon intelligent men. It is simply ridiculous for the administration to claim credit, as it is now doing, for the acceptance by Canada of the temporary boundary line between Alaska and Canada, which was sometime ago agreed upon by representatives of the U. S. and England, when it is well known that the Canadian government was compelled to accept by the English Government. It is equally well known why. England has a troublesome war on hand with the Transvaal republic, in which it wishes the moral support of the U. S. government, and as a sort of bribe, it ordered Canada to accept the temporary boundary line, which the Canadian Premier had declared he would fight rather than accept. Certainly there is nothing in that to entitle the administration to any credit. While the acceptance of the temporary boundary line is advantageous to Americans, it is after all merely a postponement of the dispute to some future time, when England has no war on its hands.

The administration has announced a strict neutrality in the war in South Africa; and it would better live up to that announcement, as there is a powerful sentiment in this country, especially among those of Irish and German descent against the attitude of England in that war, and those who entertain that sentiment, will quickly resent any departure from neutrality by this government.

Separate Towels For Children.

Two or more children should not be permitted to use the same towel. Each child should have a separate one and be taught to regard it as personal property. Towels may be bought with initials woven in them, which makes it easy for the owner to distinguish his own. Diseases of the eye and skin are easily communicated by the indiscriminate use of the same towel by different persons. If carelessness in this matter be inculcated in childhood, it may save much suffering. —Ladies' Home Journal.

The carrier pigeon was in use by the state department of the Ottoman empire as early as the fourteenth century.

Figures Don't Lie.

Brown—You only 59! That's a good one!
 White—My daughter says she is only 20, and she was born two years after I was married, and I was married at 22. Figure it out for yourself.—Boston Transcript.

He Thought He Had 'Em.
 "Once I thought I had 'em sure," said the old express clerk. "I didn't drink very often, but when I did I generally did it well. I had been out with the boys one night and the next night and then for a day or two, and when I went back to work I was pretty nervous. I worked at a high desk and was plugging along when what should come and stop right in front of me but a big green spider with red eyes. We stared at one another for a moment, and I turned cold. Then came a big black bug and a green one, and soon my desk was covered with an assortment of the most curious looking bugs and spiders I ever saw. There were things with long hind legs and short front legs and vice versa. There were bugs with horns and all sorts of things. I broke out in a cold sweat. I thought I had 'em that time. "John," said the boss behind me, 'there's a box up there addressed to the Smithsonian institution at Washington. It came from New Mexico, and—great Scott, it's burst, and the bugs are all getting out!"
 "Say, I never felt better in my life than I did that minute. It took us all day to round up those bugs and get them back into the box. Some of them were so ugly that we were all sure they were poison biters. But I was mighty glad I didn't have those kind of bugs in my mind."—Kansas City Star.

The Powder Puff in Cuba.

The Cuban woman, young or old, considers a powder puff a more indispensable adjunct to her toilet than mere soap and water—a primal necessity to her attractiveness which it is her religious duty to foster and preserve.

Thus all classes and conditions are wedded to the powder puff, from the grand dame of fashion to the neglected little orphan in the asylum; from the crumpled visaged octogenarian to the rosy cheeked child of half a dozen summers. Go into any Cuban school and you will find teachers and pupils alike unsparingly garnished, a powder box and the rag or bit of chamois with which to apply it in every desk and tucked alongside the chalk on the blackboards.

In shops where female clerks are employed and in the big tobacco factories where 200 or 300 girls are at work rolling cigarettes the same is true.

Visit La Corona, the largest tobacco factory in Havana. Ten o'clock is the breakfast hour of the employees, and when the hands of the clock point to a quarter of 10 every girl stops work and reaches for her powder box. In the opinion of them all, that intervening 15 minutes was needed in which to assume the ghastly mask of powder, in order to make themselves presentable before going on the streets.—Exchange.

An Absentminded Man.

There have been a great many stories about absentminded men, where one forgets his house address, another what business he is in and where another has to refer to the mark on his handkerchief before he can remember his own name. There is a farmer named Rogers in the north, who possessed a Jersey cow, which he used to drive morning and evening to and from the pasture, not far from his home. One morning, as one of his neighbors was passing along the road, he met Mr. Rogers walking in the middle of the lane, his mind apparently engrossed with some weighty question. The neighbor called out:

"Good morning, Mr. Rogers. Where are you going?"
 "Why," said Mr. Rogers, in a surprised way, "I'm driving the cow to pasture." And he waved his hand toward where the cow ought to have been.

"Well, where's the cow?" asked his friend.
 "I suppose I forgot to let her out of the barn," answered Mr. Rogers humbly as he realized his position. And he had.—Columbian.

In Mexico everything and everybody pays a direct tax, from the street porter to the largest mercantile establishment, and the stamp tax for documents is equally lucrative.

The war with the Transvaal will probably be the bloodiest Great Britain has fought since the Crimea, says the Charlotte Observer. The sturdy Burghers of the Orange Free State and Natal will doubtless cast their fortunes with those of the Transvaal, swelling the grand army of the Boers to perhaps 50,000 men, all told. Before the war is ended England will probably have landed 70,000 well-trained Red Coats in South Africa. The war will be more like real fighting than the recent contest in Cuba between the United States and Spain, and it will perhaps be more prolonged, though it will, nevertheless, be short, as all modern wars must be hereafter, because of the swiftness in destruction of modern instruments of warfare. * * * The chances are, however, then the Transvaal will be obliterated from the map by a high tide of blood.
