THE CONFLICT OF FORCES.

Synopsis of Sermon Delivered in the Baptist Church Sunday Morning by Rev. J. N. Booth.

TEXT EXODUS 5:21.

The story of Israel's enslavement in Egypt is familiar to all Bible readers. It is from the account of Moses' appearance as their liberator that our text is selected. This was the darkest hour in their night of toil, for bad as their condition had been before, the entrance of Moses as a new element in the political forces intensified their sufferings, till they were filled with complaint against him.

In this all we find a suggestion, viz: the inevitable result of the conflict of forces. If anything could be subjected to but one force, or if any section could be under but one power there would be no conflict, but the moment an antagonistic force is introduced the conditions are changed.

As we look out about us we see struggle between contending forces. There is light and darkness, heat and cold, and motion and inertia. There is knowledge against ignorance, order against chaos, these reina ceaseless war, endless conflict. Life itself is said to be the some of the forces that resist death. Motion is the excess of energy which over comes inertia. Growth is the excess of assimilation over the waste, caused by decay. Advancement in knowledge is the accumulation of facts and principles retained over and above the many which leak out of the mind through the aperture of forgetfulness. Civilization is the triumph of order over chaos.

In the spiritual world the conflict is more marked because the forces are more antagonistic. Here it is right against wrong, good against evil, a Moses vs. a Pharaoh. Right cannot be partly wrong, nor good mixed with evil.

When antagonistic forces are brought in contact struggle is the inevitable result. I stood on the upper eastern veranda of the D. & D. Institute at Morganton one morning to watch the beauties of the sunrise in the mountains. When I took my stand that clear December morning, all nature seemed asleep wrapped in its shroud of darkness. Directly there appeared a red glow behind the mountains to the east of me like a city burning in the distance. Higher and higher shot the rays of light, and brighter and brighter became the glow in the east. Forms before invisible began to take shape. Old Grand-Father mountain began in dim outlines to make his presence recognized as he lay in quiet grandeur to my left. Huge clouds of black darkness hung on the west of every peak like belated monsters loath to seek their lairs, and yielded only as the king of day ascended his throne step by step. In the struggle that went on between light and darkness, I stood forgetful of the chilliness of the wind till the sun high above the mountains looked down into the valleys to see if any darkness still lurked in them, and behold it had all fled, but not without resistance. I saw a new evidence that language is philosophic—that it is not without reason that that border land which marks the division between night and day is called the "break of day." This thing is broken by struggle and day is broken by the struggle between light and darkness.

Just now in the conflict going on in far away China we see an illustration of this truth. It is the result of the contact of forces. China, the oldest of the nations, is most ignorant and idolatrous. Her institutions date back near the sunrise of the centuries. Her spirit is conservative, and her outlook retrospective. She faces to the rear and sees nothing but what is past and within her own territory. To her history is but the recounting of her own deeds. Her education is not stimulative of thought but the mere memorizing the thoughts of thinkers long ago dead who might well be forgotten.

If she could continue shut up within her great walls and live secluded from all other people as she has done through the long ages past she might have quiet, but providence has decided otherwise.

In the march of time she has confronted other powers. She has come upon other conditions. She has encountered new problems. She is being aroused by the alarm clock in the temple of time set for her awakening and her waking hours are full of agitation.

The tide of truth has flowed against the shores of the continent of her ignorance and its waves are beaten into a foam of confusion. Commerce in its world wide audacity has knocked at her doors and statted her into a frenzy of astonishment. Learning with its triumphs over ignorance has invaded her halls and aroused the jealousy of her hypocritical literati. Christianity with its precepts, its spirit of freedom and equality, its condemnation of sin and its inculcation of virtue and righteousness has met and is disputing with her idolatry and empty pomp and senseless forms and nothing but conflict and struggle could be the result.

The Boxer uprising is, we trust, the last organized effort of darkness against the rushing flood of light. It is the final convulsive quiver of the dying institution of error.

Shall we lay the blame of this struggle at the door of trade? or shall we charge it to the account of the advancement of intelligence? or again, shall the self forgetful and self sacrificing missionary be held responsible? All of these may be the occasion, but neither is the cause, nor are they when combined. The cause must be sought in the universal and inevitable result of the contact of antagonistic forces. Visit some African jungle infested with lions. Observe a number of them lying lazily in the shade of the deep angled wildness of the luxuriant growth, they seem peaceable enough when seen thus alone. Introduce among them a flock of sheep and note the difference. They roar and show their teeth now. Shall we say the sheep in their peacefulness is the cause of this fury? They are the occasion but not the cause and so it is in China.

The presence of progress, intelligence, and Christianity are the occasion; but by no means the cause of the present conflict.

And this struggle should quick-

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1900.

When a man loves sin he goes down; when he loves his wife he goes home; when he loves another man's wife he goes to the graveyard; when he loves a girl they both go crazy.—Orange Va. Observer.

There is more in a North Carolina rabbit now than his left hind foot and skin. Not many years ago he was killed for his skin, immense numbers of which were shipped, but now there is a demand for the flesh in northern markets and thousands are shipped annually, the shipments from some towns amounting to 300 or 400 a day.—Wilmington Star.

Yellow journalism has even got into the pulpit. A Milwaukee reporter was allowed to occupy a local pulpit to reply to a sermon on newspapers by the pastor. He thus defined the duties of a newspaper: "To print just enough goodness, badness, religion, atheism, spirituality and pugilism to keep the reader interested, and to sell the paper." Something like a doctor's prescription calling for six ingredients and substituting "just enough" for the quantity of each.

A Georgia legislator has introduced a bill to amend the State constitution so that the children of men who fail to pay their poll taxes after January 1903 will be barred from the public schools. This means simply and, of course, to punish the children of the delinquent tax payers for their parents. Fortunately it requires two-thirds vote of both houses, a majority vote to adopt an amendment to the constitution, and this one will never be adopted, because it ought not to be.—News and Observer.

Horse With Hydrophobia.

Mr. W. W. King, who resides on Queen street, in the southern section of the city, lost a good horse yesterday with a disease which he is very certain was hydrophobia. Mr. King sent one of his sons to feed the horse Thursday morning as usual and when the young man entered the stall he was attacked viciously by the animal and escaped only with difficulty. Even when young Mr. King had withdrawn from the stall the horse made desperate efforts to get at him through the cracks, and at length, failing in this, he began biting himself viciously about the legs. Mr. King came up later and was forced to shoot the horse. He is unable to account for the strange actions of the animal unless he was bitten some time ago by a dog belonging to him which was supposed to have had rabies.—Wilmington Star.

Aguinaldo's Death.

Washington, November 23—The Manila papers of October 18th devote considerable space to a renewal of the report concerning Aguinaldo's death in Northern Luzon. They say that the circumstantial character of this report, together with the fact that General Trias recently has been signing himself "commander in chief" of the insurgent forces, lends strong color to the belief that Aguinaldo may be dead. The latest account in this line comes from Nueva Ecija, in Northern Luzon, where, in an outpost skirmish, Aguinaldo's horse was killed, and his saddlebags, with a number of personal papers, were captured. Aguinaldo was shot from his horse and severely wounded. He was carried by followers into the jungle, and subsequently was reported to be ill with fever. His body afterward was carried down the river on a raft, slung in a hammock and completely covered with palm leaves; but the natives who saw the passage of the raft were uncertain whether he was alive or dead. This together with the claims of Trias and others insurgent generals to the chief command of the army, leads the local Manila papers to give considerable credence to the story.

Southern's New Purchase.

Louisville, Ky., November 22—The Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis railroad, commonly called the Air Line, was bought at public sale to day by the Southern railway at Huntington, Ind., for $4,030,000.

Judge Wood, of the United States Court, is expected to confirm the sale at Indianapolis tomorrow, but the Southern railway will not assume control until January 1st.

The only bidders were Francis L. Stetson and Victor Morawetz, of New York, representing the banking firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Company, and the Southern railway. To pay for the road the purchasers will immediately issue $10,000,000 of Southern Railway Air Line division bonds at 4 per cent. In securing the Air Line, the Southern railway gains an entrance to St. Louis, thereby placing it on an equal footing with the Baltimore and Ohio, Louisville and Nashville, and other roads entering Louisville and the South having terminals at St. Louis. In addition to this, new and valuable territory is opened up to the Southern railway in both Indiana and Illinois.

Stormy.

There were heavy rains both Saturday and Sunday nights. At the latter time there were thunder and lightning and wind. Awnings and fences around town suffered by the wind.

House Robbed.

Mr. Heber Jackson lives near Winterville. Sunday night he and his wife attended church in the village. Upon returning home Mrs. Jackson missed her trunk and an investigation developed that a window had been broken open and someone had been in the house. Mr. Jackson came to Greenville after Mr. W. C. Hines and his bloodhounds, and they got back to his home about 11 o'clock. It had begun to rain when they got there but the dogs struck a trail at once from the window. They followed the trail out into the field and found the trunk where it had been broken open and contents thrown out as if the thief had been hunting for money. By this time the storm came up and was so severe that the hunt had to be abandoned.

Next year promises to be a prosperous one for the manufacturers of teething rings, paregoric and such like "infant industries."

YOU

Can't afford to buy shoes that hurt you, for you spend two-thirds of your life in them. No shoes, no matter at what price, can fit more comfortably, more naturally, more gracefully, more perfectly than the shoe for women. The natural woman's foot is the "QUEEN QUALITY" LAST. That is the reason these shoes NEED NO "BREAKING IN". They feel as comfortable as a stocking from the moment your feet enters them.

G. M. Tucker left today for Norfolk.

F. Ward went to Roanoke Rapids today.

J. J. Stroud went down to Ayden Saturday evening.

J. L. Grimmer, of Pactolous came in Saturday evening.

J. M. Moore spent Sunday with his parents and returned to Parmele this morning.

en rather than retard our efforts for the moral redemption of that land. We must remember that this opposition arises not from the ones influenced by the missionaries. These along with the missionaries have been the ones to suffer, and have given the world a new proof that the spirit of martyrdom still lives.

This opposition comes from the priests and pretended scolars who see that their influence is endangered; and to relax effort now, is to fail in the final charge and in the sight of victory. This struggle means that in the near future the day of gospel light is to break, is now breaking, in the heathen darkness of ancient China.
