In Local Papers.

There is a constantly increasing sentiment among business men that the only legitimate advertising medium through which to reach the buying public is found in the local papers. It is a fact undisputed by the larger retail establishments of any city that such is the case, and the matter of judicious advertising in local papers is receiving more favorable consideration as each year goes by. Indeed with practically all the leading dry goods houses in the country, the subject of local advertising has become so important that it is classed as a separate department, and is given over to the care of one employee, who makes it his especial work to study the best means of producing effective advertising in the local newspapers which circulate in the territory from which the business must draw its patronage. Take all the leading merchants in the great trade centres of the country, and where you find an up-to-date advertised business among them you will find the most successful and prosperous business. The old method of using programmes, score cards, time cards, clocks in depots, street cars and the like is being rapidly discarded in favor of the more modern and practical newspaper advertising. It has taken a long time for some people to be educated to the fact that in order to reach the buying public it is not necessary to be held up and compelled, as it were, to have their advertisements printed into every fake scheme that presents itself. The days of fake advertising are pretty nearly numbered, as all such schemes usually turn out in about the same way.—Iowa City Republican.

Ex-Senator Matt W. Ransom has accepted an invitation from the Daughters of the Confederacy in Greensboro to make the address that city on Memorial day, May 10th.

At Fort Worth, Tex., two North Carolinians are charged with attempting to kidnap a man wanted in this State for murder.

An Unfair Law.

The Legislature of 1879 proposed an amendment to the constitution providing that only indigent persons should be treated free of cost at the insane asylums (or State Hospitals as they are now called), all persons who are able being required to pay for treatment. This amendment was adopted by the people at the general election in 1880 but it has since ignored and few people knew that such was the condition of affairs until the Supreme Court a few days ago decided the matter. It will be difficult to enforce this provision of the constitution and do justice. In the first place it will be difficult to say who is or who is not able to pay for treatment. Those who wish to take advantage of free treatment can do so by professing not to be able to pay, whether they are or not. But there are others who are not really able to pay but whose pride will force them to rather than allow themselves to be considered paupers. Then the man who is able to pay and admits that he is can truthfully say that he contributes largely, by taxes, to the support of these institutions and that it is unjust to make him pay—and it is. So the new provision, while it may save the public a little money, is very unjust and unfair, and if it can be changed it ought to be.—Statesville Landmark.

The Ideal Education.

A true conception by American fathers and mothers of the vital importance of home education would constitute the golden bridge to untie the forces that contend for religious and material development in our civilization and make America the first nation in the domain of higher thought as well in rank among the military, naval and commercial powers of the world.

The education of a child is a combined result of parental ideals, of patient study, and laying on of mental colors by those ordained to finish the work, while the atmosphere and prospective are supplied by the community.—Wilson News.

Attention is called to the registration notices in the several wards of the town.

Ignorance Must Hereafter Be A Disgrace.

The liberal appropriations made by the Legislature for educational purposes in North Carolina places an education within the reach of every boy and girl in the State.

There may be parents indifferent to the advantages of an education for their children, but with the provisions now made in the way of offering every opportunity for children to go to school, and with the pressure of the constitutional amendment, with loss of franchise for illiteracy, even the indifferent parent can hardly now offer much opposition to the educational movement now filling the State.

But with all these appropriations for providing educational opportunities for every boy and girl from the elementary school education, to the highest collegiate education, there is required the best efforts of every friend of education to keep the educational enthusiasm continually aroused, and this cannot better be done than by seeing that only competent teachers are selected to fill positions in every school and college.

Even in the county school of a few months, the teachers cannot be chosen with too much care, for the teacher's influence is not for the day or week, only, but is felt long afterwards, and it is the teacher's influence on the youth, which can inspire the young mind to reach after and seek education, and be aroused to the disgrace which ignorance attaches to every person.

With education within the reach of every boy and girl in North Carolina, there should be no hesitancy in continually calling attention to the shame which attaches to illiteracy, and that the acceptance of ignorance by any parent for his or her children is a mark of shame for the child's future, one which must ever disgrace and drag down the child whose education is neglected.

The friends of education cannot be too watchful or alert to push forward the cause of education by every means with their power.

The provision is made, but there is much work yet to be done.—New Bern Journal.

The census of manufactures soon to be made public will make an even better showing for the South than the mere figures, of population. While this section has increased in population to a very gratifying extent, it has increased much faster in wealth, and the growth of its manufacturing interests has been phenomenal. Most of the cotton mills have been erected in the past ten years, and furniture manufacturing has been almost entirely a matter of the past six years. North Carolina ought to make a fine showing in the census of manufactures and industries. She is already called the "Massachusetts of the South" and deserves the title.—Raleigh Times.

FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1901.

Peter McCann, a farm hand near Carbondale, Pa., had a busy day last week. He stole $90 from his employer, ran away, got caught, put in jail and committed suicide, all in the same day. He couldn't repeat that performance again to save his life.—Wilmington Star.

Within the past twenty-five years Andrew Carnegie has given to libraries and other public objects $30,451,552, not including the $25,000,000 to be devoted to the technological institute he will build at Pittsburg. His fortune is $300,000,000 and annual income $15,000,000.—Wilmington Star.

An incident in the life of the Rev. Augustus Latham, that occurred only two weeks ago is worth relating here. On his way to the Short Lumber Company's mill, where he has been employed for some time as book-keeper, he met a gentleman who expressed the wish to be baptized, but remarked, he feared he would never have the opportunity. Mr. Latham replied now is the time, and taking him by the hand led him in the river near by and administered to him the rite of baptism.—Washington Messenger.

The position which the Pierpont Morgan organization holds with reference to the business and political world is discussed by Mr. John Brisden Walker in the April Cosmopolitan under the title, "The World's Greatest Revolution." Familiar with the business world and a student of affairs, Mr. Walker has, while approving of the general idea of concentration which makes for good organization and public economy, drawn a picture of the power now exercised which will be a surprise to the great majority who have not given this subject thoughtful attention.

Out of $34,932,644 contributed in 1900 by charitable persons in the United States to educational institutions only a little more than $1,000,000 was given to Southern schools and colleges. This amount includes donations for institutions intended for the exclusive instruction of both whites and blacks, and but a small part of it came from the hands of Northern givers. When the great need of the Southern people for adequate home opportunity of instruction is taken into consideration it seems a pity that so little of this opulent stream of gifts and bequests should find its way over Mason and Dixon's line.—Philadelphia Record.

It's the weakly man who often carries the heaviest life insurance.

Scientific men have long been engaged in the study of methods of utilizing waste products, such as sewage, garbage and many other things, formerly thrown away as worthless. After it is ascertained just what these materials contain that can be utilized, ingenious men set their wits to work to invent machinery and devise processes by which the valuable commodities may be extracted. In this way many million dollars worth of oils, fertilizers and other useful substances are now saved and the world is so much the richer.

A great deal of sawdust has always gone to waste, though many mills have used it to supplement their fuel supply. Chemical analysts have been at work on the sawdust problem and it has been shown clearly that it contains very useful elements that are worth saving and now machinery has been invented to extract these materials.

The experiments have proven that 1,000 pounds of sawdust will yield about 160 pounds of char which is practically the same as charcoal and equally serviceable; 180 pounds of acids, 160 pounds of tar and a quantity of gases that have been tested for heating and illuminating and found to be excellent for both purposes. While the acids, tar and char are the products particularly desired, it is said the gases are of commercial value.

A machine has been invented in Montreal for the purpose of distilling sawdust and obtaining the desired products. Consul General Bittinger writes that the machine treats about 2,000 pounds of wet sawdust an hour. As Canada manufactures enormous quantities of lumber it is expected that the utilization of sawdust in that country will be an important source of valuable commodities.

There are twenty places in Europe where oxalic acid is extracted from sawdust. In Scotland sawdust is used to make floorcloth, coarse wrapping paper and mill-board which is a kind of paste-board used by bookmakers in the covers of books. Thus sawdust, once thought to be a good deal of a nuisance, is beginning to be considered quite a useful article.—New York Sun.

Referring to the recent robbery of the mails in the Goldsboro post-office, by a young colored attache, we renew the point that it is a great unkindness to immature members of the colored race, the great mass of whom grow up without proper moral training, to set temptation before them by placing them in positions where they have ready access to money and other valuables. Not all young white men who have been reared in the best moral atmosphere resist temptation. What, then, can be expected of an untrained negro youth? Upon proper reflection one must pity while censuring the negro who falls, under such circumstances, and look beyond him to the person who gave him the opportunity for theft as the person responsible, along with him, for his wrongdoing.—Charlotte Observer.

The New Revenue Act.

It is estimated that the revenue act just passed by the General Assembly will produce $1,700,000. This will cover the entire expense of the State government, including interest on the debt, the appropriations made for the educational, charitable and penal institutions, and those made for other purposes. The Legislature is to be congratulated for the successful solution of what, at first, seemed an almost impossible undertaking—that is, the raising of the amount made necessary by the pledges of the party in power for increased appropriations for education and for charitable institutions.—Fayetteville Observer.

Freaks Of Nature.

When it comes to freaks, Guilford county always comes in for her share of the glory.

A farmer living about three miles south of town has a healthy, full developed, two weeks' old calf whose body is covered with a luxuriant growth of black wool. In other words, having wool where hair ought to be. The owner of this calf wants it distinctly understood that this calf's mother does not give goat's milk and as might be supposed by some folks.

Guilford county has another farmer who owns a two-headed goat, each head having a ravenous appetite—eating all those things that goats relish such as tin cans, barbed wire, etc.—Greensboro Record.
