THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

What it Accomplished and the Results to Follow.

GREENVILLE, N. C. Aug. 9.

EDITOR REFLECTOR.

At your request I will write briefly in reference to the late County Institute held at Winterville. You have had so many good things said about it that I think it better for me to write principally in reference to what ought to follow it.

I must say, however, that I heartily agree with those who have written in what they have said. I was much pleased with the work of the instructors with the application and progress of the teachers, and with the entertainment furnished us by the people of Winterville. I am satisfied that we made no mistake in holding the Institute in the manner it was held, and at the place we did.

Another thing which has pleased me even as much as the success of the Institute is the favor with which the work has been received by all of our people. Without this favor the results could not have been what I now hope to see them. The teachers have been much improved and I believe have received some inspiration for their work which will lead to much better efforts than heretofore. This may be without results, however, if the people are not led to be more in harmony with the workers. I honestly believe that frequently committees themselves are the greatest hindrances to the work of the public schools among them. I wish it were possible to hold at least one week institute now for the committeemen and the people and have them present as we had the teachers. The results of this would not be less effective towards advancing the school interests than the institute held for the teachers. We cannot now afford to hinder the teachers in the progress and improvement which I trust they will endeavor to make during the coming session of the schools.

I call upon the committeemen and parents of this county to see to it that they do nothing to block or hinder what we propose to do along educational lines. I cordially invite you all to aid us, but if you will not do this, please hold hands off and let us go forward.

I desire to say a word or two in reference to a suggestion made in THE REFLECTOR by Prof. Lineberry and which brought forth the offer from you that it might be put into practical operation. The suggestion referred to is that there be an educational column in your paper open to the teachers and friends of education. I am heartily in sympathy with the suggestion, except that this column shall be under my control. We ought not to wait upon this matter. I wish we could begin next week with this column. I suggest now that the teachers and friends of education in the county begin at once to write for this column. Don't make your communications too long. Let them be to the point. There has been some enthusiasm begun for progress in the public schools in this county. It ought to be kept up. I don't know a better way to do this than by the proper use of this educational col-

I suggest that all be careful what they write. Don't let it be a column filled with complaints and accusations calculated to do harm, rather than good. Its purpose will be to aid, not to hinder, the cause. In the educational revival which seems to be about to come in this county let all of us take a part, and I trust and believe that our work will not be in vain.

TOWN MATTERS.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen held an adjourned meeting Thursday afternoon, all the members present.

W. H. Ragsdale, County Superintendent of Education, presented a demand from the Board of Education for the fines imposed by the town between Nov. 28th, 1901 and July 1st, 1901. Consideration of this was deferred to the next regular meeting of the Aldermen.

The Market Committee made an unfavorable report on the petitions of J. C. Taylor & Co., and W. W. Thomas to conduct market business outside of the market house.

License to conduct restaurants were granted to Ainsley Dudley, W. B. James, and B. F. Jolley.

License to run a pool table granted to W. C. Dudley.

Permission was granted Henry T. King to erect a pole on Evans street to display weather signals.

The Street Committee was instructed to use its judgment in the matter of putting a railroad side track on Eleventh street.

The Street Committee was instructed to provide 35 cheap caps and belts for the Hook and Ladder Company.

The meeting adjourned to next Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Fine Sale.

Talk about fine sales, the Greenville Warehouse had one today. About 40,000 pounds were on the floor and prices struck away up to $30 and $35. The crowd would shout when piles were knocked down at these high prices. Evans, Moorman & Co. are hustlers and do their best for all who sell with them.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1901.

The Republicans of Iowa have just held their convention and named their ticket, headed by A. B. Cummings for Governor. The platform endorses McKinley and his administration and congratulates the people of the country upon the "enjoyment of a state of prosperity that blesses every class and community." Surely the delegates must not have been reading the papers or heard of the great strike now in progress in almost every section of the country, else it looks like they would have been more careful in putting themselves on record with such congratulations. But these are times when platforms are more for sound than anything else.

Sowing And Reaping.

"Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," was the text from which a Philadelphia preacher preached a sermon the other day on the political corruption in that city. "We are reaping today in Philadelphia and in Pennsylvania," said he, "precisely what we have sown. We have sown base, conscienceless legislators. We have sown public thieves for civil rulers. We have sown a narrow gospel which has ignored the responsibility of Christians to the institutions of society, and we are now reaping laws which encourage dishonesty and protect crime, public officers that blackmail reputable citizens and denounce and seek to destroy the character of honest men; thieves in high places that are robbing the people of their franchises and of their money in the public treasuries. We are reaping the subversion of Republican government and the institution upon its ruins of an oligarchy whose audacity and whose utter disregard of the interests of the people and whose contempt of public opinion are simply appalling."

That is good preaching. There is a natural law in the political world and its penalties are sure, if it be violated. If the people put corrupt men in office they will get corrupt government. If the decent people are indifferent and let the thugs run the politics, they may expect the kind of government that things believe in. Men do not gather fig or thistles.

Attorney General Gilmer decides in the case of Hendersonville that the county board of education cannot compromise with town authorities and remit three years' fines due the public schools.

It takes more than paint to make an artist.

Senator Tillman's plain talk and the applause that followed at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on lynchings, will of course greatly disturb the sentimentalities in the north who are always bewailing the punishing of negro brutes for raping virtuous, unprotected white women and children, but who never have a word of sympathy for the victims of brutality. The Wisconsin people have no sympathy, we may suppose, for cruel outrages upon unprotected women of the white race. The people in other states may be less sympathetic with outraged women and may be horrified that Wisconsin should applaud a southern man when he spoke out for lynching scoundrels and devils. We like the following we find in the Washington Post, that some times has a manly way of digging right down to "the marrow" of a question. It says:

"Human nature is the same everywhere. In this country especially there is an enlightened regard for woman and a desire to shield her from all harm. Despite the occasional episodes of the divorce court, the sacredness of the marriage tie is a national characteristic and love for family is universal. Upon the broad platform of esteem for women the people of Wisconsin and South Carolina stand shoulder to shoulder. Senator Tillman, therefore, appealed to every chivalrous instinct when he asserted that the summary execution of negroes who assault white women obviated the appearance of the latter in a public court to testify to their degradation in the presence of a mixed throng. This argument could be easily understood."

It is a fixed determination among the white men in the south that bad and wrong as lynching may be in the abstract, the homes of the whites must be safe and sacred, and the persons of mother, wife, sister, daughter must never be touched by the villain of any hue of tribe or nation. The necessity of lynching may override all convictions of the impropriety of violating law. But the courts now are not to be trusted and the delays are unbearable. The Post condemns and yet it candidly and forcefully says:

"At the same time, how is Senator Tillman's argument to be answered? Shall the unhappy victim of a brutal assault give her evidence in secret? If there is to be any trial at all, the forms of law must be observed. The grand jury must listen to the revolting details, and when an indictment has been found the woman must repeat the story of her shame. There must be examinations and cross examinations, exceptions and appeals, and all the other trickeries and resources of legal method. Anything less than this would be a mistrial and a farce and would be more to be regretted than no trial at all."

Lost Money And Ticket.

One of the excursionists who went to Farmville Sunday had an experience that is amusing to all save himself.

Farmville is not a wide open town, but this excursionist was dry so he gently inquired of a man if he could obtain for him something to drink. The man said he could. So the visitor pulled out a bill and passed it over and the man was about to start off, when, as if it had just occurred to him, said, "I can't get it for you no way, unless you came on the excursion." The Tarboro man said that he did; but the man said that he could not convince the surreptitious vender of the ardent without the ticket as proof.

Unsuspectingly the ticket was also passed then the obliging man passed out of sight, and thus far has not been heard of.—Tarboro Southerner.

He Talks for Winterville.

"Kindly give me a first class ticket to Winterville, N. C." spoke a gentleman as he approached the ticket window at the depot, Thursday evening, putting emphasis on the N. C. And when everybody in hearing turned and looked at 'Bud Joe' he almost blushed, but says it is a force of habit with him to talk about a good thing.

PICKING SHOT.

Watermelons Cause Another Downfall.
"Look not upon the meat when its red" is not a scriptural quotation, but if one darkey had not displayed too much fondness for red meat watermelons he might not have had so many shot under his hide.
Mr. R. A. Tyson has a melon patch a little above town. Not a great way from that patch is a saw mill. Mr. Tyson had been missing some of his choicest melons, and Thursday night a shot gun went out to see if the cause could be ascertained. There was not long to wait before a dark form was seen creeping along, his fingers going thump, thump, on the sleeping melons. The shot gun lifted up its voice and spoke, there was a yell and a swift flying figure disappeared in the darkness. The night watchman of the saw mill was not found at his post this morning, and rumor says he is home having shot picked out of him.
