A LIST PREPARED BY REQUEST.

Some weeks ago a lady in eastern Carolina wrote to the writer asking him to print in The Messenger a list of books suitable for girls of fourteen or fifteen, we think it was, for we mislaid the letter soon after receiving it and have not been able to find it. Most fairly intelligent people can make out a list of books for girls of from thirteen to fifteen, and all will differ. With some hesitancy we submit a list that can be read by girls of good minds. We have a neighbor of this kind, a Miss of but thirteen, and she reads and hugely enjoys Scott, Dickens and George Eliot. But she is sprightly and a book lover. The list could be largely extended. We submit the following books.

"Tales of a grandfather," by Scott; "Scottish Chiefs," by Miss Porter; "Thaddeus of Warsaw," "Child's History of England," by Dickens; "The Story of the Greeks," by Gueber; North Carolina History Stories," by W. C. Allen; "Uncle Remus;" Mocre's (revised) "Children's History of North Carolina;" Scott's novels and poems; Macaulay's poetry and essays; Green's one volume "History of the English People;" McCarthy's "History of Our Own Times;" "Book of Golden Deeds," by Miss Young; Kipling's Jungle Books; Five Hildegrade Books, by Laura Richards; "Curious Myths of the Middle Ages," by Baring Gould; "Annals of a Quiet Neighborhood," by George Macdonald; "Silas Marner," by George Elliot; "Cranford," by Mrs. Gaskell, "Lamb's Tales of Shakespeare;" "Lectures on English History," by Henry Reed; "At the Back of the North Wind," Macdonald; "Micah Clark," by Canon Doyle; "Polly Oliver's Problem," by Kate Wiggin; "Agnes Hopetown's Schools and Holidays," by Mrs. Oliphant; Novels by Dickens; Comedies and Historic plays by Shakespeare, to be selected; "In the Clouds," Craddock; "John Halifax, Gentleman," Muloch; "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," Besant; "What Will He do With it?" Bulwer; "Mill on the Floss," Elliot; "Twice Told Tales," Hawthorne; "Westward, Ho!" by Kingsley. If we would take time to think over the whole field we could double the list given, but enough and more are named.—Wilmington Messenger.

Arrest of a Suspect.

Weldon, N. C., Aug. 21.—A negro giving his name as William Eaton, was arrested here last night on suspicion of being the man wanted in Pitt county for an assault upon a lady in that county. Eaton says he is not the man wanted, but admits having been in Pitt county, and that he was present when a companion of his offered an insult to a lady. The authorities have been notified of the arrest. Eaton says he is willing to face the lady, and asserts that the man wanted is a much smaller man than he is and that he is satisfied that the lady will say he is not the man when he is taken before her.

[The above is news down this way. Nobody seems to know anything about such an assault in Pitt county.—REFLECTOR.]

Beginning of the Air Brake.

Incidents of a trifling character have influenced the career of many successful inventors. E. J. Manville was a hardworking machinist, living in Waterbury, Conn., when, one day he heard a woman complaining because she had pricked her finger with a pin. A pin that would not prick fingers, he thought would have a ready sale. A week later he had worked out the safety pin, and within five years his invention had made him rich. Carros French, another Connecticut mechanic, in the course of a railway journey, noticed the jarring and jolting of the car, and fell to thinking how they could be overcome. The problem kept him awake at nights for some two years, but in the end he solved it so successfully that his car spring is now used on all the railroads of the land. George Westinghouse was led, in a somewhat similar manner, to invent the airbrake. He was the son of a manufacturer, and possessed a marked mechanical bent. Once he was in a railroad collision, the result of a brake's failure to do its work. He immediately started to devise a brake that would operate more quickly, and with greater certainty than the ones then in use, and like Carlos French, he was completely successful in his efforts. His airbrakes brought him great wealth, and for thirty years he has constantly added to his fortune by inventing new devices of his own, and buying those of other inventors. The result, in life saving, has been simply enormous.—"Success" for August.

Drunk and Asleep on the Track.

A white man, we could not learn his name, came near being run over by the freight train here a day or two ago. The train was leaving to go to Kinston and after getting beyond the depot the engineer saw a man lying on the track. The whistle blew an alarm, but the man did not move, and finally the train had to stop until he could be dragged off the track. The man was drunk.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1901.

The papers for some days past have been publishing chapter after chapter of catastrophies. There have been explosions, fires, storms, shipwrecks, railroad accidents and other disasters that have caused many deaths and great loss of property.

Examinations for admission to the N. C. College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts will be held in Raleigh at the College, September 3rd and 4th at 9 o'clock a. m. The College will open September 4th. Students desiring rooms must be on hand at the opening.

Several people have told us that as soon as mails begin on the rural free delivery routes they want to get THE DAILY REFLECTOR. That is the kind of talk we like to hear, as it always gives pleasure to add names to our subscription list. This is one prominent advantage the rural free delivery routes is to the people, it enables them to get daily papers delivered at their boxes and read the news every day. We hope to add many names on each of the routes going out from Greenville.

There seems to be a fresh outbreak of crime all over the country. Almost every day now the papers tell of crimes and lynchings. They are confined to no one locality or state, several nameless crimes have occurred in North Carolina. Wednesday near Wadesboro for the commission of a nameless crime upon a young lady and afterward cutting her throat and leaving her for dead, a negro was swung to a limb and his body riddled with bullets, then cut down and burned. The negro was captured with blood hounds and made a full confession of his crime.

Funeral this Evening.

Mr. G. B. King reached home this morning from Washington City, driving through the country from Bethel. The funeral of his little son, who died so suddenly Wednesday morning, takes place at 5:30 o'clock this evening in Cherry Hill Cemetery, services conducted by Rev. F. H. Harding, in the Episcopal Church.
The pall bearers are Messrs. W. B. Brown, W. H. Long, H. W. Whedbee, J. L. Fleming, J. B. Harding, B. J. Pulley, Bruce Sugg and J. B. Higgs.

Two children at Durham were bitten by a mad dog Wednesday.

THE REASON, IF THERE IS ANY.

The Wilmington Messenger has recently remarked that several new professors for North Carolina colleges have been elected lately, and all of them from outside the State. The Raleigh Post observes sarcastically upon this that there must be something wrong somewhere and suggests that "something ought to be done to put a stop to this comity among States." The Statesville Landmark takes the subject up and says the facts are as they are because it remains as true now as it was in the time of the Master that "a prophet is not without honor, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house." It imagines two young men of equal talent, both of unusual talent. They are appreciated at home, in a way, but don't amount to much there; they exchange homes and each becomes distinguished. "As a rule," says The Landmark, "a native born home man cannot succeed in any line of endeavor at home as well as he can elsewhere, because people will not appreciate him and take to him as they will to a stranger." And it concludes, very philosophically: "Thus it is that we send elsewhere for college presidents and teachers while other States come to North Carolina for the same material."

That's about the way of it, and it is of little use to complain, for that is a way the world has always had about it. It would not do to say, it would not be true to say, that Virginia was without appreciation of Dr. Venable or North Carolina, of Dr. Barringer, yet it is a fact that the president of the University of North Carolina is a Virginian and the chairman of the faculty of the University of Virginia (answering to President) is a North Carolinian. Some of the most eminent lawyers, physicians and surgeons of the great cities are Southern men, some of them North Carolinians. To be sure it is regrettable that their lustre shines upon their native States and section only by a reflected light, but perhaps if they had remained where they were born they would have given out no light at all, or at most done no more than illumine the neighborhood. It is better for both themselves and the world that they moved.—Charlotte Observer.

COTTON TIES SCARCE.

A shortage of cotton ties that will affect not only Savannah and the surrounding cotton growing country, but the whole of the cotton belt, is already being felt here, as a result the price of ties, usually $1.05 a bundle, now ranges from $1.10 to $1.25 a bundle, and at least one party is holding a lot of 2,000 for $1.35.

The shortage is caused by the strike of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers and the consequent shut-down of the Steel Hoop Company's mill, the chief source of the tie supply.

Contracts with the manufacturers were made early in the year, January, February and March, for a quantity sufficient to meet the demand and the factors had every reason to believe that the stock, or at least the greater part of it had been made up long before the strikers went out, but to their urgent demand for shipments on contracts made since the opening of the season, they have been told that stock to meet the contracts was not on hand. The manufacturers stated that they had only a small quantity of ties and that they would be prorated among the factors.

As the contracts between factors and manufacturers contain the strike clause, releasing the manufacturer from his obligation in case of a strike, the factors have no redress will have to take such stock as they can get, sell it for what it will bring and content themselves as best they can under the circumstances.

There are a few mills other than the one at Pittsburg, that makes ties; one of these is in Rome, another in Atlanta, and still another at Youngstown, Ohio, but the aggregate output of these even should the Ohio mill escape trouble with the strikers, will not come anywhere meeting the demand.

A prominent factor said yesterday that the present supply can last but a very short time, and as soon as the cotton crop begins to move freely, unless the strike has been settled by that time either the cotton growers will have to pay tremendously prices for their ties or practically stop shipping their product.—Savannah News.

Excursion to Norfolk.

There was a big crowd to go on Hatch Bros. excursion from Kinston to Norfolk today. There were eight coaches and six of them were crowded when the train reached Greenville. There were 150 people waiting to get on here and they filled the remaining cars. More cars were expected to be added at Parmele. The excursion was a great success in point of numbers. Many people drove several miles to Greenville to go on it.

There is a Difference.

Out on the sales a few days ago a bunch of farmers who had tobacco on different floors were discussing the sales at the different warehouses. One of them said that he had thought tobacco would bring as much on one floor as another, as the same buyers followed the floors, and would pay as much at one place as another. "But," said he, "since I saw the sale at Joyner's this morning, I am convinced there is a difference. At Joyner's there was an earnestness and enthusiasm, that put life in the sale, and I know tobacco sold higher on this account. Besides Joyner knows tobacco and don't mind bidding on it and ain't afraid to buy a pile." This conversation took place on the street after the sales were over.
