To Preserve Corn and Peas.
William Barberry, of Sampson county, gives a very simple and very effectual remedy he thinks for weevils and bugs in corn and peas. He cleans out his cribs, houses or bins, then with a spot of dirt on the floor to obviate the danger of fire he fumigates with sulphur poured on a shovel of live coals of fire. He then puts in his corn chiefly in shuck and at about every foot of depth he sprinkles common cooking soda at the rate of about five pounds to 150 bushels of corn. Peas are rated much in the same way. He does not winnow the chaff out of them however, until he wishes to use them. He is delighted with his successful experiment.—Concord Standard.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20.

The body of President McKinley has been born away to his home at Canton, but an atmosphere of funeral solemnity still envelopes the city. Even the skies seem reflecting the mood of the people, for every day since Monday has been wet and windy, with an autumn chill in the air. The two days of mourning, Tuesday and Thursday have checked and interrupted business, and little save what is necessary to daily life has been done.

The informal funeral cortege which passed up Pennsylvania avenue on Monday night was in its way the most impressive that historic thoroughfare has ever seen. As the casket went by its way to the White House, the street was lined with people, and instead of turning away and going to their homes they silently fell behind it, and followed it, unbidden and unheralded, to the White House gates. There was no music, whether by accident or design, and the long procession moved almost in absolute silence. Now and then some one would begin to sing "The President's hymn", and those nearest would join in the singing till the pathetic melody of "Nearer, my God, to Thee" filled the air.

There were some unhappy incidents at the public ceremonies in spite of the efforts of the police to repress all that was not in harmony with the occasion. The photograph fiend was among those present, and one of these gentry had the impudence to squeeze his way through the crowd and try to get a snap-shot of President Roosevelt just as the casket was lifted out of the hearse. The flash of light startled the horses attached to the hearse, and they reared, and were only checked by prompt action on the part of the attendants.

A much more serious incident, however, was the crush which occurred on the steps of the Capitol. Somebody was certainly to blame for this, but just who it was seems impossible to be ascertained. At one o'clock there was an immense concourse in front of the Capitol, covering the steps and the walks, all the way down to the Peace Monument and for several blocks beyond. There must have been several thousand in the thickest of the crowd alone. When the doors were opened—some say before they were opened—there was a rush. It is claimed that somebody said the way was clear into the rotunda, and that started the pushing. Then some mounted policeman lost their heads and spurred their horses into the mass of humanity, and got caught in it, so that the plunging, frightened animals added to the peril. It seems as if a police department as well used to handling large crowds as is that of Washington, ought to have known better than to allow such an occurrence. In a few minutes nearly a hundred persons were injured, many of them seriously; and the room beneath that in which the President lay had to be turned into a hospital filled with groaning, shrieking patients. Some of them had been knocked down and trampled upon.

There was, of course, much work for the detectives in catching and hunting pickpockets, who are always on hand for an occasion like this. Among those who were robbed was General Longstreet, who lost his pocket book and money while standing on the steps of the Capitol, but did not let that interfere with his attending the services, after which he reported the loss to the police.

Foreign nations have expressed their sympathy to an even greater degree than at the time of Garfield's death, which by the way, occurred on Sept. 20, 1881, just twenty years ago. The London Times suggested that it would be becoming in King Edward to request the Duke of Cornwall and York, who is now in Montreal, to attend the funeral. It was impossible for him to do so, but he has sent one of his aids who will represent him at Canton.

President Roosevelt has done nothing thus far, except to express his determination to carry out, in a general way, the policy of President McKinley. In fact, the chances are that he has not had time to think of much else. He is a man who usually thinks of but one thing at a time, and all indications are that he is very deeply moved by the recent tragedy, and that his plans for the immediate future have not yet been formed.

There are some predictions, however, which are even now made, based on promises and intentions ascribed to him in the past. For example, it has been stated that a long time ago there was an understanding between him and Senator Lodge that the latter should have the position of Secretary of State in the event of Roosevelt's becoming President. On the strength of this it was positively asserted that Hay would resign. But it now appears that Lodge does not want the State portfolio, or at least, that he would rather have the chairmanship of the Committee on Foreign Relations. This, to one who knows that most of the Senate is done in the Committee rooms, appears quite intelligible. The Cabinet minister works in the arc light of publicity, the chairman of a committee pulls strings which move other people to come out in the electric light and talk and dance. He has the responsibility and the power of a Secretary, minus some of the annoyances. So the fact that Senator Lodge wants the place which Davis, of Minnesota, once honored, shows his sagacity. But there is an interesting little story in this connection.

Out of nine Presidents since 1861, three, or one third, have been assassinated. Can any kingdom or despotism in Europe show a worse record?

Order Books Direct.

Where the publishing companies have failed to locate convenient depositories for the sale of public schools books a method has been found by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to convenience patrons of the public schools in such localities.

Superintendent Toon urges patrons of the public schools to send direct to the publishing houses orders for books accompanying with the order the retail price of the books desired. Section 13 of the text book law requires the publishers to send school books upon direct order, the postage, express or freight to be prepaid.

The Supt. of Public Instruction thinks such action will satisfy those persons who have made complaint and that it will have the effect of compelling the publishers to establish convenient repositories. —Raleigh Post.

Having to order books direct puts more trouble as well as expense on those wanting the books.

Seek Relief!

The great proportion of women who suffer never make a serious effort to benefit themselves. The most of them go on paying no attention to their little menstrual disorders, believing they will eventually wear off. They grow worse and worse every day. At the period of menstruation a woman is peculiarly susceptible to cold and other external influences and it is also the most favorable time for the development of hidden disease germs which may be lurking in the system. Any physician knows that disordered menstruation, falling of the womb and leucorrhoea are blighting lives in almost every home. No woman should neglect herself a moment after she sees indications of female diseases. Almost instant relief can be secured by the use of

WINE OF CARDUI

It will relieve you right in your own home. Will you accept the testimony of Mrs. Beigler and thousands of other women and really seek relief today? All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

100 Chicago Street, Fort Wayne, Ind., March 27, 1900.
Your Wine of Cardui has done a world of good for me. I have used five bottles of the Wine and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught. And since I have started to use it I will not be without it in the house. It helped my sister in Toledo, who did not menstruate as she ought. She was sixteen years of age and nothing else helped her. I was in a very bad state myself before I used your medicine, but I found relief in three days. And now I feel like a new woman and do all my housework and washing, which I could not do before I took Wine of Cardui. I would be very glad to write any poor woman and tell her how I suffered before I used Wine of Cardui.

The Price of Corn.

Corn was quoted at Chicago on Monday at 56 cents; Philadelphia 62 cents, and in North Carolina at 90 to $1.00 per bushel.

Last season it sold in this State for about 60 cents while in the West 40 to 45 cents was considered a very good price. The present price is therefore an advanced from 50 to 66 per cent over last year.

The North Carolina farmer who has corn for sale is both fortunate and wise in this day. The trouble we fear is that too many will be compelled to buy at the advanced price from a failure to attempt to provide enough others from losses on account of the bad seasons.—Raleigh Post.

Some women think they ought to get enough pin money to buy diamonds with.

Looks Like a Bird.

Mr. W. M. Barnhardt showed us a little curiosity Saturday in which the vegetable kingdom seems bent on imitation of the animal. This trio was a sweet potato that was only lacking wings, legs and feet. The shape was complete, including tail and eyes and that pensive half-staring look as if eyeing something a little one side. It was decidedly suggestive of a little bird as one would perceive on sight and not the result of that peculiar power of the mind by which it exercises itself through the eye and recognizes in the red-hot fire coal the vision of all things from a moon shine pie up to an army with swords and banner.—Concord Standard.

The Greatest Evidence of the dangers of cholera morbus, diarrhoea, and dysentery is the increase in the death rate during the summer months. You cannot be too careful, and particular attention should be paid to diet. A supply of Pain-Killer should always be at hand for it can be relied on at all times as safe, sure and speedy. A teaspoonful will cure any ordinary case. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Pain-Killer, Perry Davis'. Price 25c and 50c.
