WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23.

The news that President Roosevelt will retain the present Cabinet intact came as something of a surprise to the country in general. Perhaps no change which he could have made would have surprised the public as much as this unlooked for conservatism. But it is an old story, as regards Roosevelt, that the only thing you can really expect of him is the unexpected.

The very exuberance of the utterances of various Republican Senators as to the confidence they have in Roosevelt, since his decision to retain the members of the present Cabinet, is a little suspicious. It indicates that they have been seared and now are reassured.

Another thing which should not be overlooked is that Roosevelt's principal friends and supporters have not yet come on the scene. It is thought that when Senator Lodge comes back from Europe there may be a change in the existing situation.

There is no doubt that Roosevelt will be strenuous in some direction. It is said that he will favor not only a large navy but a standing army of a strength equal to that provided under the reorganization act of last winter. Whether the army can be enlarged indefinitely without interfering with the welfare of the people as a whole is one of the questions not yet settled. We are not ready for any such ideals of military service as those which prevail in Europe, and it is doubtful if we really want to be. Another place in which there is likely to be some shaking up is the secret service. President Roosevelt has been collecting testimony about the performances of the secret service men at Buffalo, and it is stated that he regards them with contempt, as a lot of incompetents, and will make some radical changes in that branch of the government very soon. In this connection there is a little story about Josiah Flynt, the tramp detective, which is interesting. Flynt, as most people know, is a college-bred man who has been knocking about in the disguise of a hobo for the last ten or fifteen years, gathering information about the tramp and criminal classes, and is possible the best authority in the country on this subject. He published an article sometime ago which was a terrible arraignment of the New York detective force and the New York people were mad. They said they would show him that he could not talk in that way about the police of a great city. For two days they hunted for him. At the end of that time he strolled into the "Front Office", talked with the chief about an irrelevant matter, and asked, "Have they caught that man Flynt yet?" He was regaled with unvarnished opinions of himself and strolled out again in a state of inward amusement. They have not caught him yet. The fact is that the detective and secret service men are not as sharp as the criminal, and until they are—until men who are resourceful, shrewd and incorruptible make up these forces, the criminal will have about as good a time as he does now.

It was stated by some correspondents that Roosevelt had positively said that he would not be a candidate for the Presidency in 1904. He has denied this interview point blank, but he admits that what he really said was something like this: That while he was Vice President he had considered such a cardi-dacy and begun to work for it, but since the tragic event which made him President he could not make any personal canvas for the nomination. Anybody can see that. But it is thought that he would not refuse to take the candidacy if it should happen to be offered to him, and that is as far as it is proper for him to go at this early stage of affairs.

An interesting statement which President Roosevelt made on Saturday morning to Senator Pritchard, of North Carolina, Representative Klutz, of the same State and Representative Gibson, of Tennessee, was this: "I am going to be President of the United States, and not of any section. I don't care that (with a snap of his fingers) for sections or sectional lines." He also said something of the same sort to Senator Money, of Mississippi, and Hon. Livingston, of Georgia, adding that he was half southern by blood and that having lived in the West he hoped he might represent all sections.

To Southern Women.

The Messenger aforesaid favored the proposition to erect a fine, superb monument to the women of the south. They most richly deserve such a fitting memorial for they were grandly noble, self-sacrificing and intensely patriotic. The Confederate Veterans are talking of erecting such a monument, and it should be pressed vigorously until the work is completed.—Wilmington Messenger.

The fact that the three Presidents who have been assassinated were shot on Friday, furnishes more food for the superstitious.—Charlotte News.

The self-conscious fool worries over nothing.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

EVERY AFTERNOON [except Sunday]

Entered at the Post Office at Greenville, N. C., as Second-Class Mail Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One year $3.00
 One month .25
 One week .10

Delivered in town by carriers without extra cost.

Advertising rates are liberal and can be had on application to the editor or at the office.

We desire a live correspondent in every Postoffice in the county who will send in brief items of news as it occurs in each neighborhood. Write plainly and only on one side of the paper.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1901.

Quite a number of the North Carolina editors go to Buffalo this week to attend the Pan-American exposition. THE REFLECTOR has too much work on hand just now for the editor to spare the time for the trip, therefore must deny himself the pleasure of going along with the brethren. We hope all who go will have a fine trip.

We hear people from some sections of the county where rural free delivery has not been established, expressing the wish that they might have the benefit of such a mail service. THE REFLECTOR believes if those people would get up the proper petition and forward to our Congressman, Hon. John H. Small, it would be brought to the attention of the postal authorities and receive due consideration. The rural free delivery routes are being established as fast as possible wherever they are found to be practicable.

We are sorry to print the announcement of Hon. Jas. E. Shepherd that he will not be a candidate for the nomination for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court before the next Democratic State convention. As Chief Justice of this court for a term of years Judge Shepherd adorned the bench, and in common with a great many others The Observer had hoped that he would stand for this nomination next year and secure it. He is a great lawyer, is devoted to his profession, and as a Judge could always be depended upon to interpret the law as he understood it without prejudice or predilection. He has every quality that fits a man for the Supreme Court bench and it is to be regretted that he sees fit to give notice that his abilities are not available for this service.—Charlotte Observer.

Five Notable Journeys Over the same Route.

Graver Cleveland, on five notable occasions, has made the journey along Pennsylvania avenue from the White House to the capitol—in 1885 to be inaugurated President of the United States, in 1889 to witness the inauguration of President Harrison, in 1893 to be a second time inaugurated President, in 1897 to witness the first inauguration of President McKinley, and in 1901 to follow the remains of a murdered President in their last journeys over that historic thoroughfare. In this, as well as in other respects, Mr. Cleveland's career is without parallel.—Louisville Post.

CONDENSED STORIES.

A Railway Official Who Is a Man of Many Parts.

When Joseph Ramsey, Jr., the newly elected president of the Wabash railroad, was superintendent of the Pittsburg Southern, a small road in the coal district, Joseph Walton, a millionaire coal miner of Pittsburg, heard of his ability and decided that Ramsey would be just the man to take charge of a road which he was then projecting, relates the New York Times. Walton went over to the small town where Ramsey made his headquarters in order to offer him the position. At the office he was told that Mr. Ramsey was out somewhere in the yards, so "the coal king" went out to look for him. The first man he came across was a grimy mechanic who was at work underneath an engine. "Where's Mr. Ramsey?" inquired Walton.

"I'm Ramsey," replied the man, and then, climbing out from under the locomotive, he explained laughingly that there was "something wrong with a bolt of the engine, and as the engineer didn't know how to fix it I took a hand at it myself." That made Walton desire Ramsey's services more than ever and indirectly was the cause of Ramsey's rapid advancement.

Lillian Russell's Retort.

Lillian Russell has never made any great fame for vivacity on the stage, but this has not been from any want of a feeling for the humorous side of things, and she has often flashed out a caustic bit of reply when an opening was presented, says the Chicago Journal. Not long ago she was a guest at a banquet given to a certain Russian noble, a small gathering, and the noble and Lillian happened to be placed side by side. He was a rather bumptious fellow, with a supercilious sniff at everything American. In his estimation Americans are little better than savages. He found fault with the various dishes served, went near to declaring the cooking outrageous and made himself generally disagreeable.

"Is it possible you eat that stuff?" he asked when some hothouse corn was served. "Why, in my country we feed that to the hogs!"

"Help yourself, count," said Lillian quietly, sliding the dish toward him. He is believed to have "tumbled."

The Joke on the Officer.

A correspondent in South Africa tells this story at the expense of the British columns engaged in clearing the Orange River Colony of supplies: Scene—Boer farmer sitting at the door of his cottage; large stack of oat straw in the background. Enter British staff officer. Staff officer: "I have orders to either buy or destroy all forage and food in this district. I therefore give you notice that I am about to set fire to that pile of oat straw."

Boer Farmer—Bod, I tell you—Staff Officer—Resistance is futile. Boer Farmer—Bod would you please—Staff Officer—I can listen to no excuses.

The stack of oat straw presently bursts into flame, and the staff officer goes on his way rejoicing. The Boer turns to his wife and says: "Dose Khakis are strange peoples. I wanted to dell him dis vas de oat straw dat I haff sold to de English colonel half an hour ago." And he thoughtfully jingled the British sovereigns in his pocket.

The Seaboard Air Line has made every arrangement for the quick handling of berries, melons, fruits and vegetables which may be grown along the line east of Hamlet without regard to the size of shipment. Their object is to stimulate growing of these products for which our lands are so well suited. Such industries should be encouraged because they are profitable, and when once our people have demonstrated the fitness of our soils for such it would create a demand for our lands and bring untold wealth into our midst. Other eastern sections, whose soils are similar to our own, have been successful in their experiments along this line, and there is no reason why our farmers should not reap some of the rewards of such enterprises. The time is soon coming when this country will rank among the first in the South in the production of fruits, vegetables, melons and berries, and there is every reason why our farmers should begin at once. Begin of course, in a small way and gather experience along with profit, resting assured that "there's money in it," and the first to begin will be the first to reap the benefits.—Lumberton Robesonian.

Mr. Bok's Advice on Marriage.
A young man recently wrote to the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal asking: "What have you to say, squarely and fairly, to a young man of twenty-nine who is about to marry?" In the October Journal Mr. Bok uses a page for his answer. Its salient points are these: that a man should make the woman of his choice his chum, as well as his wife; that he should show her the highest consideration as well as love her; that he should remember that he owes his wife to her mother, and treat his mother-in-law with respect, at least; that he should keep his wife informed as to his income; that he should give her a regular allowance and that he should have his life insured in her favor. And above all, that when a young man marries he must remember that he leaves a world of self and enters into a world of another and self.

Where?

Where is his shovel? It was left in a wide field where they planted a fodder pole.

Where is his plow? He left it in the last furrow, where he sowed wheat. I saw it there next year. Will this man be a financial success?

A Black Snake Milks a Cow.

Mr. D. A. Whitney appeared in the mayor's office one day last week and said that he was very much perplexed as to what was going with the milk from his fine cow, as she was only giving a pint a day. He set a diligent watch over the cow, and at last slipped upon a huge black snake in the act of sucking her. He procured a hoe, struck the snake and cut it in two. After killing the reptile the cow bellowed and bemoaned at an awful rate. He says the snake was five feet long and exceedingly large. — Raeford Correspondence Lumberton Robesonian.
