Charles Harper and sister, of Black Jack, came Monday to see Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Dixon, who have been sick for quite a long while, but are now very much better.

Right many of our people attended the Free Will Union meeting at Black Jack Sunday and report a large crowd present in spite of the inclement weather.

There were tough times at the home of Simon Moye yesterday. Sims is sad and swears vengeance on hogs of all kind by what name soever known.

R. G. Parker, Jr., of Falkland, was here prospecting yesterday and has decided to move his family here in a short while.

The Confederate Soldier's Home near Atlanta, was destroyed by fire Monday. No lives were lost but there were several narrow escapes.

RECOLLECTIONS OF GREENVILLE IN MY BOYHOOD.

BY T. C. DAVIS.

I heard my dear old aunt, long since in the rest of Paradise, bedridden and near the close of a long life, say to her son one day, "Sammy I would like to live a thousand years." And who would not? It was simply nature protesting through her at the seeming incompleteness of human life that all men feel through life and with waning faculties to the very portal of the grave, and is a suggestion, a proof of man's immortality, and an echo from the far off days when our great ancestor, Adam, not only lived nine hundred and thirty years, but with a stature in keeping with his dignity as Lord of creation was, according to Arab legend, one hundred and five feet high. Now I am not interested in this particular phase of Adamic history. But if the members of any Ladies Aid Society, Epworth League, St. Andrews Brotherhood or St. Agnes Guild are disposed to question Arab story, it is only necessary to get Mark Twain to point out his grave and turn the matter over to some Archaeological society.

It was in the thirties, the period of the great exodus when the Blounts, Salters, Smiths, McKinnies, Kenedays, Sheppards and others left for Alabama and Mississippi, that my father went to Greenville to live. I was very young, but I think I remember the long ride from New Bern in an old livery coach, and meeting my uncle, Major Selby, at his house and with whom the family remained a few days until our home, the Blount place across the street, was prepared. The Major's house was the old building on high brick pillars and dormer windows opposite Norcot & Noble's store.

It is remembered in the family that the young people and servants were badly upset at leaving big New Bern to live in little Greenville, and Sally Mitchell, "old Sal," was so much impressed with the superiority of her old home, when she came via Washington on stepping off the flat boat just at dark she looked up and seeing the moon exclaimed, "Ha, we got a prettier moon than dat in New Bern."

One of my earliest recollections is being taken to the gallows landing (I wonder if the place is still called by that name) and while there was no gibbet in sight as I remember, it must have been in connection with the subject that I learned my uncle was sheriff with the awful prerogative of hanging people, and having learned this I kept out of his way as much as possible. And it was with curiosity mixed with awe that I sometimes watched at a safe distance old Jacob on his visits to the jail to feed prisoners, the Major walking before him with the huge key over a foot long and weighing several pounds, and which eventually became associated in my thoughts with the key of the Bastille, probably from the fact that when as a bigger boy I explored the old jail I found in the dark room where desperate prisoners were confined and into which the sun never penetrated, the imaginary counterpart of a dungeon of that famous old prison. It was on the hill near the gallows landing in a hut that Sam Ralston killed Dave Smith which caused at the time a great sensation. Ralston escaped to the west and became very rich as a Sante Fee trader.

On the the hill of the first street leading to the river near old Sampson's house eight or ten men were killed and wounded some years later by the premature discharge of a cannon being fired in honor of a Democratic victory, whereupon being moved by a profound conviction of the value of human life and to prevent all possibility of a similar occurrence, altho' it might happen to the hated whigs, and ignoring all consideration of the fourth of July, a party of patriotic Democrats took the old gun and sunk it in the middle of the river.

In the two story house on the first corner of this street and the street paralel with the river which I shall call Water street, there lived, when I last knew him, Mr. David Lawrence, and family, an exemplary Christian gentleman. He was a son of Mr. Peter Lawrence, cashier of the old Tarboro bank, and with him lived his relatives, Mr. Willie Bond and his sister. Uncle Willie, as he was usually called, was a man of few words, serious, sober countenance and entirely self reliant. He always wore a broad brim, low crown hat and when walking alone his eyes were bent on the ground as if absorbed in thought. This good man was a Democrat and a Baptist, and was moreover a true patriot. He admired Gen. Washington above all men and loved to talk of the old times. And on Independence day, as he called the 4th of July, under the influence to stirring martial music and a patriotic address his soul was filled with the spirit of the man of the Revolution, and had occasion required he would willingly shoulder a musket to give John Bull another thrashing.

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women to-day who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhoea. They let the months pass and their trouble becomes harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of in the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

Belen, Miss., March 9, 1900.
 I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Theford's Black-Draught. Before I began to take your medicines I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicines until I get cured, for I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me.

Want No More Of It.

But we do not believe the people of the United States are anxious for another era of sectional politics. They all understand that the fifteenth amendment was a gigantic and cruel blunder; and they are not desirous of aggravating its malignant effects.—Washington Post.

In Very Bad Taste.

Considering the manner in which the Democratic Party and press of the country have treated the outgoing and incoming Republican Presidents, it is in extremely bad taste for Republican papers to attempt to make political capital out of the sad affair.—Durham Herald.

Anniversary.

Next Sunday will be the second anniversary of Rev. J. N. Booth's pastorate of the Greenville Memorial Baptist church. It is expected to have as large a gathering as possible of the membership of the church on that day with appropriate observance of the occasion. The anniversary a year ago was a day of much gladness to the church, and it is hoped the coming one will be even more so.

Bad Bridge.

Tuesday afternoon as Mr. O. L. Joyner was on his way home, his horse fell through the bridge near the Rountree place, two miles from town, and broke a shaft to the buggy. This is the same bridge that Dr. Moye's horse fell through sometime ago. Passers say the bridge is in a very bad condition and as it is a county charge the Commissioners will no doubt order it looked after at their next meeting.

Recollections of Greenville.

Today THE REFLECTOR begins a very interesting sketch of Greenville in long gone days, written by Mr. J. T. C. Davis, of Wilson. Mr. Davis was a citizen of Greenville many years ago and is remembered by some of our older citizens. Every one will greatly enjoy reading these sketches, and as they will continue through several issues of THE REFLECTOR we suggest that the reader keep a lookout for them so as not to miss any of the connection. They contain historical matter well worth preserving.
