RECOLLECTIONS OF GREENVILLE IN MY BOYHOOD.

BY T. C. DAVIS.

The lot in front of the Brick place was vacant when I first knew it, but a house with two rooms was built, as I remember, for Mr. J. J. Norcott Jr., and it was here that he died. Mr. Norcott was a very highly educated but very feeble person, and on delivering a striking fourth of July oration in the old Baptist church soon after his graduation at the close of which being thoroughly exhausted, like Sheridan at the trial of Warren Hasting, he dropped fainting into the arms of a friend. The late Rev. Dr. William Closs, of the Methodist church, a great humorist, taught a grammar school in this building at one time.

The large dwelling on the adjoining lot was the residence of Dr. John C. Gorham, who twice represented the county in the Legislature and was a sensible, genial man. He married an heiress daughter of Peter Sugg, Esq., of Renny Hill, the great plantation on the river twelve miles above Greenville. He was the son of Col. James Gorham, of the Revolution, and a cousin of my father, his mother having been Sarah Davis, daughter of James Davis, of New Bern. The venerable James H. McClure, of Washington, now almost a centenarian, is a nephew of Dr. Gorham, his (Dr. Gorham's) mother, being a widow when she married his father. Capt. McClure lived in Greenville a long time and was connected with the old Bank of Washington at one time. Dr. Gorham had five children, three sons and two daughters, Geo. F. and Thomas A. Gorham married daughters of Major Selby, and his son James, the sister of the late Hon. W. T. Dortch, of Goldsboro. Emily married Mr. Henry C. Jordan and Sarah Matilda, named for her grandmother and my aunt, married the late Hon. A. M. Lewis, of Raleigh.

The old Gorham homestead, Strawberry Hill, nine miles below Greenville, was in the olden times a great resort for the beaux and belles. My aunts who were frequently there told me they never found any place like it for young people, but the old mansion has long since fallen to decay, and there is not a vestige of it left. And the spring on the river bank near, where they had the dances and picnics, is moss grown and neglected, and nothing remains to remind one that the Gorhams lived there except those emblems of mortality, the grave stones. A few years after the death of Dr. Gorham and his wife, Mr. Jas. S. Clark bought the property and moved to Greenville with his family. They were an acquisition to the society of the place. His wife was a Miss Lanier and distantly related to my mother. Her ancestors (Mershon) like my mother's, the Moyes, and Duprees, were Huguenots and came from France after the revocation of Edict Nantes and settled in Jones county, in this State about the year 1708. They had four daughters and two sons, Adelaide, Elvira, Victoria, Della, William and Edwin, who are all living except Elyira. She married Dr. O. J. O'Hagan and preceded him to the silent land twelve years. Mr. Clark was a man of wealth and a notable in his day. He was generous and accommodating, and the ease with which he was approached by every one led to his name being appended as surety to more notes of hand than any person that ever lived in the county. But at the same time by his shrewdness and good sense he seldom ever paid a security debt. Wise he was, and to use a homely simile, he was as full of wit and humor as an egg of meat. His company was sought by men of all degrees, and the staple of the conversation still are his sayings and doings at many a gathering at his old home, and like the story of Ben Merrill, it will be when several generations have passed before his Georgia Indians and Cousin Henry are forgotten.

In an old comfortable looking Dutch dwelling on the corner of the next street in front of the Gorham-Clark place, the exact counterpart of the old Evans house and immediately on the street, lived

Mr. Joseph Dancy, father of my deceased friends Joseph J. and Geo. A. Dancy. I just can remember him, and the old gentleman must have died in the thirties. But the mother of my friends, a spruce looking old lady, survived her husband many years. She was related to Mrs. Bernard whom she favored. In the last house on leaving town to enter the New Bern road lived a family named Hester. They left Greenville years ago and I have not heard of them since.

Returning up the street the first house on the left side was Mr. John Frizzle's place. He was a hatter and had his factory or shop, a small brick building, on the lot near his dwelling. This shop, the court house and Major Selby's kitchen were the only brick buildings intown. I was interested in the operation of hat making and frequently went there. Mr. Frizzle, if I remember, had no family but his wife. He was a staunch Democrat—there were several such in Greenville although a large major-

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1901.

The Raleigh Correspondent of the Virginian-Pilot announces that General W. P. Roberts will be a candidate for Congress in the first district. Well now really. Mr. Correspondent you must be mistaken. While the General knows we are all fond of him, but he knows also that the First District has no idea of turning down the present incumbent, in fact the First District could not exist comfortably and easy without the Hon. John H. Small's active supervision of her interests. Anything General Roberts wants he shall have but we are dead sure he does not want that position.—Elizabeth City Economist.

The Economist is right. The people of the First District very much admire General Roberts, and he is worthy of any position to which he might aspire, but it would be one of the worst of mistakes to lay aside Mr. Small for any other man. The District has had no better representative in Congress than Mr. Small, and no one has looked more faithfully after the interest of his constituents than he. He has now been in the position long enough to take high rank among his associates in Congress and has gained sufficient knowledge of the routine of matters to make him the most useful Representative we could get. There must be no thought of removing him.

The ticket scalpers who are out on the bail in Chicago after conviction and pending a decision on application for a new trial considered not to wait for the result of the hearing, but "jumped" their bail, leaving their bondsmen in the lurch, one of them, it is said, eloping with his step-daughter. The charge so often made by the scalpers that the movement of the railroads against them amounted simply to the persecution of honest men, does not seem to be borne out by the results in this case. If the dishonest acts of the fraternity in connection with the Buffalo Exposition could be collated, it would make a chapter, or rather a book, that would startle the community. Hundreds of tickets purchased from dishonest brokers have been taken up by the railroads on the trains out of Buffalo and their holders obliged to pay their fare or get off the train. This in all cases has been a serious annoyance, and in very many cases an absolute hardship: In view of the universal condemnation of the business by those who have investigated it, it would seem as if the papers throughout the country could perform no better service for the public than to warn them against the purchase of tickets from the brokers. Particularly is this necessary in the rural districts and in local papers. People living in large cities have no excuse for ignorance on this subject. The great dailies have time and again published accounts of the frauds perpetrated, the danger of dealing with scalpers is generally understood at such points. It is rare, however, that the country papers give place to items of this character, and it would be an act of positive value to their readers if the rural press would set forth the danger which attends any transactions with the ticket scalpers.—Railway and Engineering Review.

RISE OF THE RURAL POSTMAN.

The rural free delivery service will be placed under the classified service some time during the coming winter. This was determined upon by President Roosevelt immediately after he succeeded to the presidency. This is one of the few branches of the government service remaining unclassified, and it is destined to be one of the most important departments of the government's work. There will be no difficulty whatsoever in classifying the rural free delivery clerks in Washington and the special agents and inspectors in the field.

The difficulty comes with the rural carriers. Each of these must have his own horse and must be personally acquainted with the people living along his route. He must have their confidence, for he has authority to sell money orders and postal notes, and the average citizen will not pay his money to the carrier unless he knows him, particularly as the carrier is generally expected, after making out the note or postal order, to mail it for the purchaser. In such circumstances it will not do to select carriers by competitive examination.

The carrier, to be efficient, must live in the county wherein his route lies. Some method must be devised to insure his selection regardless of political considerations and to get the best man obtainable for the work. That is the problem which Civil Service Commissioner Foulke must solve. The President and his advisers think the extension of the merit system to this service will make it even better than it now is.

Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith is so convinced of the importance of the rural service that he has recommended to Congress that the appropriation for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1902, be $6,250,000, an increase of $2,750,000, and every cent of that sum will be advantageously expended. In the past four months 1,300 new free delivery routes have been established, an average of 325 a month.

On the 1st of July 1900, there were only 1,264 routes, which had been increased a year later to 1,300, or at the rate of about 250 a month. On November 1 there were 5,600 routes. Each route covers an average of 25 square miles. The population served is estimated to be 3,800,000, inhabiting 140,000 square miles of territory, the average population served on each route being 717. As a carrier is required for each route, it can be seen that with 5,600 routes Uncle Sam employs a small army in this service, which has only begun. And it is an interesting fact that the service has caused a large increase in the amount of mail in the sections covered, so while the cost is not increased much, if any, as compared to the fourth class postoffice system the

The work of organizing this great branch of the Postoffice Department has been directly in the hands of August W. He is a gold Democrat, and is himself under the classified service.—Washington Dispatch.

Will Close. Tonight.

Tonight's service will probably close the series of meetings in the Baptist church that have been conducted last week and this by Rev. C. A. Jenkins, of Goldsboro. Mr. Jenkins is an excellent preacher, earnest in his address, entirely free from excitement, and adheres strictly to the Bible for all authority. His stay here has very much endeared him to the people of Greenville. His work here will result in much good.

Good Farming.

Mr. W. H. Gray, of Carolina township, came in today to get a receipt for THE REFLECTOR, and while here told us something of his farming operations for this year. He cultivated a one horse crop, having 7 acres in tobacco, 9 acres in cotton, 1 acre in potatoes, besides what he put in corn. For his tobacco he received $850, for his cotton $200, for his potatoes $112, making a total of $1,162, and he has on hand 45 barrels of corn and 5 stacks of fodder. This is what we call a fine result for a one horse crop, and shows that farming will pay when properly done.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS is commended by Statesmen, Professional men and thousands of others prominent in the world's activities, for its fine discrimination in sifting the actual news from conflicting report and the presentation of current events in their just proportion. They comment on its freedom from daily-paper sensationalism. All men and women who want to know what the world is doing find it an intellectual necessity, to judge from the letters received from hundreds. Its editorials are comprehensive, and labor saving to the busy man or woman. Its timely contributions on important topics are by the best-informed writers. Its reviews of other magazines give the best of their best work. It is profusely illustrated.

These letters will enable all thoughtful men and women to judge of its value to them.

PRESIDENT "I know that through its columns views have been presented to me that I could not otherwise have had access to, because all earnest and thoughtful men, no matter how widely their ideas diverge, are given free utterance in its columns."—Theodore Roosevelt.

EX-PRESIDENT "I consider it a very valuable addition to my library."—Grover Cleveland.

"It is a publication of very great value. I have sometimes found there very important matter indeed which I should not otherwise have discovered."—George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator, Massachusetts.

Send for particulars as to how it can be had with an invaluable set of books for 50 cents a month.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Those Who are Passing This Way.

H. A. White went to Tarboro today.

A. M. Perry went to Scotland Neck today.

Jesse Speight left Wednesday for Grifton.

A. W. Outerbridge returned to Scotland Neck today.

Donnell Gilliam returned to Tarboro this morning.

W. T. Thompson, wife and child left this morning for Greensboro.

Miss Carrie Andrews returned Wednesday evening from a visit to Durham.

"Mac," only the hired man a week ahead of the Herald Square Opera Company, was here today arranging for the coming of his company next Thursday night.

Louis Ryan, of Winchester, Va., came in Wednesday evening to visit friends. He is the eldest son of the late Mr. A. N. Ryan, who was once in business in Greenville and died here about ten years ago. When Lewis left Greenville he had not discarded knee pants but now he is a grown man, and not all of his former friends recognize him at first glance. He is studying medicine at Richmond College and run down here to spend a few days.

ity were Whigs. My people were all Whigs and as a little boy I thought Democrats were sorter bad quality. But as I grew up the real issues between the parties had narrowed down to the tariff question and the first vote I ever gave was for David S. Reed, candidate for Governor, and it has never been possible for me to vote any thing but a straight Democratic ticket since. But even now I sometimes feel the old Whig lever in-bred at my birth rising in me, and although the old party outlived its principles or its usefulness, my heart turns to Badger, Mangum, Stanly and Graham. These were giants in the land in their day.

In reply to a question I once asked Mr. Frizzle, in front of the court house, as to what a single star on a banner used in a Democratic procession that day meant, he said, "It is the Star of Bethlehem to guide the wise men to Washington City." It sounds rather irreverent, but that man's Democracy and his religion were inseparably mixed. It was a Presidential campaign, and the star had some reference to Texas, the lone star State, which had been recently or was about to be admitted into the Union.

On the lot in front of Mr. Frizzle, Mr. Chas. Greene lived. He also owned the lot on the opposite of the street where Dr. Brown afterwards, and possibly still lives. Mr. Greene was wealthy, a very fine business man and a good neighbor and friend. He lost four grown sons in the space of one or two years, Jas. Henry, Alex, Cannon and Charles. His eldest son, Zeno H. Greene, married my sister and his youngest, Robert, Miss Sally Smith.

In the next house on the same side of the street lived Mr. Dempsey Eason, a man with a blighted life. When a young man he shot on the street and killed a man named Cherry, was in jail a long time, tried for his life and acquitted on the ground of self defence. He was a saddle maker by trade, a bachelor and his sister lived with him and kept house. Horse back riding was fashionable at that day, and he had a reputation for making fine saddles and his work was always in demand. But his brother, who had been living with him a long time, left, and he gradually neglected his business, although not a drinking man, until he be-

Notice to the Public.

After 14 years of experience as a mechanic and six years as a contractor, I have located in Greenville as my home and am prepared to do any and all kinds of carpenter work. Any one wishing to build give me a trial. I will guarantee perfect satisfaction.

Yours to serve,
E. B. McLOHON.

Any one wishing reference I refer them to J. B. Gardner, Ayden, N. C.; Mr. A. G. Cox, Winterville, N. C.; Mr. J. J. Cherry, Greenville, N. C.

came involved and finally lost his home. He then moved to Wilson county and settled in a little hut of a house at old Joyner's depot. His faithful sister never left him, but finally died, and having no relatives on whom he had the remotest claim, he accepted the inevitable, and my brother met him along the road one day going sorrowfully to the county home.

And here I draw the curtain on recollections of the long ago and if not recalled again in the activities of the future, they will come in a full halo of light in second childhood (God willing), and with the key of memory my eyes will be opened, the scales removed, and I shall see the forms and hear the voices "I have loved long since and lost awhile."

Further Election News.

In Tuesday's elections the Democrats carried Maryland which will secure the return of Senator Gorman to the U. S. Senate.

New Jersey went Republican by about the usual majority.

The Republicans carried Nebraska by an increased majority.

Kentucky went Democratic by a larger majority than ever.

In Mississippi the Democrats had it all to themselves and elected everything.

South Dakota, Kansas Iowa, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut all went Republican.
