CHARLESTON EXPOSITION.

Advertising Car Here Billing the Great Show.

The Atlantic Coast Line advertising car, in charge of Capt. W. B. Kyle, special agent of the A. C. L., came to Greenville this morning to advertise the Charleston and West Indies Exposition now in progress at Charleston. Mr. Harry Clifton, an expert advertising man who has had experience in all parts of the world, is in charge of the advertising crew with the car. They have put up handsome posters and lithographs all over town, showing the attractions of the exposition. Capt. Kyle tells us the exhibits are now all in place and the exposition is very complete. He added that North Carolinians are especially proud of the exhibit from this State which is unsurpassed.

The midway attractions at the exposition are of a high and select class, the objectionable features usually allowed at big shows being ruled out. Anyone wishing a pleasant and instructive trip should attend the exposition.

End of the Century Club.

Reported for The Reflector.]

Regardless of the inclemency of the weather, the Club spent a most pleasant evening with Mrs. Julian Jordan Friday, Feb. 21st. The President being absent the Vice-President filled the chair.

The literary program consisted of the reading of the poem "Guinevere" by Mrs. Arthur, followed by a general discussion of the "Current Scene." To add to the pleasure of her guests the hostess furnished an interesting contest on the heroes and heroines of noted books. Mesdames Arthur, Ficklen and Hughes tied, the latter drawing the prize.

After being so thoroughly entertained as well as having the appetite sumptuously fed, the Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. James Burton Cherry.

Washington's Birthday Celebrated.

Reported for The Reflector.]

On February 22nd, Mrs. F. G. Whaley entertained the Singletary Chapter Daughters of the Confederacy in a most charming manner.

Despite the inclemency of the weather there was a good attendance. In the absence of the President, the Vice President, Mrs. F. G. James, with becoming dignity opened and presided over the meeting. There being no business of importance, the hostess provided a very unique entertainment for her guests. Mrs. E. B. Ficklen and Mrs. Joo. L. Wooten tied for the "booby" prize, while Mrs. F. G. James, bore off the laurels of the head prize.

After the meeting delightful refreshments were served. The Chapter will meet with Mrs. Harry Skinner, the last Thursday in March.

AT THE CLUB.

On the street, at social gatherings, anywhere, where ever a number of good dressers are gathered and the clothes question is the topic of conversation, you will learn, if you lend an attentive ear, that we are quoted as being the store that always has snappy toggery for the up-to-the-hour man. The store that he looks to for new things; the store to which he first turns for a new cut in a suit, a new shape in a hat or tie. In short, the store where the good dresser always finds the thing he wants without paying an extra price for style. If you are interested in Clothing and Haberdashery with character, come in.

Great Singers Off the Stage.

I remember how amused I was when Mme. Eames told me how capitably Jean de Reszke, who undoubtedly is the greatest of living tenors, imitates animal sounds—how he "bowwows" and "meows" with the same voice which has thrilled thousands; also how Edouard de Reszke delights in imitating the sounds of various orchestral instruments. But in order to do this he is obliged to assume the pose of the player, so that if he is imitating the sounds of a cello he sits as if he had the instrument between his knees and were drawing a bow across the imaginary strings. As for Plancon, whenever he and the prima donna step out upon the stage together he always whispers to her just as they are leaving the wings, "Now they are going to see the two most beautiful noses in the company."—Gustav Kobbe in Woman's Home Companion.

Went Broke on Kisses.

"D. F. Coon, whose son was a few nights ago married to Miss Hattie Combs, is one of the best natured men in Fort Scott," remarks the Fort Scott (Kan.) Monitor. "After the ceremony he kissed the bride and gave her $1,000, at the same time remarking that it was worth another hundred. The bride then walked up and kissed him, and he pulled out $100 more and gave it to her. The bridegroom thought this was a good financial snap, and he tried the same game. He kissed his father, but he got $10. However the old gentleman went broke at this little series of speculation."

THE NEW WOMAN.

A Bit of Uncle Zeke's Experience.

BY W. F. E.

"Wal, I swan! They say that the wimen folks air er tryin' ter vote out in Kansas," exclaimed Uncle Zeke Homestead to the editor, as he glanced at the columns of the local paper.

Uncle Zeke always called at the office for his paper, and as the editor and he were on very familiar terms, when there was no one present and the editor was at ease, they generally engaged in conversation.

Uncle Zeke was always well posted on all the news reported in the columns of his paper, a conversationalist from away back, and a critic of domestic relations; in all which he showed intense interest.

In conversation he always took the lead, and it was economy to listen. "Wimen folks air quare enyway," he continued, as he held the paper in one hand, and the editor leaned back in his office chair.

"They seem ter know it all, an' think we men folks ain' nuthin' no how. Why, jes' beca'se ole Adam lov'd apples, be dast ef they don't think they kin take an ole wurm-eaten apple an' lead the 'hole flock un us thro' th' Red Sea inter Afriky er eny uv them h'athen parts. An' then when they go ter jedge mankind, they jes pick out erbout two uv the onsortliest men they kin find an' set them up ez samples.

"Thar's ole Si Beasley that lives down th' road frum me, who gits tight ever' time he gits er chance; an' then thar's ole Joe Rogers jes beyon' him, that beats his ole 'oman onst er twice a week—them's the samples uv manhood in my neighborhood.

"They ain't nary one dacent ez er stumpy-tail mule, an' ef they hed Betsy ter deal with ferwhile it 'ud be er step t'wards savin' the reputation uv we men folks; ter I tell ye, Betsy's er corker.

"She belongs ter that temperance league down at the Corners, an' she's got the idy that she's er goin' ter be one uv these 'New Wimen.' Be dast ef I hain't bin spectin' ever since the drotted thing started ter see Betsy come out in me Sund'y close, an' fer me ter wake up sum mornin' with er petticoat on.

"I've tried ter talk sum little hoss sense inter Betsy's head, but jes lak er woman, ef I hed it chock full, fit ter bust, it 'ud all be gone befo' I could ketch me bre'th. I b'lieve Betsy's got more sense 'an she argys with.

"Twen't no longer than tother night we hed er argyment on the 'New Woman' question. I'm allus agin argin' with Betsy, but it cum up that night afore I thought uv it.

"Betsy wuz er readin' the paper an all uv er sudd'n she sez, 'Zeke, I'm er goin' ter be er New Woman'—an' befo' she got it out good sez I, 'I think it's time.' Walsir thet upst Betsy's box uv eliquise, an' she commenc'd ergin. Sez she, 'You needin' start none uv yer opinyons. We wimen have bin trodden upon, an' demand our rights! We hain't never hed what desarved.' 'That you hain't,' sez I. 'You tanterlizer,' screamed Betsy, 'you hain't got er bit uv respect fer yer wife! You needin' think I'm goin' ter stop'—but I know that.

"'We wimen,' continued Betsy, 'have allus bin the slaves uv you men folks, but right here an' now we are goin' ter show ye sumthin,' an' I begin ter wonder ef 'twuz eny wuss'n we'd seen. But Betsy kep' on, 'Right now, we're holdin' meetin's fer thet very pu'pose,' continued Betsy with er emphasis on WE. 'The day is not fur dis-tint, an' she jes look'd fluent ez she doubled up her fist an' raised her arm in the air—an' I moved inter the corner,—'The day is not fer distint when worman shall take her stan', an' thro' the ballut boxes shall purge the hi' ways uv life,' an' she brought her fist down on the table with er momentum that jarred the chimney off the lamp. Puttin' the chimney back on the lamp, she sot down ergin. 'Then we're goin' ter down the lick'er bizness,' an' she bodded her head an' motioned her han' at me, 'an' we're goin' ter pass mo' good laws than you men folks ever dream'd uv. We're goin' ter 'stablish schools fer the un'arned. Why there air er sight er gals hain't never he'rd er book keepin', sikology, bike-ology, an' the likes,' an' I'm wunderin' ef eny uv 'em hez ever seen the likes er Betsy Homestead.

"Wal, Betsy jes kep' on, an' I dassent say er word. I wuz up er tree ter know what ter do. I couldn't say nuthin', an' I didn't feel inclined ter l'ave home ezzactly, so I leaned back in my chur an' listen'd with all meekness. Ez Betsy kep' on, I thought I'd passum off ter sleep, an' it won't long afore I wuz er puffin' an' er blowin' lak er steam engine.

"Then Betsy hilt up, an' ez she thought I wuz er sleep, she proceed'd with her knittin'.

"When I thought Betsy's min' hed hed time ter cool off, I fell outen my chur an' woke up.

"Yes sir," continued Uncle Zeke, "neean' smile, fer I be dast ef it don't take jugglery ter o't gen'ral these 'ere wimen folks."

The editor threw his head back an' gave a hearty laugh.

"Going to plant any tobacco this year, Uncle Zeke?" asked the editor by way of breaking h's silence.

"Wal, I reckon I shall plaut er little, ef I kin git it housed," replied Uncle Zeke. "The niggers air so drotted skear'd uv Betsy's lingtwisticks, I cain't hire one fer eny length er time."

"Wal, good-day," and Uncle Zeke plodded towards the door.

"Good-bye," replied the editor, "call again."

"Thaukee," and Uncle Zeke closed the door behind him, while the editor picked up his pen and began to write

Tribute to Edmund Chesson Taft.

Not dead, but gone to a sweeter, brighter world above, where only the pure in heart can see God.

Little Edmund is not dead. His spirit is rejoicing in the Lord, for he is one of His brightest jewels, only waiting for the resurrection morn, when this clay that's sleeping shall rise and be clothed in its beauty of form, which the God of Heaven will then grant him to adorn.

He was his mother's idol, his father's joy, but greater far was he God's own.

Why weep then mother? Why thy soul so sorrowful father? Little Edmund is waiting and watching to welcome you home, where he is helping to prepare a bright mansion, like those he left of your own.

My suffering is all over my mother, and father. The path you tried to help me along, the roughness was made smooth for me, for I had to go it alone. There was a bright crown for me mother, and my joy has just begun. And may it be said "Mercy and truth are met together. Righteousness and peace have kissed each other."

You Know What You are Taking When you take Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic because the formula is plainly printed on every bottle showing that it is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. No Cure, No Pay. 50c.

Even the crank may take a turn for the better.

All may be fair in love or war, but not in a church fair.

Any man is apt to take affront if people talk behind his back.

The crust of society is formed of people who have the "Cough."

The Ill Wind

that blows nobody good is bent on errands of mischief in the fall and winter. It produces that most dangerous of common complaints a bad cold. Your cold will not become bronchitis, nor consumption if you make timely use of Allen's Lung Balsam. Take it frequently until the cough and the stopped up feeling in the chest are gone. Contains no opium and will not disturb digestion.

Fountain-Newton.

At the home of the brides' mother, Mrs. A. V. Newton, was a scene of a beautiful marriage Wednesday Feb. 19th, at 2 o'clock p. m. Miss Lydia Newton, one of Falkland's most attractive young ladies, was married to Mr. Robert Fountain, a popular young merchant of Reba. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Morton of Tarboro.

The attendants were Miss Alice Fountain with J. E. King, Miss Sue Newton with J. Jenkins, Miss Hattie Smith with Staton Weeks, Miss Maggie Fountain sister of the groom with W. S. Newton, brother of the bride. Little Miss Lillian Fountain carried a white satin cushion which held the wedding ring. The bride and groom entered while Miss Fannie Eagles played the wedding march.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to Leggett's, the home of the groom's parents, where an elegant reception was held. Next day Mr. and Mrs. Fountain returned to Reba where they will make their home. They were the recipients of many handsome and valuable presents.

We wish Mr. and Mrs. Fountain a happy and prosperous future.
