NOW IS THE TIME

When hundreds of men want their winter suits and overcoats in a hurry and this week will be a busy one with us. If you would prefer to shop quietly and take your time in making selections, we should advise you to come in at once, tomorrow for instance, before the rush is on, for you can then have plenty of time to examine the details of the garments. There's plenty to see here, too. Everything in suits, from a substantial business sack to swell evening clothes—from a jaunty short overcoat to a long, heavy Ulster, and each made in every fabric that is fashionable for this season.

Men's Suits, $8 to $20
Overcoats, $10 to $25

We have some special values in each at... $12 which wethink you ought to see.

Extra Special for the Little Boys, aged 3 to ten years. A fine line of Norfolk and Russian Blouse Suits, made from dependable fabrics and men of them richly trimmed. These are worth $5, but our price is only $3.25

Thinking of your Winter Hat? We thought of it months ago and we have a lot of them; will save you money if you buy here.

We have just received some new WINTER NECKWEAR, which will interest you at 50c.

THE STATE PRESS

News and Opinions.

The time has come in North Carolina when no party can oppose public education and good roads, and this is encouraging, no matter which way the thing goes.—Durham Herald.

The constitutional amendment has accomplished even more than was claimed for it and the next man who hollers nigger should be cracked on the head with a club.—Durham Herald.

We are particularly strong on tariff reform. Tariff reform means to take off a little here and put on a little there, leaving the matter about as you find it. Of course it may serve as a vote catcher, but a slight reform in the tariff will benefit nobody. Now if you will talk about free trade, we are with you.—Durham Herald.

The quietness and freedom from disorder which characterized Election Day in this community is a fine tribute to the growing spirit of political toleration and liberality. Thinking men always will differ. But genuinely thinking men are the very ones who most respect the conscientious opinions of their opponents.—Winston Sentinel.

Political conditions indicate a recrudescence of third party activity in 1904 together with a revival of old fashioned square-toed Democracy. It may be well to remember, too, that Northern, Eastern and Western Democrats as well as those of the South were doing a creditable amount of business on their own hook in the years when the Populists were operating independently.—Winston Journal.

The retirement of Senator Simmons as the State Democratic Chairman will deprive the party of perhaps the most gifted executive head Democracy has ever known in North Carolina. He possesses a genius for organization and in five campaigns in this State he has led the party to victory. The people of this State will always hold him in grateful remembrance for the past and expect valuable services from him in the future. He is the logical man to place at the head of the National Democratic campaign committee.—Raleigh Times.

Last Saturday night about 10 o'clock Alonzo Chamberlain waylaid Jim Swinson and shot him in the leg. The shooting took place just across the bridge from Snow Hill, and was done with a shotgun. The wounded man lay where he was shot all night and the nearest neighbors were brought to his side next morning by his cries and moans. He was brought to town and Drs. Grimsley and Patrick amputated his leg Sunday night. He is doing as well as could be expected. Alonzo Chamberlain was arrested and placed in jail and Jim Anthony who is the most important witness was also placed in jail for safe keeping. All the parties are colored.—Green County Standard.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.
Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for 40 years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package; all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. Jno. L. Wooten.

Ethics of the New Political Era.

The politician who attempts to wage a campaign not based upon principle is almost certain to fail. Senator Pritchard made this mistake. He could hardly have hoped to win under any circumstances in North Carolina this year after the adoption of the constitutional amendment, but he could possibly have made a better showing for his party than he has done.

There is no denying the fact that there are many men in this State who have always voted the Democratic ticket, but whose views on national questions are in harmony with the Republican platform. To these men Senator Pritchard must look to build up his respectable Republican party in this State. These men are conscientious and straightforward and they can only be appealed to on principle. To gain such support Senator Pritchard should have nominated a straight Republican ticket, composed of the best men his party afforded, and appeal to all who were inclined to Republican policies to support this ticket.

But instead of this so-called Independent movements, which represented nothing, were given full sway. In most places these movements were based upon mere distribution of local offices, born of opposition to some county candidate, and stood for no principles in antagonism to the principles of Democracy. Hence such tickets could not and did not command the support of even the men who were inclined to become Republicans.

The time for fusion and office trafficking has passed in this State. The people are sick of it. What they want is two parties that stand for different principles, whose candidate can discuss the issues of the day on a high plane, and allow the voters to take their choice. If the Republicans hope to build up a party in North Carolina they must do so by appealing to the people to become republicans and not by trying to stir up a little dissection here and there to the regular Democratic nominees.—Raleigh Times.

Both Winter Months.

A Tennessee paper says in one of the mountain counties only one man took a newspaper, and the citizens for some distance would gather in to hear it read when it came. A listener one time asked what the Republicans were doing in Congress. "Oh," replied the reader, "they're playing the dickens over there; they have passed a law adding two months to the year, and the worst of it is they have made them both winter months." "Blast their fool souls," said the listener, "and I'm nearly out of fodder."—Vanceburg, Ky. Sun.

New Buildings.

W. T. Fleming has under construction at the corner of Sutton's Lane and Evans street a residence of eleven rooms that will add much to the attractiveness of that part of the city. It is hoped to have the house ready for occupying by January.

W. H. Smith, of Falkland, is having erected in West Greenville a fourteen room residence. This will be a handsome building, slate-covered, and work is being rushed to have it complete by the new year.

E. B. Ficklen's new home in West Greenville is nearly ready for furnishing.

Married.

Mr. J. W. Tucker and Miss Rosa L. Jackson were married at the home of the brides mother, Mrs. Robt. Manning Wednesday evening, Nov. 5th, J. J. Jenkins, Esq., officiating.

Mr. Tucker is the popular and efficient constable of this township, just elected for his second term, and is a successful and prosperous young farmer. The bride is one of the most popular and lovable young ladies of our neighborhood. After the ceremony the happy couple and their numerous friends repaired to the house of the groom, where refreshments were served in variety and abundance. J.

Talent in the South

The South is full of men and women of talent, not only in literary lines, but the intensely practical. Many of our young and middle aged Southerners have gone East and West and prospered greatly in all of the callings of life, but many remained at home and give shining manifestation that genius is not confined to sectional divisions. We had great men in the past. We have them still. There will be great men in the future at the South.—Augusta Chronicle.

Time To Be Paying.

Say, put on your think-cap and see if you don't owe THE REFLECTOR something on subscription. If so it is a good time to pay it, and we are the people who would like to have it. There are a number who do owe, and we are just getting ready to begin mailing bills to those too far away to see personally. We drop this reminder in advance so if any who owe want to save us the trouble of dunning them they can send along some money.

Honor Roll.

Following is the honor roll of Miss Tucker's school for second month:

Chocolates, Toothsome and Dainty, at Wootens Drug store.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1902.

Well, it is two years to another election. Would that it were longer.

Mr. Coler's attitude toward the Odell majority is a reminder that people who reside in glass palaces shouldn't cast boomerangs.

The Buncombites felt so good over the Democratic victory up that way that they held a big celebration in Asheville Thursday night.

If some of the farmers near enough to Greenville to be convenient to shipping want to do the right thing, let them prepare to put in a truck crop the coming spring.

Fact is, when an Odell man makes up his mind to defeat the other side or break up the plan of salvation, he's got to do a tall piece of hustling to out-manuever a New York democrat.

At Raleigh, November 12th to 14th, there will be a conference of the County Superintendents of Education throughout the State. This will be an important meeting and from it will come much good to the educational interests of the State.

An exchange notes the fact that "New York City will pay out this year $1,000,000 in pensions to retired policemen." When those New Yorkers do get in line with the Bible they do it with a vengeance "To him that hath shall be given."

The Aldermen of Washington have been petitioned to require barrooms in the town to remove all screens, painted windows and the like and expose their business to public view just as other stores. Good example in this for Greenville. Still better, however, would it be to do away with the barrooms entirely.

Tomorrow in the court house there will be held a meeting of the white school teachers of this county for the purpose of organizing a Teachers' Association. It is hoped every teacher in the county who can do so will be present. A splendid program has been prepared for this first meeting, and it is proposed to hold meetings monthly throughout the school term. The teachers will surely derive much good from the association and monthly meetings. Some months ago THE REFLECTOR offered the teachers space in its columns for an educational department, and that offer remains open for them to use the paper at their pleasure. We believe too much interest cannot be taken in educational matters. All the future depends upon how we educate, and discussions of subjects along educational lines will be timely and helpful.

THE STATE FAIR HUMBUG.

It Does not Represent the State but Disgraces it.

Some years ago this paper began a warfare against certain outrageous abuses perpetrated under the auspices of the State fair at Raleigh. The authorities, under pressure of indignant public sentiment, were quick at the orgy last year—for it was nothing less—to promise that the State fair this year should be decent, and they elected as president a gentleman whose name is a pledge of honor.

Purposely we have kept silent. We do not wish to prejudice the cause of anyone that is in repentance. We have known too well that President Long could not put new wine in the old skins with complete success. But we have said nothing. Now, however, that the fair is on hand—is a thing of the past so far as this edition of the Recorder is concerned—we may speak. And we shall speak first with regard to our State fair and then with regard to other fairs held in North Carolina and probably elsewhere. We shall not speak with a view to the present fair, but to the principles involved in this one and in others.

We have contended that the owners of the State fair are a private body corporate—a person in the law—and that it is not a public State institution; and therefore, that the State should not give it a subsidy. The State has no business paying interest on the bonds of a corporation, and less business paying dividends on its stock.

Now if the State wants a fair, very well; but let the State control it. The fairs that we have had in Raleigh for years have not represented the State. They have disgraced it. We have every reason to believe that the present fair is improved at least in the character of its midway; but our fairs have needed not moral improvement only, but improvement as exhibitions. How has it come about that the midway—the cheap shows, the miserable exhibitions of humanity at its worst—have become the central feature of our fairs? It is in this fact that the Midways have been vile, that our present point stands.

Has it not come by reason of the failure of the State fair to be a State fair? Is it not precisely true that instead of striving to exhibit the resources of North Carolina, the officers have striven mainly to get a crowd, and have advertised shows, freaks, the midway and races, thus appealing to the lower elements, to the neglect of the resources and products of North Carolina? Have you not noticed how dilligent the officers have been to leave the impression that notwithstanding their reform they will have a big midway and plenty of catch-penny shows? For what was this but to draw the idle crowd that takes no interest in and no part in the Commonwealth's resources and achievements?

It is just this desire for crowds and big gate receipts that has reduced the exhibition of our State's life and work to the vanishing point and made the exhibition of freaks, etc., the predominant feature.

Thus the appeal is made to the lower element. Thus the more intelligent classes are not appealed to and do not come. Thus the farmers and artisans are discouraged from making exhibitions; and the sum of it all is that the fair absolutely fails of its mission. Instead of making for the State's progress, it is a question whether it does not actually make progress more difficult. One goes away from the fair with either a bad impression of the State's life or the conviction that the fair no longer pretends to represent that life.—Biblical Recorder

Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson, when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Kellar, Va. Pain balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Pneumonia, Asthma, LaGrippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. "I got soaked by rain," says Gertrude E. Fenner, Muncie, Ind., "and contracted a severe cough and cold. I failed rapidly; lost 48 pounds. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 pounds. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. An ideal remedy for children. Jno. L. Wooten.

The Best Remedy For Croup.

[From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe.]
This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and told, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up.—Ruskin.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures the catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. Jno. L. Wooten.

A VAST SALT FIELD.

How the Product is Obtained in the Middle of the Colorado Desert.
In the middle of the Colorado desert, a little to the north of the Mexican border and 264 feet below the level of the sea, lies a field of crystallized salt more than a thousand acres in extent, presenting a surface as white as snow and beneath the noonday glare of the sun so dazzling that the naked eye cannot stand its radiance. It stretches away for miles and miles about Salton, Colo., an ocean of blazing, blistering white.
Here daily throughout the year men are at work overturning the great deposit with massive plows and scrapers, getting it into great piles preliminary to putting it through the refining process. The salt plows used to secure the harvest are great four wheeled implements driven by steam and managed by two men. The salt crust is thrown up in parallel ridges; then laborers with hoes work it to and fro in the water, washing out the dirt preliminary to stacking it in mounds to be taken to the mill.

Salt springs in adjacent foothills are constantly contributing to the deposit, and so heavily laden are they with almost pure salt that the plow has hardly passed on before a new crust has formed in the furrow left. This fact renders it unnecessary to operate more than a small portion of the vast deposit.

As may be supposed, work in these fields is performed under the most trying conditions. No white man can stand the intense heat, and for this reason the work is done wholly by Japanese and by Coahuila Indians. Of these the Indians are by far the better adapted to the work, the Japanese performing only one portion, sewing the sacks in which the salt is shipped. The atmosphere, laden as it is with particles of salt, gives rise to a painful thirst, and the only available drinking water comes from a single well. It is warm and ill tasting.

Beautiful mirages frequently appear above the great salt field in the daytime, sky pictures of magnificent cities and flower dotted, tree shaded fields. The moonlight, too, produces wondrously beautiful effects upon the great field of gleaming salt. For several weeks in the year the thermometer on the salt field averages 140 degrees, and the reflection of the sun produces a glare like that from a furnace. The deposits vary in thickness from ten to twenty inches and form a solid crust over the great marsh. It is estimated that about 700 tons are now plowed up daily.—New York Tribune.

A Little Child's Loneliness.

Little Mabel, says the Woman's Journal, had been put to bed alone. Presently she appeared in her nightgown at the head of the stairs, saying plaintively, "I'm lonesome!" Her mother gave her a favorite rubber doll named Happy to take to bed with her and for a few minutes she was quiet. Then she reappeared with her plaint of loneliness. This time her mother reminded her that God was with her and sent her back to bed with a reproof. Soon she was heard weeping bitterly, and when her mother went to her little Mabel summed up her sense of misery by exclaiming, "I don't want Happy, and I don't want God; I want somebody with a skin face!"

Mere Maiden Timidity.

"Well, mum," said the cook as she entered the parlor with her bundle in her hand, "I must be after goin' away this mornin'."
"What do you mean? Why are you going?" asked her astonished mistress.
"I am goin' to be married next week."
"But surely, Bridget, you won't leave me so suddenly? You must ask him to wait for a few days."
"Oh, I couldn't, mum."
"Why not, pray?"
"Sure, mum, I'd like to oblige you, but I don't feel well enough acquainted with him to ask such a thing."—Philadelphia Press.

A New Piece of Music.

General Horace Porter, the American soldier, once asked Li Hung Chang for his photograph for his daughter. The Chinese statesman kindly complied with his request and, getting his paint pot and pencil, drew queer looking figures up and down the portrait. Handing it then to the general, he explained that the left hand column contained a list of his titles, while the right hand side bore a list of the posts he had filled. When he reached home, Porter gave the photograph to his little girl, saying: "Here's what you wanted. If you can't read it, probably you can play it on the piano!"

Nothing Peculiar.

THE NEED OF COURTESY.

It is to Business and Society What Oil is to Machinery.
If young people, especially in small towns, would form "courtesy clubs" or graft this idea upon existing organizations, it would result in great advantage not only to the young people belonging to such associations, but also to the towns themselves.
We find a great many men and women side tracked all along the pathways of life because they were not taught the value of good manners and of a fine, gracious courtesy in their youth. The result is that they have grown up hard and coarse and repulsive in manners and have not been able to win favor or attract trade or business. In other words, their bad manners and repulsive ways have kept them back and handicapped their careers.
It is astonishing how fine manners and politeness in children develop into ease and attractiveness in manhood and womanhood. Other things being equal the employee who is selected for advancement is the one with good manners, a fine, gracious demeanor, a good presence. These qualities are the best kind of capital, even better than money.

Everywhere we see young men and young women drawing big salaries largely because of their superior politeness. The fine mannered are wanted everywhere as superintendents, as salesmen, as traveling representatives, as clerks, as private secretaries or as credit men. In fact, agreeable deportment is the one indispensable quality sought after everywhere.
There is nothing else which will so quickly open the door to opportunities, to society, to the hearts of all.
Courtesy is to business and society what oil is to machinery. It makes things run smoothly, for it eliminates the jar and friction and the nerve racking noise.—Success.

A GOOD CHANCE TO BUY.

But He Hadn't the Nerve to Pay the Price Demanded.
A handsome bachelor of Baltimore, well known in social and educational circles, acknowledges the truth of the following story: He was driving with a very pretty and attractive young woman when on the outskirts of the city they met a lad of about twelve years leading by a chain a singularly ugly but finely bred bull terrier. The pretty girl went into raptures over the dog, and her escort determined the animal should be hers.
"Say, sonny," he called, "what will you take for your dog?"
"Nawthing," replied the lad.
"Nonsense," cried Mr. Blank, "Here's $5 for him."
"No, I won't. This here dog ain't for sale."
"Ten," said Mr. Blank, and then, growing desperate, "fifteen, twenty." But the owner still refused.
All the time the conversation was going on the youth, although talking to the man in the buggy, kept his eyes fixed on the other occupant of the vehicle, and at last he said gravely:
"I don't want yer money, but if you'll just give that lady there a kiss you may have the dog."
Mr. Blank was speechless. He stared at the boy an instant and then put the whip to his horse, starting him off at a run.
The story goes that a mile was gone over without a word being spoken, when as the horse's rapid gait became slower as it turned down a country lane the pretty girl turned ever so slightly and said shyly, "Oh, Mr. Blank, why didn't you buy that dog?"—Baltimore Sun.

Man's Influence.

The only responsibility that a man cannot evade in this life is the one he thinks of least, his personal influence. Man's conscious influence when he is on dress parade, when he is posing to impress those around him, is woefully small, but his unconscious influence, the silent, subtle radiation of his personality, the effect of his words and acts, the trifles he never considers, is tremendous. Every moment of life he is changing to a degree the life of the whole world. Every man has an atmosphere which is affecting every other. So silently and unconsciously is this influence working that man may forget that it exists.—W. G. Jordan.

Material For a Whole Chapter.

"Have you—aw—ever thought what you would do," asked the literary foreigner as his cable train entered the tunnel, "if this structure should cave in when you were about half way through?"
"Often," replied the Chicago man. "I should demand the return of my nickel."
And the literary foreigner made a memorandum in his notebook. He had discovered another interesting peculiarity in Americans.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A German Custom.

In some parts of Germany the girls have a pretty custom in which the queen of flowers plays a part. If a girl has several suitors and wishes to know which of them would be true to her, she takes rose petals and drops them into a bowl of water, giving each the name of one of her admirers. The leaf that remains floating longest represents the man whose faithfulness she may rely on and whom she would therefore do well to choose.

A Prejudiced Opinion.

"Is it true that men of genius do not know the value of money?"
"I'm afraid it is," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Most men of genius see so little of it that they never have a chance to form any definite ideas on the subject."—Washington Star.

"Crossett's"

$3, $3.50, $4 and $5 Line

is the line of Shoes that has created so much shoe talk in Greenville and vicinity. It takes all kinds of men to make a world, and all kinds of shoes to please them. Still they all can be suited with the famous "Crossett." It is an entirely different construction from the ordinary shoe. It is fitted to the foot, not to the toe and heel, but around the instep. It gives free play to the ball of the foot, yet the foot cannot slip forward in the shoe, being held firmly at the "waist" or arch of the instep. We have all leathers and all styles.

WHAT WAS IT?

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

When it was announced in the City of Mexico that three Americans were going to pass a night in the old Pilar mansion, there was great astonishment. They were Hall, Peters and Townsend, and had wagered a dinner that they would do this.

Many years ago the Marquis del Pilar built a beautiful house in the city and its duplicate in the country, where he lived with his beautiful wife. One day two people were found torn to pieces in the saloon of the country house, with finger marks on their throats. The whole country was shocked, but the perpetrators were not discovered. After that the Pillars were gradually exterminated.

Then came a young heir with a friend who decided to investigate the place. The next day they were found flung out upon the terrace before the house, dead.

That was the last. The city had investigated, the government had investigated, the old place had been ransacked, thousands of dollars expended, but to no avail, and for ten years no one had gone near the place, and the story was seldom mentioned, but every street gambler in the city could tell you all about it.

At 5:30 o'clock of the day of the wager the trio of Americans were escorted out to the grewsome ruins by a party of half a dozen who were to return in carriages at sunrise if receiving no word meantime. After a lot of chaff in regard to the coming dinner they shook hands, the Mexicans locked the gates, and the Americans picked up a hamper they had had filled, shouldered a roll of blankets and, with laughing adieus, went down the dusky avenue to meet their fate.

At 6 o'clock the next morning the same carriages, supplemented by half a dozen more loaded with gay young men from the Jockey club, drew up before the entrance, and their shouts shook the heavy gates as they swarmed about while the man with the key fumbled with the rusty lock and looked anxiously toward the silent house.

At the turn of the drive in front of the great door they found Hall. He had been thrown under the spreading branches of a silvery green pine, and when they drew him gently out and laid him on the graveled walk his heart was still beating, but his neck was frightfully discolored and his tongue, black and swollen, protruded between his teeth.

The house was found tightly closed, and not until the authorities were sent for could they force the door open. They were locked on the inside, and when the great door that led to the saloon was forced the chain was in its place, as was the case with the door by the mantelpiece. The shutters were also tightly closed, and a small fire still burned upon the hearth.

Peters and Townsend were inside the great room—that there was left of them. But no man could say which was which. Hall was taken to the hospital and everything possible done for him, but it was fifteen days before the light of reason came back to the bold eyes; and at the first look the doctor knew, it was but the light before eternal darkness.

The police and detectives had exhausted themselves in their efforts to unravel the mystery, and a company of soldiers guarded the fatal house. Then came the day when the wounded man opened his eyes, and the doctor saw in their blue depths the glorious light of reason side by side with the black shadow of the unknowable, and, seeing, kept his promise to notify the authorities.

The large room was bright and sunny, and very quiet. A dozen distinguished looking men stood about a small iron cot on which lay a tall, blond man with a death white face. Beside him sat the doctor, who gave him an occasional stimulant. On the opposite side at a small table sat a notary, prepared to write. In a chair at the head of the bed sat a gray haired old man with a grief stricken countenance.

"Yes; I remember what took place on the night of Aug. 8, 1884," replied the patient when gently questioned. "My companions and myself left the gate after seeing it locked. We went down the avenue, entered the house, and after lighting some candles and building a fire in the big fireplace in the saloon, where we were to spend the night, we decided to explore the place.

"It was quite empty. We found nothing of interest. We returned to the room on the ground floor. The fire was burning all right, and we sat about smoking and telling stories until about 10:30, when we ate the lunch we had brought along. After that we took one more look about the room. It was oblong in shape, with large windows at both ends. They had heavy shutters inside and strong bars outside. Then there was the door through which we had entered from the hall. It had a big lock, which we fastened, and also a chain which hooked across the whole door. Near the fireplace was another door, evidently leading to the garden, which was locked and chained. There was nothing else. It was very quiet. The boys spread their blankets in front of the fire, and I put mine near the end of the fireplace and sat with my back against the wall. We talked and smoked until 1 o'clock. I remember looking at my watch. Then I felt an overpowering desire to sleep. The boys were snoring. I caught myself dozing two or three times, and then suddenly I felt a blast of cold air, the candles went out, a hand was on my throat, and I saw—I saw!"

The white figure in the bed rose to a sitting posture, the whole face was convulsed with terror, the arms thrown forward as though to ward off some hideous thing, and without a word he was dead. M. QUAD.

HUMOR IN HORSES.

Story of an Animal That Has More Than Its Share.

Only those who are unfamiliar with animals doubt that they have a sense of humor. Jimmy is a lively road horse who has ideas of his own and very original conceptions of what is amusing. One day the children had erected a small tent on the lawn and sat within it drinking lemonade and playing that they were banditti. Jimmy walked softly up to the side of the tent and slowly inserted his nose through a convenient slit, says Our Dumb Animals. Eyes and ears followed and, his head once within at the back of the unsuspecting revelers, Jimmy gave one tremendous sneeze of that kind which is half a snort.

The banditti fell back in every direction, and the horse, withdrawing from the tent, laughed silently to himself before going back to his grass cropping. Jimmy's favorite amusement is that of scattering a flock of sheep. When he is feeding with them in the pasture, he suddenly stops eating and then dashes among them, sending them scudding over the hillside. Then he stands watching them until they again settle to their nibbling and after a short luncheon of his own repeats the pleasing diversion. Although this horse is the gentlest creature in the world, it pleases him exceedingly to frighten any one who has shown timidity in his presence.

Jimmy's two mistresses harness him without trouble or danger, but he delights in alarming one girl cousin who visits at the house. Sundry fidgetings and nervous starts of her own were enough to show Jimmy of what manner and temperament she was, and he is merciless in taking advantage of that knowledge. If she enters the stable where he stands accepting the harness in the most docile manner, he opens his mouth, showing a wicked row of teeth, and makes a feint of snapping at her. She shrieks, his mistress scolds and reasons with him, and Jimmy apparently is then repentant.

FACTS ABOUT FEET.

The typical Irish foot is flat, rather broad and not usually long.

The Frenchman's foot is proverbially long, narrow and well proportioned.

The Scotchman's foot is high and thick, strong, muscular and capable of hard work.

The Tartar's foot is short and heavy, the foot of a certain type of savage, and the toes are all the same length.

The Englishman's foot is in most cases short and rather fleshy and not as a rule as strong as proportionately it should be.

The Russian's foot possesses at least one peculiarity which is worth noticing. The toes are generally "webbed" to the first joint.

The Spaniard's foot is generally small and, thanks to the Moorish blood which flows in the veins of most Spaniards, elegantly curved.

The latest measurements seem to show that America is in the process of developing a race with the smallest feet among all the civilized nations.

The Teutonic and Scandinavian nations appear to have the largest feet, Swedes, Norwegians and Germans standing in this respect at the head of the list.

The Arab's foot is famous for its high arch, whereby a true Arab may, indeed, always be known, the Koran saying that a stream of water can run under the foot without touching it.

Seemed to Have Got Out.

A Chicago man on his summer vacation went to a Wisconsin lake resort and one day became engaged in conversation with the proprietor. He commented on the attractiveness of the surroundings and finally asked the hotel keeper how many acres there were in the property.

"About forty," replied the proprietor, "I see there is another resort a short distance north of you. Who owns that?"

"The Widder Simmons."

"You and she join, do you not?"

The landlord's sunburned face turned a shade or two redder.

"We're expecting to next October," he said, "but I didn't think anybody'd found it out yet."

French Coffee.

The delicious flavor which all travelers in France discover in the coffee of that country is got, it is said, by the addition of a little butter and sugar during the roasting process. To every three pounds of roasting berries a tablespoonful each of butter and powdered sugar is added. These in melting spread over the beans in a thin coating, which holds the aroma and contributes a caramel flavor that is delicious and distinctive.—Harper's Bazar.

A Modern Adonis.

Lady—Your partner has fainted, I hear. How did that happen?

Officer—It is quite simple. I danced with her three times in succession. The great happiness was too much of a strain for her nerves. I am now taking my departure lest I should do any further damage.—From the German.

Friday Is Lucky.

There is luck in odd numbers. There is double luck in two odd numbers. Friday is the sixth day of the week. Six is the double of three, which is not only an odd number, but one which proverbially possesses a charm. Therefore Friday is a doubly charmingly lucky day.—Boston Advertiser.

The English Style.

Frank was learning to ride a horse, and one day somebody asked him if it bounced him very hard when the horse was trotting.

"Oh, no," he answered. "I don't bounce very hard. I stay up nearly all the time."—Little Chronicle.
