Washington Letter

Special Correspondence from the Capital of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 13, 1902.

The congressional forces are rapidly lining up for what promises to be one of the liveliest and most interesting short sessions held in recent years. The republicans have good working majorities in both houses of Congress and there is nothing to prevent them from having their own way, except the fact that the party is split into several factions and that the two important branches, the tariff revision branch and that section which regards the Dingley bill as sacred and "inspired" are as far apart as the antipodes.

In addition to the tariff question, there is the great "trust problem" which the President would meet with a law under the provisions of which the Attorney General could, when he saw fit, bring action against any trust. Even this moderate extension of the powers of the administration will be opposed, however, by a large number of republican statesmen who owe their political being to the very corporation against which the law might easily be made to operate. That it would be so made to operate under a republican administration is not feared, but the "business men" of the country are taking no chances on a republican victory in 1904.

Another factor which promises to contribute largely to the prospective gayety is the speakership contest. As the champion of "high and higher" tariff schedules. Representative Dalzell is gaining many supporters in the east. Representative Babcock, who says that the republican victory in the west was gained on the positive pledge that the tariff would be reduced, expects to gain the support of the western delegations who recognize tariff revision as the only element which can save them from utter defeat two years hence. Representative Cannon of Illinois, whose position on the tariff is not well defined is making a strenuous fight on his own account and hopes to be the compromise candidate.

Senator Dubois, who returned to Washington this week, tells your correspondent that the republican victory in the west was clearly due to the gratitude of the western people to the President for having urged the necessity of the irrigation of the arid lands on Congress and for having signed the Hansbrough-Newlands bill. He considers that the same bill saved Nevada to the democrats as the people felt they owed a warm endorsement to Mr. Newlands for his excellent work in behalf of the bill. The Senator is not positive in his assertion that, in view of the feeling of the people on this subject, this year's elections cannot be regarded as in any way indicative of western sentiment on national issues.

The notorious ship-subsidy bill is again heard of on all sides. It is said that the advisability of its passage will be considered by the republicans in a caucus to be held early in the session. It is recognized that the measure is most unpopular with the majority of the voters, but its advocates urge that if it is passed immediately after Congress convenes, the people will have forgotten all about it before another election take place and the pressure to pass the iniquitous measure is most urgent.

Grave anxiety is felt in administration circles over the miscarriage of the plans of the President and the Attorney General in regard to the Pacific Cable. It will be remembered that the President, through the Department of Justice, drew up a schedule of rules under which the cable was to be operated which was received with approval by the statesmen and financiers of the country. The Commercial Pacific Cable Company has utterly failed to take cognizance of the administration's communication and rumors are constantly received to the effect that when completed the cable will not be owned exclusively by Americans but will be held in joint ownership with citizens of Great Britain, thus destroying the feature of the enterprise and making it impossible for the War or Navy Departments to assume control in the event of war.

Take Care.

Now that the Democrats have made a clean sweep in the State, electing a full delegation to Congress and four fifths of the representatives in the General Assembly, it behooves the party leaders to be careful and see to it that State and County affairs are administered in a manner that will prove beneficial to the public. Let there be no radical legislation by the legislature soon to assemble, no unnecessary offices established, no unnecessary increase of taxation, and just as few new laws enacted as possible. While we are no advocate for niggardliness, the very strictest economy should be observed in both State and county affairs. Committees appointed to look after contracts for both State and county affairs should be composed of men who have the interest of the tax payers at heart, and they should be men who will take the time and trouble to see after public affairs with the same care and attention that they give to their own affairs. When men do this a great saving can be made along all lines, and State and county finances kept in a healthy condition.—Louisburg Times.

Horses Fed With Molasses.

Instead of oats, 100 horses owned by the Arbuckle Brothers, of Brooklyn, coffee and sugar refiners, are fed with molasses. The animals are sleek and fat and seem to thrive on the diet. Dr. George H. Berns, a veterinarian, first suggested the use of molasses, and after six weeks' experiment on two of the horses, it was decided to use it as a food for all.

Dr. Berns said he first got the idea from a veterinarian in the United States artillery service, who told him that from ten to fifteen pounds of the dark mixture was sufficient daily rations for a horse weighing 1000 pounds. The cost of feeding each animal on molasses is 15 cents a day.—New York Special to New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The gentlemen who are figuring on starting a morning paper in Greensboro on the plan of the Washington Post are to be credited with having magnificent ideals. The Washington Post is one of the grandest, the ablest and the fairest of American journals and at best could only be imitated. There are few men who could make a Washington Post if they were given the opportunity, the means and the field.—Winston Journal.

That Kansas girl who is said to have been left a fortune of a million dollars by an old fellow whom she befriended some years ago has not permitted herself to become unduly excited and says she will wait until she gets some definite information before she decides on what she will do with the $1,000,000.—Wilmington Star.

The Swell Young Man

Wants life, dash and ginger in his suit. He wants more coloring, more fashionable curves and kinks than the older and more conservative dresser. We have caught the spirit of the young man's wants and have suits as smart and swell as his heart can desire.

The fabrics are new and not a feature could be added to put more style into the cut, making or trimming of our Young Men's Suits. Prices not high when we furnish all this swell-ness. We want every young man in town to make it his business to see these Swagger Fall and Winter Suits.

A Wail.

By ZENO MOORE.

[To Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse, on the death of his Grandfather—my friend—Dr. C. J. O'Hagan.]

I weep. Not as a child bewails some broken toy,
Who, when supplied with others is just as full of joy,
But as a heaving billow bestirs the hidden deep,
The heart, and not the eye,
Sheds tears when thus we weep.

Yes, mine is a loss eternal
No time nor toil can mend.
No man can speak more doleful
Than say "I've lost a friend."

THE CHAIN TIGHTENS.

Perry May Also Be Accused of Murder in Summerville.

Boston, Mass., November 13.—The finding of the watch chain stolen from Agnes McPhee, who was murdered October 3rd, in the possession of a young colored woman who knew George L. O. Perry, accused of the murder of Clara A. Morton, in Waverly, eleven days ago, prompted the police today to direct their efforts toward a more complete unraveling of the McPhee case. Both Perry and the young woman were induced to discuss the matter today and important information was obtained by the officer. Although the police would not go into details, it was disclosed that there is a strong likelihood that the charge against Perry may be changed to include the murder in Somerville besides that of Miss Morton and that the young woman who had the chain may become the chief witness for the State—Wilmington Messenger.

Miss Stone thinks we should demand the return of the money paid for her ransom. Wonder if she would like to be delegated to make the collection?—Wilmington Messenger.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1902.

When Main's circus and the railroad company get together before a jury some tall old acting may be expected.

When the "lilly white" scheme was being nursed with such tender solicitude it was never suspected that President Roosevelt would ever sit down on a little thing like that.

If Molineux should happen to run across some of the comments the papers are making on his picture he is likely to be broken of that rest which many hoped he would now enjoy.

Mr. Roosevelt may make himself very disagreeable to those little Mississippi bears and to certain hitherto faithful lieutenants of his hereabouts; but it is suspected that he will add very little to his reputation as a sportsman in the one case, or as a politician in the other.

The Winston Journal says, "There isn't any reason why North Carolina should be behind in road laws, election laws or tax laws, especially when other states have blazed the way." Probably the Journal means "valid excuse." There is possibly as much reason in the case as that which ebbs the spinal column of every politician when you shove the dog tax under his nose.

Wilmington is having a round with the musical slot machines. It is said that twenty-eight of them are running in that city. The Aldermen have taken a pull at them and levied a tax of $10 per month on each machine. If the solicitor of that district does his duty something will soon happen similar to the occurrence which took place in Greenville last winter—every operator of a machine will be indicted and the machines will be "run" out entirely. They are a bad form of gambling.

The court at which the case of James Wilcox, charged with the murder of Miss Nellie Cropsey, comes up again meets at Elizabeth City on the 17th. It is the general opinion that counsel for the defence will move to have the case removed to another county for trial, and it is more or less believed that this movement will succeed. In view of this Dare county might be a good place in which to hold the next trial. That is "about as far removed from everywhere as any county in the State, and it might be easier to select jurors who had not "formed and expressed an opinion" than elsewhere.

Senator Dubois says it was the irrigation bill that gave Idaho to the Republicans. This is the first time that an election in the State has been won with water. Generally something more stimulating and exhilarating has been used, save the Wilmington Star. It would seem that water is destined to play an important part in the world's future history. Its use with soap for external application is being prescribed in a variety of cases by some of the most advanced medical practitioners, and a few have gone so far as to formulate that it is not only quite harmless, as a beverage, but may actually be used to advantage thus, under the direction of a physician.

How Your Watch Goes Wrong.

It is strange how little the average person can account for what seems the whims and caprices of his watch, said a watchmaker to the writer the other day, and yet in the majority of cases they are due to very simple causes.

For instance, the going of most watches varies according to the temperature at which they are kept. Consequently, if you wear a watch next to your body during the day, and at night put it on a cold marble mantelpiece, or in fact, anywhere in a cold room, the watch is sure either to gain or lose. Cold causes contraction of the metals composing the balance wheel and its parts, and the watch consequently gains. When the parts expand under the heat of the body, the pivots, bearings, &c., tighten up and the watch loses.

Of course, this is not the case with watches having a compensating balance—that is, one made of different metals that both expand and contract under the influence of cold, so that the expansion of the one counteracts the contraction of the other.

Getting the steel parts of one's watch magnetized is another frequent cause of trouble: while changing the position of a watch such as putting it down horizontally, is also apt to exert its action.

It is well known that a watch will stop for some unexplained reason and go on again if it is given a slight jolt. The same trouble may not recur for years. This is due to the delicate hairspring catching either in the hairspring stud or in the regulator pins. The cause is a sudden snap or quick movement, which gives a jolt to the balance wheel and hairspring, and thus renders the catching possible. The jolt may come at a particular fraction of a second during the revolution of the balance wheel, otherwise the spring will not catch, and so the odds against the happening are very great. "Tit Bits."

The Convention of County Superintendents is certainly an imposing body of intelligent and capable representatives of the best citizenship of the State, imbued with the responsibilities of the high duties imposed upon them. Their close attention to every detail of the progress of the meeting evidences their sincere and appropriate interest. Measures which relate to the great problem of the development of the public schools are receiving the consideration which their importance merits, and the Post is confident of most beneficial results from the convention. It is the largest gathering of county educational officers ever assembled in this State which of itself shows the earnest, we may say enthusiastic purpose of its membership.—Raleigh Post.

When our Democrat commission took charge on the first Monday in December they will find the county's finances in a most deplorable condition. This is the sad result of Fusion misrule, which has blighted everything it has touched everywhere in this State. When they took charge of our county there was little or no floating indebtedness, and now there are about $15,000 worth of county orders unpaid. Such is the "reform" in Chatham—Elizaburg Record.

Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson, when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Kellar, Va. Pain balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

One Minute Cough Cure.

Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Pneumonia, Asthma, LaGrippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. "I got soaked by rain," says Gertrude E. Fenner, Muncie, Ind., "and contracted a severe cough and cold. I failed rapidly; lost 48 pounds. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 pounds. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. An ideal remedy for children. Jno. L. Wooten.

The Best Remedy For Croup.

[From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe.]

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures the catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. Jno. L. Wooten.

SAL'S SACRIFICE

[Original.]

There are no people so high and none so low that love does not exist among them. In the higher classes, especially those that are good, we expect to find a pure love far above simple passion. But a refined, self sacrificing love always seems strange among low, wicked people.

Back in the sixties there was a desperado in New Mexico who gloried in the name of "Bloody Bill." The girl who bestowed her affections on this degraded specimen of a man had a name not less refined, if less horrible. She was called "Dishrag Sal," from the fact that she was a scullion—that is, she was a scullion till it was discovered that she was Bloody Bill's girl. Then she was told to move on.

It was in 1864, I think, that I took command of a party of men whose business it was to hunt down criminals. That winter we were ordered to find Bloody Bill and get rid of him, which meant if we didn't shoot him in endeavoring to take him we were to hang him to a tree. We spent a long time getting on his track, but when we did get on it were furnished every advantage. One evening a man whose brother had been killed by Bloody Bill rode into town, a distance of twenty miles, to tell us that Bill was in a deserted log cabin not far from his ranch. He had passed the outlaw on the road, recognized him without being recognized, followed and located him. From what he had seen about the cabin, he judged that Bill would spend the night there, but he was not to be depended on for any specified time.

I ordered the men to saddle up, and before starting we assembled at the eating house at the railroad station for a good supper. There being a dozen of us and only one waitress for the party, we were being delayed, so I called upon the proprietor for better attendance, whereupon a girl was sent in from the kitchen. I had heard of Dishrag Sal and never in the world would have expected to find her in the person of this young woman. She was quite neat in her dress and had a very attractive figure and a pretty face, though there was not much intelligence in it. She moved about quietly, but effectively, and appeared not to take any interest in anything except her work. The men talked a good deal about Bill, though no one spoke of going to capture him, and one man told how Bill was used to beating his girl and how patiently she bore his brutal treatment. I had my eye on the kitchen-maid while he was speaking and fancied I saw her eyes slightly contract, but the next moment she asked me in a soft voice if she should fill my cup with coffee, and I thought no more about it.

That night we rode against a piercing wind unchecked by woods, driving before it a sleet that struck our faces like shot. At dawn we reached the cabin and surrounded it. Then when it was light enough for us to see clearly I called:

"I say, Bill, come out of that and give yourself up."

There was no answer, so I called again:

"We've got you cornered, Bill." Still no answer.

"We're a dozen rifles." Not hearing the slightest sound in the cabin, I ordered the men to close in slowly and cautiously. We had scarcely begun our advance when there was a puff of smoke from a window in the cabin, and one of my best men fell on his face. Not considering any further waste of life necessary, I posted my men behind trees, and we kept up a steady fire. An occasional shot in reply informed us that the inmate was still alive. This was not surprising, for our bullets could only penetrate between the logs, and we did not know what further protection there was inside.

Finally I ordered the men to collect brushwood, and, advancing to a tree quite near, I set fire to it and threw it against the cabin. I was shot in the arm for my pains, and a few minutes later another of my men was badly wounded. However, I persisted and at last was rewarded by seeing a small flame crawling up a corner of the building. Nevertheless it was still half an hour before flames were well started. By this time I was much chagrined at having lost one man killed, besides the wounded, on so worthless a life and ordered two of my best men to shoot the outlaw the moment he appeared. Suddenly the door opened, and back of the smoke and flames stood a figure. One of the two men I had directed to do so fired. The other dropped the butt of his rifle on the ground. The figure sank down, a heap in the cabin door.

"You've killed a woman!" said the man who had not fired.

I, being nearer than the rest, ran to the cabin, and, true enough, there, lying on her face, was a woman. I turned her over and was thunderstruck to recognize the kitchen girl who had waited on us at table the evening before.

I was not long in framing a theory of explanation which proved to be correct. The girl was Dishrag Sal. She must have inferred from our talk that we were going to capture her lover and had ridden through the storm to warn him, reaching him a few minutes before us and remaining in the cabin to delay us while he rode away. She had saved his life, though she had periled her own in doing so. She was not dead, and we removed her to the ranch of our guide. She recovered, and I learned many years after that she and Bill had left the country together.

CONCERNING CALENDARS.

Some Interesting Ones Date as Far Back as the Fourth Century.

Among the Greeks and Romans almanacs or calendars were not written for the general public, but were preserved as part of the esoteric learning of the priests, whom the people had to consult not only for the dates of the festivals, but for the proper times when various legal proceedings might be instituted. About 300 B. C., however, one Enclius Flavius, secretary to Appian Claudius, stole these secrets by repeated applications to the priests and collated the information so gained. It was really publishing an almanac when, as Livy relates, Flavius exhibited the tasts on white tables around the forum. From this time similar tablets containing the calendar, the festivals, astronomical phenomena and sometimes allusions to historical events became quite common. They have been dug up in Pompeii and elsewhere.

There are also extant Christian calendars dating as far back as the fourth century, which give the names of the saints and other religious information. One of the most famous of the calendars of the middle ages is that compiled by Petrus of Dacia in A. D. 1300. A manuscript copy is preserved in the Savilian library at Oxford. The Sybillian Man or Man of Signs (Homo Signorum), still a common feature in almanacs, appears in this book, as it is conjectured, for the first time, as it seems to have been a survival from the time of Ptolemy's "Almagest," a collection of classic observations and problems relating to geometry and astronomy.

The first printed almanac was the "Pro Pluribus Annis," issued at Vienna in 1457 by an astronomer named Purbach. The earliest known almanac devoted expressly to the year of issue was published by Rabelais in 1533.

Henceforth the ephemeral yearly character of the publication came to be definitely recognized by almanac makers. Nostradamus set the fashion of incorporating predictions of coming events into almanacs, a fashion that has continued to this day in all purely astrological brochures of this sort despite intermittent efforts to suppress it by royal authority in France and elsewhere.—Era.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Blow out a candle, and if the wick continues long to smolder look for bad weather. If it goes out quickly, the weather will be fair.

The twelve days after Christmas indicate the weather for the following year. Each day in order shows the weather for one month.

When it begins to snow, notice the size of the flakes. If they are very fine, the storm will be a long one; if large, the storm will soon be over.

If the chickens come out while it rains, it is a sign that the storm is to be a long one. If they stand around under the shed, the storm will be short.

When the cattle lie down as soon as they are turned out to pasture in the morning, it is because they feel a rheumatic weariness in their bones, and you can look for rain soon.

When a night passes and no dew falls, it is a sign it is going to rain. This omen loses much of its mystery when one remembers that dew has not fallen because the night was clouded.

When you see the sun drawing water at night, know that it will rain on the morrow. The sun is said to be drawing water when its rays can be seen shining through rifts in distant clouds.

Brain Strain.

A French investigator has come to the conclusion that the brains of military men give out most quickly. He states that out of every 100,000 men of the army or naval profession 199 are hopeless lunatics. Of the liberal professions artists are the first to succumb to the brain strain, next the lawyers, followed at some distance by doctors, clergy, literary men and civil servants. Striking an average of this group, 177 go mad to each 100,000.—London Express.

A Painful Inference.

A teacher was instructing a class of boys and had spent half an hour trying to drive into their heads the difference between man and the lower animals, but apparently with little success.

"Tommy," he said coaxingly to a little chap, "do you know the difference between, say, me and a pig or any other brute?"

"No," replied Tommy innocently, but another teacher standing by laughed.—London Answers.

"Sure," answered Meandering Mike. "I don't have to talk dis way. If I showed off me literary accomplishments, folks would wonder why I wasn't readin' de help wanted advertisements instid o' huntin' fur 'hand-outs.'—Washington Star.

After the Quarrel.

He (to himself)—There! All on account of my beastly temper. I suppose I've gone and said too much. She (to herself)—Oh, dear! If I hadn't lost my temper, I might have said ever so much more.—Brooklyn Life.

Dangerous Economy.

"So the engagement's off?" "Yes. She advised him to practice economy, and he started in by getting her an imitation diamond."—Detroit Free Press.

Coeducation.

"Do you believe in coeducation?" "Not much. There is usually too much 'co' and too little 'education.'"—New York World.

Save the Children

All stomach and bowel troubles in child or adult are due to a single cause—Indigestion. Flux, colic, cholera morbus, diarrhoea, dysentery and all complaints of like nature, are the result of undigested foods fermenting in the stomach. "Twentieth Century New York." During the nineteenth century London grew at a nearly constant pace from 80,000 people to 6,500,000—eight fold; New York, more rapidly, but less regularly, in general doubling in about twenty years, developed from a town of 60,000 people to a great city of 3,500,000—fifty-eight fold. London is now growing 16 per cent. in a decade, New York 35 percent. While the rate of increase in both cities is slightly lower than it has averaged for a century, New York is still growing twice as fast as London. If the rate remains constant fifty years New York will have 15,610,000 people. Greater London 14,274,000.
Of course, the rate will not remain the same. It may become lower, it may even be accelerated by modern rapid transit inventions. What is certain is that New York, chief port of the wonderful republic, home of flourishing arts, Mecca alike of ambitious youth, wealth socially inclined and fortune-hunting emigrants, must inevitably outstrip London as the world's capital. Few business men can afford to look ahead for fifty years, but every one should look ahead for ten at least; and in that time a population as large as all Philadelphia will be added to New York. These considerations, whether one considers the ten years of the fifty, explain why the price or land on Manhattan Island constantly rises and why even the remotest suburb to its predestined growth.—New York World.

NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND BUSINESS NOTES.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Nov. 15. Her friends who feel justly proud of Miss Ethel May Carroll's essay on "The Regulators" published in Thursday's DAILY REFLECTOR were very much disappointed to see the name of Edith May Carroll prefixed to same. Guess the editor has made correction.

[Yes, we detected the error, but too late for the daily edition. The proper correction was made for the semi-weekly.—ED]

The Ohio Steam Cooker was tested again today at 2 o'clock at the depot.

Quite a singular incident happened last week at Mr. Charles cGlohon's. One of his cows was licking her tongue through the cracks of the stable where a horse was eating when she licked one time too many. About 5 inches of her tongue was bitten clear off by the horse. An eye witness told us of the occurrence and said that he helped to kill the cow, as she seemed to be suffering very severely. At last report the piece of tongue had not been found.

Farmers are beginning to see the point and instead of splitting new rails they are tearing down a sufficiently long string of old fence to get rails for repairing the remainder and filling in the gap with Winterville Wire Fence. Remember that A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., can furnish any style. A certain kind that costs about 2 cents per yard less than others is giving splendid satisfaction. Better see them and get full particulars.

Slade Chapman and J. M. Worthington returned Thursday night from Raleigh, where they had been to take Miss Roach to the hospital.

Miss Myrtle White went to Conetoe this morning to visit relatives. She will return Monday.
Mrs. Mary Smith went to Littlefield Thursday and returned Friday.

Mrs. J. D. Cox spent Wednesday night at Mrs. Jesse Jackson's. Miss Carrie Wesson gathered this week 8 fully matured bananas from a three year old tree that grows in her front yard. While the fruit was not so large as usual it had a splendid flavor and you could tell the difference in taste. They were sampled by several parties.

John Peele, the clever salesman, was in town this week. Every new lot of Christmas goods that come have to be sampled by the boys. It really looks like the supply will be out short for Christmas, but maybe not.

We learn that the boys of the Vance Literary Society had a lively debate last night on the query "Resolved that the printing press has been worth more to mankind than steam and electricity combined."
