Somewhat Farical But Ugly.

The old process of persecution goes on. Shortly before the election there appeared in the North Carolina Advocate an article from the pen of Dr. J. C. Kilgo, who inveighed plainly and strongly against the corruption existing in politics. He went so far as to say that there are some officers of the various denominations who are themselves guilty. Whereupon the Quarterly Conference of Spring Garden Church, Greensboro, of which Dr. L. W. Crawford is pastor, passed some resolutions at its last meeting, condemnatory of Dr. Kilgo, and calling upon him to mention names or retract his utterances. Let it be distinctly understood that Dr. Kilgo's statements were general and altogether impersonal; that his reference was not to politics simply in North Carolina, but throughout the Union; that he in effect said no more, no less, than has been said thousands of times by writers for the secular and religious press; and that it is well known by intelligent men that everything he said can be sustained. Now by what authority does the Quarterly Conference of Spring Garden chapel come forward to exercise a godly surveillance over Dr. Kilgo or any other man outside its jurisdiction? The whole thing is so unprecedented under the circumstances that we are compelled to look for the source of its "inspiration." Those who are acquainted with the spirit and tactics of certain newspapers and individuals in that "belt" need not go very far to locate the source. Without intending to reflect on the gentleman who signed the resolution, who are all good men as far as we know, we have no hesitation in saying that the whole thing is but another exhibition of that spirit of persecution with which our people are unfortunately familiar. Surely those parties who forget common charity and, in the blindness of their prejudice, lose sight of their bearings, must know that such business only strengthens the man they would destroy.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

The Firemen.

The Greenville Volunteer Fire Company held a meeting Thursday night and made appointments of nozzlemen and hose attendants. There will be another meeting next Friday night when it is expected the constitution and by-laws will be in readiness to be acted upon. The property owners of the town should interest themselves in the company and a sufficient number should become members. A good company cannot be expected if nobody takes interest in it. You will want the firemen bad enough when your property is in danger.

Ask Hines about "Fewer gallons; wears longer."

Officer Shoots a Fleeing Negro.

Last Monday policeman Joe Cress went to serve a warrant on Charles Willeford, colored, for a Sunday disturbance. When the negro saw the officer coming he took to his heels. Mr. Cress gave chase, of course. In the chase his pistol, which he had in his left hand, was discharged, and the bullet hit Willeford in the back, making a dangerous wound. Mr. Cress did not intend to hit the negro, and was surprised to find that he had done so. Dr. Lilly probed for the ball, but could not find it. The wound is serious, but it is now thought that the victim will get well, for he is getting along all right.—Concord Times.

The Teacher in the School Room.

(Essay read by Miss Mary Lou Tucker before the Pitt County Teachers' Association.)

Like most other things, the teacher, that is, the good teacher in the school room, depends upon the view point. The mother of Mary Jane who is dull and indolent, as well as fractious, is very decided in her views of what the teacher in the school room of her school should be. Why is it, she propounds, that Mary Jane never advances—never wins any of the school honors—always has to be forced to get ready for school? Isn't her father a councilman and isn't her uncle a member of the school board? All the fault, surely, of the teacher. That is the case when the public, or a part of it does not believe that the right person is teacher.

Now from another point—Miss Smithers has the position in the school room. She does not intend to make a teacher of herself. The position has been taken only as a kind of stop-gap, a kind of resting place till "something turns up." The least work that will possibly pass with the patrons is all she is willing to give and any duties that may be safely whisked aside are passed over as so much to the good. She does not propose to have her life worked out of her and herself looking pale and haggard before her time. She is a success from her view point as she has done little work and yet has been able to increase her wardrobe to a degree that makes many of the village bells envious; and if "something turns up" soon enough she will have been a grand success as a teacher. But if these two views are extreme, let us, for awhile, seriously consider what are the duties of a capable conscientious teacher in his daily life in the school room.

First of all, what is the duty of a teacher to himself? for no one can fully discharge a duty without the knowledge that he is at the same time, doing himself justice. The answer may be rapidly summed up in one sentence:—to do his best but not over work, for then the work will be poor.

And that sentence comes with special significance to those of my hearers who go each day to an ungraded school; a school in which one teacher does the work of many. You alone know the discouragement of leaving the school room with the feeling that your duty to the pupils is but half discharged. Let your duty to yourself force you to lay aside all thoughts of school and pupils at four p. m. and "Perplex no more with Human or Divine Tomorrow's tangle to the wind resign." for a few hours at least.

Not that a teacher should go unprepared to the school room—it is sometimes excusable for a pupil to miss his lesson, for a teacher, never.

It seems superfluous to say that the teacher of a subject should have ample knowledge of that subject. No one can teach the whole or even half of what he knows. There is always a loss of strength in every transmission and you can never convey to another mind all you know or feel on any subject. So a true teacher never thinks his education complete, but is always adding to his store of information. The moment a man ceases to be a student, he ceases to be a teacher.

The complaint often comes that the teacher does not make the pupils study. That is a fashion parents have of shirking responsibility. It is the duty of the parents to see that the children study at home. The teachers business is to hear lessons, explain knotty problems, &c., not to scold and bully children whose parents allow them to idle at home. And the teacher's dignity largely depends upon the patrons—whether they command their children to respect and obey or continually warn Mary Jane and Johnny not to let Miss Smithers run over them, that they "are Bill Jones' children." The teacher should have the assurance of parents as well as the school board that she will be sustained in all efforts to maintain discipline. In the exercise of discipline she should, of course, overlook much, unless a matter of principle is concerned. In fact, most schools can be run with one rule only; let each child be a lady or gentleman. It is characteristic of human nature to be what is expected of us, there are few people, old or young, who will violate a trust.

It is a common thing to hear of a convict who refuses an opportunity of escape from prison because of some small confidence placed in him. Is the youth of our land more depraved?

Nothing can influence character like character. You teach not only by what you do and say, but by what you are. Let the teacher be an example of correct deportment, let her be punctual, neat kind, painstaking, considerate, honest and just in the discharge of duty, and let each child understand that the same things are expected of him and the recognition of high motives of action will run through the entire school like a thread of gold. Let us be thankful that the old adage, "Spare the rod and spoil the child" is being left behind in the march of civilization and instead of being "monarch of all he surveys," the teacher is in touch with each pupil, makes each child an individual study, and adapts the teaching to his needs. The ways of access to the intelligence of learners are manifold; different circumstances and intellectual conditions require different methods. Variety and versatility are the very essence of successful teaching, and the one crowning qualification of a perfect teacher is sympathy—sympathy with young children, with their little joys and sorrows, which are as real to them as our big ones are to us. The true teacher seeks to bring out all that is good in each pupil, not merely to train his memory, but also his intelligence, and to develop any part of original thought, however crude, he may happen to possess to its fullest vitality

"That mind and soul according well May make our music."

The realization that "the child is father of the man" is beginning to dawn more fully upon us and educational questions are no longer confined to a host of poorly paid women and a few men who teach because they are not strong enough for manual labor. We never pick up a magazine but has some reference to the subject that is now occupying the mind of the nation. And our beautiful Southland, so long crippled and battle scarred, is beginning to regain her rightful place in furnishing men who are fitted to shape the nation's destiny.

It gives me great pleasure to refer, briefly, to the rapid strides which the State of your nativity, and of my present adoption, good old North Carolina, has made and is still making in the cause of universal education. The good work begun by your distinguished citizen, Ex Gov. Jarvis, and so vigorously prosecuted by your present able and eloquent chief executive,

FRANK WILSON,
The King Clothier.

Gov. Aycock, is attracting attention and admiration, not only through the length and breadth of your own State, but to a marked degree in educational conventions to the north and south of it. God speed the time when the tiny hand of the little child, as well as the brawny fingers of his father, shall be able easily to write his name in person on script or parchment, wherever the case may demand, in lieu of the cross mark, which is, alas, so often the only substitute of the unfortunate and uncultured. And we who have the noble work of shaping the intellect, the conscience, the character, the destiny of the future generation; let us come to a fuller realization of the responsibility of our position. Teaching is a grand profession but a very poor trade and nobody can succeed in it who does not throw his whole soul into it. Strong men infuse into their work a good deal of their own spirit and their words are charged with something beyond mere sound. There is reverberation that thrills one. All art that lives is thus vitalized with a spiritual essence; an essence that is felt by all who have hearts that throb and souls that feel.

We are presuming, of course, that the teacher is, first of all, self-respecting. That he (and I use the masculine term in its generic sense) has from childhood paid a proper regard to the commandments of the decalogue. That he has wronged no man and that he has, consequently, a sovereign right to the unbounded respect of all with whom he may come in contact, from the highest ruler of the land to the humblest dweller therein. I appeal to you, therefore, brothers and sisters of our noble calling, to stand shoulder to shoulder in your efforts to make the profession of the honest, conscientious, and cultured teacher rank side by side with those that are too exclusively denominated the learned professions, viz: diplomacy, medicine and the law. I ask in all candor, in what have either of these the advantage over teaching? A man, it is said, may be a good lawyer or even a good physician, without any of those high scholastic attainments which go to make up the successful instructor in the school room. Let us not, therefore, rest on our laurels, but press forward to the high calling of ever widening attainments. He who would, in the language of Owen Meredith,

"Pause on the brink of the thing that he would be
And fall back on the lap of false destiny."

must eventually be dropped from our ranks for our watchword to young and to old, to teacher as well as pupil must be, Work—Work. I repeat, let us stand together in trying to gain for our profession the high position that a noble self-sacrificing work deserves, putting our whole hearts into our endeavors and with this thought to cheer us—that if by our lives we add one ray of sunshine to the world, help one soul that is reaching out after the truth, when we come to the dark river of Death, that ray will reflect and light us across and some one will thank God that we have lived.

Conditions of Laboring Men.

Reports from twenty-five field agents concerning the conditions of the laboring man in this country are expected by the officials of the department of labor by the middle of May. They have been investigating the cost of living, the wages of the laboring man and the conditions of the families of laboring men for several months. Inquiries have not been confined to any special classes of laborers, but, on the contrary, have been directed so as to include the workman in every one of the American industries. Records will have been secured of the conditions of 3,000 families, which is a large enough percentage of the industrial classes in the country to afford valuable figures for ascertaining the justice of the argument that under present high prices for necessary articles of life and the slightly higher wages the laboring man is worse off than he was in 1890, the days of lower wages and lower prices for food.

In the table devoted to the expenses of the laboring man there is to be a list of the kind of beef he uses, how much he uses; also what he pays for it and for every vegetable he takes into his home. The report will be exhaustive. In all likelihood it can't be published in book form before next August.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1909.

What does Mr. Roosevelt think Senator Pritchard is, anyhow—a sandfiddler?

The commission afforded the lawyers a chance to find out what Mitchell knew about it.

If the strike commission doesn't succeed in any more important particular, it must still have credit for keeping Mitchell on the stand.

Tom Dixon's effusions on the negro leads one to suspect that the reverend gentleman has succeeded in getting on the outside of the race problem, and that it has soured on his stomach.

An exchange says: "A New Jersey man has a big alligator which will eat out of the same dish with the house cat without harming the cat." Has this fable any reference to the President and the coon?

The Durham Herald is authority for the statement that "democratic papers are again beginning to say what they think." This is—er—rather sudden. What is the Herald driving at? Suspended animation? We had already observed that the Herald spells the word with a small "d."

The New Bern Journal thinks "an intelligent white opposition to the democratic party would prove of immense benefit to democracy, in arousing it to greater and better efforts in sustaining its position by force of its issues, fully and ably discussed, on the stump and in the press." Gently, brother. Roosevelt might get hold of this.

Someone credits Dr. Parkhurst with the statement that "half of the country is going to the dogs and the other half to the devil." The doctor must have been indulging in some of the "higher criticisms." If both the doctor and the old idea about the sheep and the goats be correct, the inference is that the dogs will get the sheep. That puts the matter in a new light. As a shepherd the doctor is feeding his lambs on strange medicine.

The White Republicans of the South. "What a shout of rejoicing would go up throughout the South from the throats of white Republicans were Senator Hanna to announce his candidacy for the Presidency," said Mr. S. J. Bunker, of Alabama at the Riggs House.

"The men who have made sacrifices for their party; who have spent two dollars where they never got back one in order to keep Republicanism alive; who have brayed social ostracism for the sake of principle, are now feeling that they are turned down by a Republican administration for their advocacy of the only policy which can ever build up the party south of Mason and Dixon's line.

"They consider that the humiliation of Senator Pritchard and the ousting of J. H. Bingham from the collectorship in Alabama was done to placate the negro voters of the North. A great many of them would like to speak out their minds, but are fearful that they might get the same sort of treatment accorded Pritchard and Bingham. This is why they long to see Senator Hanna come to the front as a rival candidate. If the Ohio man has no such notion, then they would gladly rally around Senator Spooner or Senator Fairbanks—anybody, in fact, rather than the present occupant of the White House.—Washington Post.

Monumental Injustice.

People sometimes decline to subscribe for their home paper for the reason that they already take several papers published in New York and elsewhere.

Yet these same people often ask and receive favors from the local paper, while none is received or expected from the far off journal.

When they wish to express gratitude for kindly assistance during sickness or misfortune, the local paper is asked to publish a card of thanks.

When they wish to have a supper or reception of any kind, the local paper is asked to give it a free notice.

When a public meeting is to be held for any purpose, they want the local paper to give it due publicity.

When they want their town boomed so as to increase the value of their property, they call on the local paper.

When they want a new railroad or a factory built, they expect the local paper to work for it with all its might.

When a death occurs in the home they expect the local paper to report it in tender, sympathetic strain and to extol the virtues of the deceased.

When a birth or wedding occurs in the family, they expect the local paper to give a glowing description of the event.

When they are trying to build up churches or schools, the local paper is asked to give them good, strong puffs.

If there is a battle for right in the county precinct, the editor is expected to bear the brunt of it.

Thus people are constantly receiving favors from the local paper but many fail to show their appreciation by subscribing for it.

Yet they cheerfully pay their subscriptions annually in advance for the New York Bazoo or the Philadelphia Barnstormer which never did anything for them or their community.

This practice of bestowing one's patronage upon the far off journal while receiving all newspaper favors from the home publications is a monumental injustice of which no decent person should be guilty.

Reader, don't come into our office and ask us to publish in your interest a personal puff or a long winded obituary, claiming that you are too poor to take this paper and asking for a dozen free copies while your pockets are stuffed full of story papers and magazines, paid for in advance.—Carrollton (Tex.) J. H. DAVIS.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson, when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Kellar, Va. Pain balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

The Best Remedy For Croup.

[From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe.]

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, expose the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures the catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. Jno. L. Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Pneumonia, Asthma, LaGrippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. "I got soaked by rain," says Gertrude E. Fenner, Muncie, Ind., "and contracted a severe cough and cold. I failed rapidly; lost 48 pounds. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 pounds. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. # SAVED BY AN ARTIFICE

[Original.]

I was the only American of my time at the University of Bonn who joined the dueling corps. In the corps was young Baron Steiger, who was considered the best swordsman at the university.

Toward the end of the term I had the good luck to be pitted against Baron Steiger when he had been drinking and got the better of him. This gave me some renown and made Steiger my bitter enemy.

I did not touch a sword again during my stay at the university, and after taking my degree I went to Vienna to see a little of life at that capital. I had letters to some of the best people there, and my associates were almost exclusively Austrian or German. One evening after attending the opera with a party of ladies and gentlemen I invited them to sup with me at a cafe. While we were there who should come in but Baron Steiger. He passed close to me, not speaking to me, but glaring at me, and as he walked behind my chair he purposely ran against it. I was at the moment raising a glass of wine to my lips, and a part of the wine was spilled on my shirt front. I was angry and, acting on a foolish but natural impulse, threw what remained in the glass in his face.

The moment I had done so I realized that I had likely signed my own death warrant. Steiger would undoubtedly challenge me, and as I had not touched a sword in two years and he had become famous in its use, as well as a merciless opponent, I must either show the white feather and be disgraced among my Vienna friends or—die.

Steiger apologized for touching my chair, declaring that it was unintentional, and, raising his hat, politely passed on. Not one of my friends but understood what would follow, and the party broke up immediately. I went to my apartments with a young Dr. Koch, with whom I was very intimate.

The challenge came before we separated, and I confess I was thrown into a serious mental condition. Since leaving the university Steiger had fought a dozen or more duels and had never spared his man. Dr. Koch told me to think no more about the matter or I would unfit myself to take advantage of what slight chance there was for me; that he had saved a friend of his once under similar circumstances and he would try his plan with me. I placed my case in his hands, turned in and after an hour or so fell asleep.

The next evening after dark Dr. Koch came to me and told me that he had arranged everything and if I would keep my head all would go well with me. I as the challenged party had the right to choose the weapons and the time and place of the meeting. Acting for me, Dr. Koch had chosen swords in a dark room. The duel was to take place immediately in a room of a third party. Without giving me time to dwell on these horrible conditions Dr. Koch hurried me to the meeting place, but before entering the rooms in question he took me to another where a gentleman was waiting, to whom I was introduced—"Dr. Siefert, the most noted oculist in Europe." The two doctors at once began to paint my eyes with a camel's hair brush that had been dipped in some liquid. As soon as they had finished a bandage was clapped over my eyes and kept there for some twenty minutes, when it was taken off, and we went immediately to rooms in the same building where the meeting was to take place. A few moments later Steiger and I were thrust into the dark room, and the door was closed and locked.

Now, it is impossible to exclude perfectly either light or heat from any apartment. One might as well attempt to form a perfect vacuum. Scientifically speaking there is no such thing as a perfect absence of everything from any given space. The treatment of the physicians had enabled me to take advantage of what light there was in the room, nearly all of which came through an imperfectly fitted door, under which there was a strip unprotected. Be this as it may, I could distinguish the principal objects in the room, including my enemy. I could not make out his expression, but his figure was quite perceptible, especially his face and hands, which were lighter than the rest. He remained perfectly quiet for awhile, when I moved, and hearing the creaking of my boots, he came toward me. I glided away, this time without making any sound, and in another moment gave him a cut on the hand which forced him to drop his sword. Before he could recover it I pricked him from the other side, which drew him from where the sword had fallen, and then I took it up myself.

"Baron," I said, "you are at my mercy. I have your sword."
"Finish the murder. That's what it certainly is not dueling."
"I have no use for your life. I give it to you. Hello!"

The door was opened, and the party in the adjoining room entered. I had given Steiger an ugly cut on the hand and a slight wound in the fleshy part of his back. These the doctors dressed. Steiger insisted on a renewal of the combat under circumstances that would enable him to take his revenge, but my seconds declared that I would not be permitted to fight longer except in the dark room, whereupon Steiger sulkily declared himself satisfied, and the party dispersed.

As soon as I was alone with the two doctors they charged me, both on my own account and theirs, to keep their part in the matter a secret, since if it became known they would be ruined socially and professionally. I had no desire to publish it.

AMERICAN AUDIENCES.

Men and Women and Their Effect Upon Public Meetings.

American audiences are strangely alike in some things and strangely dissimilar in others. A good committee will take as much pains in the arrangement of its audience as of its speakers. An audience seated without growing is seldom enthusiastic. Neither is an audience whose hands are occupied with bundles or umbrellas, an audience largely composed of women or an audience in a cold room. The easiest audiences to address, the most responsive and inspiring, are those composed of men crowded and packed together and warm.

Women naturally do not applaud or cheer. They are by instinct more self restrained in the public expression of their emotions than men. Every public speaker is complimented by their presence, knowing that their quiet word at home is oftentimes more effective in results than the most enthusiastic shouting on the street corners by the other sex. In a public meeting, however, the audience gets its cue from those nearest the speaker. I remember well two audiences, both from the same social class, both crowded, both in large theaters and both largely attended by women. One happened to be in Colorado, one in Massachusetts. In one meeting the orchestra was reserved for women. In the other meeting the men had the orchestra and the women had the lower gallery and all the boxes. In both cases the audiences were entirely friendly to the speakers. The second meeting was marked by wild enthusiasm, the first one by respectful attention. In the second case the mass of men in the orchestra urged on the speakers by continued applause. In the first case the men in the galleries who started to applaud were checked because between them and the speakers was a mass of absolutely silent femininity in the orchestra. I do not say that one meeting was less effective than the other, but the difference in the strain on the speaker was marked.—From "The Spellbinder," by Colonel Curtis Guild, Jr., in Scribner's.

A Supreme Court Coincidence.

While in session the associate justices of the United States supreme court are seated on either side of the chief justice, in the order of their commission, the oldest in commission on his right, the next oldest on his left; the third is second on the left and the fourth second on the left, and so on alternately, the youngest in commission occupying the seat on the extreme left.

When Justice Field was the senior associate, this arrangement produced this curious result: The names of the justices on the right had but a single syllable—Field, Gray, Brown and White—while the names of those on the left had two syllables—Harlan, Brewer, Shiras and Peckham. All were married, but no one of the justices on the right had ever had any children, while each of those on the left had both children and grandchildren. The colors were all on the right—Gray, Brown and White—while the left was colorless—Youth's Companion.

No Influence Above.

In Dr. John Hall's time it was the custom in his church to use the old fashioned, simple hymns, and the singing was congregational.

On one occasion William M. Evarts discovered E. DeLaford Smith, then corporation counsel of New York city, singing with all his heart and whispering to his friend:

"Why, there is Smith singing 'I want to be an angel'! I knew he wanted to be district attorney, but I didn't know he wanted to be an angel."

The remark was repeated to Mr. Smith, and quick as a flash came the retort:

"No, I have never mentioned the matter to Evarts, knowing that he had no influence in that direction."

Loading Satan Down.

"Lightning knocked the church steeple down," some one said to Brother Dickey. "Yes; Satan's eyes always flash fire when he sees a church steeple gwine up." "And here's a colored brother killed another at a camp meeting." "Yes; Satan goes ter meetin' long wid de res' er dem en sometimes shouts de loudes." "And a preacher was drowned in the river last week." "Oh, yes; Satan's in de water too." He "bleege ter go dar ter cool off." "So you blame everything on Satan, do you?" "Bless God!" was the reply. "Ain't dat what he's fer?"—Atlanta Constitution.

Conspicuous Example.

"Women are belittled and made of no account in every possible way," exclaimed the indignant head of the family. "Even the geographers willfully and deliberately slight her. How many really important towns in this country are named in honor of a woman?" "Well, my dear," said her husband, scratching his chin reflectively, "there's Janesville, you know."—Chicago Tribune.

An Anchor to Windward.

He—Let's get married on Friday.
She—Oh, George, Friday, you know, is—
He—Yes, I know it's unlucky, but, then, if our marriage doesn't turn out well we shall always have something to blame it on.—Philadelphia Record.

Let It High.

"Yo' kin allus tell er polite man," said Charcoal Eph. ruminatively, "by de way he lift' his hat 'd ladies, an' ef he lift' it high, yo' kin also tell dat he ain't baldheaded, Mistah Jackson."—Baltimore News.

A man who dares to waste an hour of time has not learned the value of life.—Charles Darwin.

MISS MONIE BOWEY,
No. 38 Perry Street, DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

A couple of winters ago I slipped on a frozen sidewalk and fell flat on my back. On being examined I found that I had sustained internal injuries which laid me up for more than two months. After that I noticed that I had pains in the back and groin which I never had before. I doctored and doctored for several months but as the pains increased instead of growing better I decided that I was not having the right treatment. Reading in the papers of the wonderful cures performed by Wine of Cardui I wrote to one of the parties and received a very satisfactory reply and I immediately sent for some. In a very short time I felt generally better and after seven weeks faithful use I was once more well and strong. I have never had a sick hour since and I daily bless your splendid medicine.

MONIE BOWEY.

WINE OF CARDUI is one medicine that should always be kept on hand in every home for immediate use when female weakness first makes its appearance. Miss BoweY's painful and dangerous accident would not have resulted so seriously had she taken Wine of Cardui promptly.

Wine of Cardui makes women more womanly by curing their weakness and making them stronger. Wine of Cardui cured Miss BoweY. As a medicine for all women in every trying period of their lives can you think of a better medicine for yourself, your sister, your daughter or your mother? Can you think of a more acceptable present to give your friend than a bottle of this medicine which will bring her health and happiness? You are suffering? Your duty is to rid yourself of this pain. If your daughter, mother, sister or friend is sick and in need of relief, your duty is equally great to them. Many women, now well, owe their lives to friends who brought them Wine of Cardui.

Wine of Cardui is adapted to women at any age in any walk of life. For the working woman it gives her strength for her tasks and better treatment than a doctor for very small cost.

Your druggist will sell you a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui. Secure the medicine today. Take it in the privacy of your home. Relief will come to you as surely as you take it.

WINE of CARDUI A million suffering women have found relief in Wine of Cardui.

HER FRENCH A FAILURE.

The Tragedy of a Blacking Bottle in the Latin Quarter.

She was spending her first month in the Latin quarter of Paris. She spoke English fluently, with a Boston accent; also she spoke German, could make a fair stammer at Italian and knew a few words of Hindoostanee, but of French not a syllable.

One morning she found herself in a wrestling match with a bottle of French shoe blacking. The pesky bottle, understanding that it had to deal with an alien, refused to give up its cork. She had no corkscrew of her own and did not know how to ask for one, even if she dared suspect that her next door neighbor might be possessed of the luxury. The time of her pet fork she had bent on the obstinate plug, the point of her best penknife she had broken off short, and nothing remained except to throw the bottle out of a window to get at its contents. She decided as a last resort to try breaking the neck off the bottle. With a "stove lid lifter" she administered several cautious taps in the region of the jugular of the obstinate neck. "Nothin' doin'!" Then she tapped harder still, and the blacking came. All over her fingers it came, all over her light woolen skirt and ever much of the floor and window sill.

She decided to have the skirt cleaned and, packing it into a bundle, tripped off to an establishment where she found embarrassment because she could not understand questions. Finally she got the drift of the conversation. The cleaners wanted to know what had caused the spot. Fortunately a bottle of shoe blacking was standing near by, and she pointed at this and "ould" and "ould" until she left in heightened spirits, feeling that she was not helpless and that she had made the cleaners understand. When the skirt was duly returned the following week, it was dyed black.—New York Tribune.

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Breton sheep are not much larger than a fair sized hare.

The mandarin duck is one of the most beautiful of aquatic birds.

The queen is always at the mercy of the bees and is a slave instead of a ruler.

A beetle one-third the size of a horse would be able to pull against more than a dozen horses.

The greyhound, which can cover a mile in a minute and twenty-eight seconds, is the fastest of quadrupeds.

The giraffe, armadillo and porcupine have no vocal cords and are therefore mute. Whales and serpents are also voiceless.

The glowworm lays eggs which are themselves luminous. However, the young hatched from them are not possessed of those peculiar properties until after the first transformation.

To escape from dangers which menace them starfishes commit suicide. This instinct of self destruction is found only in the highest and lowest scales of animal life.

Hebridean Proverbs.

The daily talk of the Hebrideans has a shrewd picturesqueness. "Let the loon go laughing home," they say. That is, "Be careful of whatever you have borrowed."

If a person were to be met coldly on going to a friend's house, he would say:

"The shore is the same, but the shell-fish is not the same."

The impossible is denoted by "blackberries in midwinter and sea gulls' eggs in autumn."

"Better thin kneading than to be empty." That is, "Half a loaf is better than no bread."

A NEW ONE FOR GREENVILLE.

A Stock Company Being Formed.

Necessity is the mother of invention, it is said, and a new fountain drink recently marketed by Messrs. Bryan & Nichols, a popular and progressive drug firm of Greenville, seems to owe its origin to a real public want. The firm was impressed by the many calls for a fountain drink that would not only be palatable but beneficial as a preventative of and relief for indigestion. As a result of this demand and of their investigations, they have produced a drink that is claimed to meet every requirement in the respects noted. It is said to be not only delightful to the taste, but prompt to relieve the discomforts of a too liberal indulgence at the table, without the evil effects attached to the constant use of drugs. The article is called "digestine." It is learned that a stock company is being organized to market Digestine over the United States.
