Washington Letter

Special Correspondence from the Capital of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1, 1902.

It is doubtful if a republican congress has for many years convened under as inauspicious circumstances as those which attended the opening of the second session of the Fifty-seventh Congress today. With ample republican majorities in both chambers and a republican President in the White House, there is the widest difference of opinion as to prospective legislation and even the old-time leaders are divided on some of the most important questions. Tariff revision, of course, takes the lead. Senators and Representatives from western states assert that there must be steps taken in that direction in order to redeem the pledges on which the republican victory in their states was achieved. The eastern men, on the other hand, say that there shall be no tariff revision now and they expect to prevent the calling of Congress in special session for that purpose.

With regard to trust legislation, some senators say that there will be none and others, among them no less influential a man than Senator Frye, president of the senate, asserts that the Sherman law will be amended in accordance with the recommendations of Attorney General Knox. The policy of the republicans, as outlined for your correspondent by a well posted democratic senator, will be to pass such legislation as Mr. Knox has requested and as the President will urge, at the same time assuring the trusts that so long as they have a republican administration they will have nothing to fear from the Attorney General, but if they permit the democrats to win there is no knowing to what extent a democratic attorney general will go in order to destroy the trusts. In this way, says the senator referred to, the republicans hope to make of the trust law a club with which to extort campaign funds from the trusts in 1904.

As if to emphasize the evil of the trust system, the news has just reached Washington to the effect that J. Pierpont Morgan, in connection with the Barring Brothers of England, has undertaken to float bonds to the amount of $100,000,000 for the newly organized beef trust. Representative Richardson of Tennessee says that the democrats of the House stand ready to assist their opponents in any genuine effort to control the trusts and that they will give the republicans no ground to charge them with obstructive proceedings in case the latter make an honest attempt to strengthen the present law or enact a new and more effectual one.

There was an intermingling of congratulations and condolences in the Capitol today. Twenty-five representatives have failed of reelection, and the condolences extended them were as numerous as were the congratulations offered to the successful candidates. On the democratic side of the House two desks stood out prominently. Each was draped with crepe and covered with flowers in honor of Representatives De Graffenreid and Shepard, both of Texas, who have died since Congress adjourned last July. On the republican side one desk was similarly treated. It was that formerly occupied by the late Representative Russell of Connecticut. Out of respect to the deceased members, the House adjourned immediately after being convened.

THE STATE PRESS

News and Opinions.

The time of the year is coming when the matter of road improvement would be a burning question if the ground wasn't too wet to strike a match.—Lexington Dispatch.

The man who goes back on his own section always proves the bitterest foe. Here we have John S. Wise, a Virginian, and John G. Carlisle, a Kentuckian, attempting to overthrow the new constitution of Virginia and restore the ballot to the hands of ignorance. At the same time Bullock, a Georgian but Governor of that State under the carpet bag regime, declares to the Republicans if they do not fight to restore the ballot to negroes in the South then they will lose the close northern States and be retired from power. These ex-Southerners seem bent upon a course which will take from the negro all the privileges that he now has and at the same time fasten a yoke on the South that will forever prevent free and independent action in Southern politics.—Raleigh Times.

If the Republicans had spent less time in learning to read and more time in figuring the result of the election might have been different.—Lexington Dispatch.

Roberts and Smoots have the same sort of Mormonism and the same number of wives, but as their politics are of different brands Republicans will find some excuse for not being so all-fired rampant.—Winston Journal.

If it is a question of good morals some of the gentlemen should feel mean and contemptible when they vote against unseating Apostle Smoot.—Durham Herald.

Mr. Jones in Trouble.

Louis Jones, colored, of Ayden, celebrated his arrival in Greenville Saturday by throwing three full sheets before the zephyrs that rippled the surface of sundry miniature ponds along Main street. He sailed triumphantly into Napper Brown's store, so the story goes, where he selected such cargo as struck his fancy, and slipped out without leaving a consideration or arranging to have the ledger acknowledge his custom. Capt. Smith found him soon after with an unwrapped coat under his arm, and a card of braid, which Louis offered for sale. The Captain was struck with the price and took Louis into a nearby store to have the goods valued. Before a satisfactory valuation could be arrived at, the coat and braid were identified, and Louis was steered to the pen. In the Mayor's court this morning he said he did not remember the events of Saturday night and pleaded not guilty. He was bound over to the Superior court.

The Retiring Register.

T. R. Moore, who for the last four years has been Register of Deeds of the county, today retired from the office. He has given the people of his county four years of most faithful service. His courtesy and obliging disposition toward all made him many friends. We know not what his present plans are, but in whatever he may engage he will have the best wishes of all.

Long or Short, Men of all Sizes,

Are fitted here. We have suits that will fit the largest or the smallest man in town. We request the men who are under size or over size to come here before they conclude that there is no clothing made that is just their shape. We have Overcoats, Suits and Trousers made to fit men who think they cannot be fitted. Our "Stouts" and "Slims" are a special feature of our business. So, we say, come along, you men of abnormal sizes. Here are clothes for you, made in every good style of right fabrics, and no extra charge on account of your size. Glad you read this ad, aren't you?

A Card.

The committee who were supposed to be interested in the much talked of Deestrick Skule, and I, as a participant in the school, wish to announce to the public, before whom we have been misrepresented and almost insulted by the puritanically pious brethren, who, bless their dear modest hearts, could sit and smile at Sam Jones' smut while others less holy or supposed so to be, hung their heads, wish to state that not one cent of the $64 will the church get, even though we have been asked to say nothing but smuggle it into the treasury. There were several things done on the stage that night of which the management had no warning, but there was no high kicking, no indecent dressing, and nothing half as shocking to the ears of real modesty as I've heard in both the Methodist and Baptist churches from Evangelists Leech and Elsom.

Let the dear, pious brethren pay all the debts without troubling the women of the church. The Aid Society of this church paid every cent of the note due on the church lot this year except $22 and the dear, over pious, modest creatures were not even willing to make up the amount.

"Evil be to him who evil thinketh." MRS. J. B. CHERRY.

Jailed For Housebreaking.

Washington, N. C., Nov. 27.—Last night while Charles Lirole was at his store and his wife was at her mother's, Seth Simmons, a young employee of the Pamlico Iron Works, broke a window of the residence and climbing over a bed gained entrance. He succeeded in getting $4.00 in money. Several neighbors heard the window break and a posse of men surrounded the residence with lights. The intruder broke out and got away. Bloodhounds were secured from Greenville and took the trail, practically going over his trail twice. The dogs went to Simmons' home and then followed him down town to the jail where he had been confined on suspicion. Simmons has retained a lawyer and Lirole has one also to assist the town. A preliminary hearing will be held tomorrow and will probably be waived. Courts starts December 1st, and the trial will come off then.—News Observer.

COURTEOUS COMMENT.

The Thanksgiving edition of the Greenville REFLECTOR is highly creditable to both the publisher and the town. The enterprise of both is clearly shown therein.—Tarboro Southerner.

The Thanksgiving issue of the Greenville REFLECTOR was chock full of good things—a credit to Greenville and to Editor Whichard.—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Greenville REFLECTOR issued a very creditable Thanksgiving edition and it was not an advertising scheme, either.—Durham Herald.

The Thanksgiving number of the Greenville REFLECTOR is not only creditable to the enterprise and Christian spirit of Bro. Whichard, but is abundant in its contents of good sentiments. Ministers, statesmen, able representatives of the industrial forces which are uplifting the people and country, are contributors to this number, each giving reasons from his point of view why the people should be thankful. And each paper is worthy the occasion and the writer, and as a whole are peculiarly meritorious for their usefulness at this time. We congratulate as well as thank our good friend for his work in this matter, and extend wishes for a continuance of the blessings which we are sure he will continue to merit.—Raleigh Post.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful house wife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

It requires a good sized sinking fund to keep some corporations afloat.

Better Than a Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on the affected parts, is better than a plaster for a lame back and for pains in the side or chest. Pain Balm has no superior as a liniment for the relief of deep seated, muscular and rheumatic pains. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

There are several classes of women, but each class speaks for itself.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Sometimes the hardest things to bear are what the neighbors say.

To improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion, try a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Mr. J. H. Seitz, of Detroit, Mich., says, "They restored my appetite when impaired, relieved me of a bloated feeling and caused a pleasant and satisfactory movement of the bowels." There are people in this community who need just such a medicine. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville. Every box warranted.

If a man carries a mortgage it is usually because he can't lift it.

A glass or two of water taken half an hour before breakfast will usually keep the bowels regular. Harsh cathartics should be avoided. When a purgative is needed, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are mild and gentle in their action. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

A woman's portrait isn't natural unless it is a speaking likeness.

A Cold Wave.

A forecast of a sudden change in the weather serves notice that a hoarse voice and a heavy cough may invade the sanctity of health in your own home. Cautious people have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure always at hand. E. H. Wise, Madison, Ga., writes: "I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my present good health, and probably my life." It cures Coughs, Colds, LaGrippe, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and all Throat and Lung troubles. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, draws out the inflammation, heals and soothes the mucous membranes and strengthens the lungs.

Even in federal affairs people have such officers as they want. The South does not want the negro in this capacity and he should not be forced upon it. If the North wants him let the North have him, and the South will look upon it as none of its business.—Durham Herald.

A Race With Satan

(Original.)

We were in the square in the center of the town talking of the robberies. The moon now shone feebly behind a mist and again was hidden by clouds, leaving the sky as black as ink. The air was balmy, and at times a few big drops of rain pattered on the ground. Off in the west there were flashes of lightning and the low muttering of thunder.

Up comes little Maggie O'Brien and tells how she fell asleep in a barn and was awakened by four men lying low in the hay at the other end, talking about robbing St. Patrick's church at B., ten miles away, and how they set out an hour ago for the purpose.

"What's that you say?" queried Father Higgin, who just then came into the square, passing from the chapel to his rooms.

"The robbers have gone to git the silver service at St. Patrick's church at B. Maggie O'Brien heard 'em sayin' so."

We all made a rush for the stable, mounted Mike Monahan on the best horse we could find and started him to B. to give warning of the intended sacrilege. Some said two men would be better, but there was only the one fresh horse, the other being very tired. Mike shot down the pike, which for a moment lay white toward the valley, then was swallowed in gloom. The last we saw of him was on the crest of the hill beyond, his figure dimly shown by a flash.

"What was that movin' up behind him?" asked Tim Murphy.

"He'll no give the warnin'," said Maggie O'Brien. "It was one of the robbers."

"Tut, child," said her father; "twas no such thing."

"Maybe 'twas the devil comin' up to hinder him," said Teddy Gallagher. "They say Satan has a foine collection of service plate an' dines off 'em every Sunday."

By this time it began to blow and to rain, and the lightning was so vivid and the thunder so loud that we all went into the inn at the corner of the square and sat there tipping for an hour, when all of a sudden the door flew open and Mike Monahan, white as a ghost and drenched with rain, staggered in and fell in a heap into one of the seats beside the fireplace.

"What is it, Mike?" shouted all at once. Never a word of explanation did we get till we had poured two glasses of brandy down his throat. Then he stiffened up and told the story:

"I'd made a matter of three mile when the storm kem on in earnest. There was such a rattlin' an' rollin' of thunder that I couldn't hear me horse's hoofs on the stones. Then suden, lookin' up, I saw to the east a foine bit of sky wid the moon in the middle, while the west was still black wid the grumblin' storm. An' says I, I says, 'In the fair spot there the angels is a grinnin' at Satan in the storm beyant an' remarkin' 'Ye'll not git the plate, ye spalpeen.' An' I felt happy as a pig wallyin' in a foine bit of mud at bein' the divine instrument to prevent the robbery. But what's that I was hearin' behind me—a clatterin' of horse's hoofs? I could hear it between the rollin' thunder, an' onct when I looked back I saw it by a flash of lightning. Howly mither! It was Satan himself I knew he had come out to race wid me to prevent me interferin' wid his servants. I dug me heels into me horse's belly an' laid on the whip, determined to kill both the horse an' meself for the church if I might but save the holy service. But do what I could the one behind was gainin' on me. I was goin' at a mad pace, an' just as I plunged down into the hollow where the bridge crosses the creek I looked up an' saw a black cloud the exact shape of Satan's face, wid the two horns on his head, passin' over the moon. Then it was black ag'in all about me, an' I couldn't see a yard before me.

"Just as I kem on to the bridge me horse stumbled on a loose plank, an' I shot over his head. I could hear the devil shoot by me, though devil a bit of him could I see for the darkness, an' as he clattered up the road there kem back to me his fend's laugh. Then I knew he'd got the better of me, an' findin' me horse had gone lame, what could I do but lead him back?"

"Tut, man," said O'Brien, "ye've been scared by one in league wid the robbers. Why didn't we sinder yer better?"

"Scared, is it? An' ye don't believe my story? There's proof of it. Satan as he wint by me threw somethin' at me that caught on me horse's ear, somethin' that shines wid hell's own fire. Ivery-toime the lightnin' kem it flared and went out after the dark kem back. Go outside an' ye'll get it."

O'Brien, with a growl, went out and in another moment came in, holding up something hanging to a chain.

"Howly mither!" cried the crowd. "It's a rosary!"

There, true enough, was a string of beads, to which was suspended a silver cross.

Now how it was that the devil possessed a rosary no one could tell. In truth, some O'Brien said it wasn't the devil at all. O'Brien said it was some one who knew Mike Monahan's mission and was determined to prevent his reaching the church. At any rate, we were all of a silver at the mystery.

It was 12 o'clock when we got the explanation. We were going across the square to our homes, when Father Higgin rode up, covered with mud, and told us he had been to B. and given the warning, and the robbers were caught in the act.

"I lost my rosary," he added. "I think it was in leavin' over to see the way." F. A. MITCHEL.

Rheumacide
 Continues to make Miraculous Cures
 READ THIS LETTER:
 ALMOST A MIRACLE.
 DILLON, S. C., Aug. 18th, 1902.
 Gentlemen:—In September, 1896, I took rheumatism in a very bad form. In a month after the disease started I had to give up my work and go to bed. It continued to grow worse until my arms and hands were badly drawn, so much so that I could not use them. My legs were drawn back until my feet touched my hips. I was as helpless as a baby for nearly twelve months. The muscles of my arms and legs were hard and shriveled up. I suffered death many times over. Was treated by six different physicians in McColl, Dillon and Marion, but none of them could do me any good, until Dr. J. P. Ewing, of Dillon, came to see me. He told me to try your "RHEUMACIDE." He got me one bottle of the medicine and I began to take it and before the first bottle was used up I began to get better. I used five and a half bottles and was completely cured. That was two years ago, and my health has been excellent ever since. Have had no symptoms of rheumatism. I regard "RHEUMACIDE" as by far the best remedy for rheumatism on the market. I cannot say too much for it. I have recommended it to others since and it has cured them.
 Will say further, that I began to walk in about six days after I began to take "RHEUMACIDE," with the aid of crutches; in about three months after I began to take it, I could walk as good as anybody, and went back to work again.
 Very truly,
 JAMES WILKES.

Big North Carolinians.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Uncle Joe Cannon, who is to be Speaker of the Fifty-eighth Congress, like scores of great men from Illinois, is not a native of the State. In fact, Illinois is in some respects like the State from which Mr. Cannon hails, a fine breeding ground for statesmanship to develop elsewhere. Represented in the present Congress by 24 men of high ability, as a rule, 14 of them are native of other States. She has furnished Senators for other States, but not one in a generation for herself. In the present Senate, Dubois, of Idaho; Dietrich, of Nebraska, and Hansbrough and McCumber, of North Dakota are all natives of the Prairie State, but Cullom is a Kentuckian and Mason a New Yorker by birth. If Hopkins is successful, Illinois will again be able to boast of a native Senator.

Mr. Cannon is a Tar Heel, having been born in Guilford county, North Carolina, in 1837. If Illinois has made a specialty in developing the finished product of statesmanship from raw material furnished elsewhere, North Carolina has certainly had a marvelous record in furnishing raw material for other States to convert. Mr. Cannon is in this respect finds himself in distinguished company. Senator Hawley, of Connecticut, who got the first glimpse of daylight in Richmond county, North Carolina, is another of a most distinguished list. Three Presidents, Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk, and Andrew Johnson, used the old North State for the purpose or being born in, and hid themselves to Tennessee and to fame. Thomas H. Benton, one of the greatest Senators of ante-bellum times, came from the red soil of Orange county, North Carolina, and became great in Tennessee and Missouri. William R. King found Alabama a good place to develop his genius, and J. Pinckney Henderson went to Texas to become one of the fathers of the republic. And the first governor of the State. This is but a handful of Carolina's infants who reached the robust stature of American statesmanship in other lands.

"Uncle Joe" has never lost the substantial Scotch-Irish traits which he inherited from the soil of the Old North State. His rugged and unfinished ability was characteristic of many of North Carolina's sons of the first half of the last century. School advantages were meager, but men triumphed over such obstacles. Andrew Johnson reached maturity without any knowledge of the three Rs. In new lands, however, they hewed their way by hard licks and got to the front: North Carolina will no doubt take just pride in this last addition to the long list of eminent men she has sent to other States to develop into men of national renown.—Winston Journal.

The business men should be getting in their holiday advertisements. Time short now.

Notwithstanding the fall, up to a week ago, was so pretty, many farmers have not finished housing their crops. This is due to scarcity of labor.

There were, for the first month of the rural route delivery at Winterville, between three and four thousand packages delivered by only three routes. When others have been established and the system becomes more uniform, the business in the postal service will be largely increased.

Here's a miserie in one canto that will put to shame all of the woes of Lazarus. A man who finds it convenient to pawn his overcoat in summer in order to get his watch out, and puts his watch in soak in winter in order to rescue his overcoat, thoughtlessly left the watch with the jeweler to be repaired, and not having the price of said repairs, he can't get the watch to put up as security for the overcoat. Right here in cold, heartless December, too.
