A Big Silk Mill.

"The large silk mill of this place now is a certainty. Interested parties are here and have bought five acres of ground from Mr. J. Elwood Cox on which to erect the plant. Work on the buildings will commence at once. They will be of brick. The main building will be two stories and probably 600 feet in length. It is a private company, the interested parties being Swiss people. A higher class of labor than is found in cotton factories will be employed. The force of hands will be increased as they are educated to the work. Over one thousand will be employed when the mills is in full blast. The raw silk will be shipped here direct from Japan and Italy and manufactured in all grades of silks. This is another addition to High Point's diversified manufactures, showing that many things are manufactured here besides furniture and it is hailed with delight by all."—High Point special to Charlotte Observer.

There will be a special meeting of the Ladies Aid society at the Methodist church Tuesday afternoon, at 8 o'clock, to attend to some important matters. All members urged to be present.

The Anti Saloon League will meet tomorrow night in the Methodist church. The evening service in the other churches will be dispensed with so all can attend the meeting of the League.

A Hotel Clerk Kills Himself.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 1.—For reasons known alone to himself, Robert F. Madden, a Mason of high degree, blew out his brains in a room at the Central Hotel this afternoon. Madden came here three weeks ago from Rock Hill and secured a position as clerk at Central. He seemed in the best of health and spirits all day, but when his turn for duty came at noon he said he was not well and another clerk relieved him. He went up stairs to his room, shortly afterward a negro bell boy passing the door, heard the report of a pistol. Before medical aid could be given Madden was dead.

Times Have Changed.

Hiring hands to go further South to the turpentine farms is not what it used to be in this section. Years ago when Messrs. Lemon and Drew used to come here regularly with every new year they carried away large numbers of laborers, but those who come now can find very few to take away with them. There is plenty of remunerative employment here at home for all who want it, but getting hands to work is not the least trouble encountered.

J. B. Cherry & Co. have put a large coffee mill in their grocery department so that people buying parched coffee from them can have it ground in the store when desired.

NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND BUSINESS NOTES.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Jan. 3. Leonard Hamilton requests us to announce that he has found some paper money and that the loser may call for same.

Attention, Tobacco Farmers! Before making any arrangement for tobacco trucks for housing your tobacco the coming season you had better see the A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., of this place, and get some ideas from them which may be of untold benefit to you. Having been engaged in the manufacture of tobacco trucks for several years they have had the privilege of studying all the defects of same and how to remedy them. Several styles have been made by them for different parties, but not until the close of last season did they succeed in perfecting a truck which seemed to fill all the requirements. Everyone seemed so much impressed with this one that a special effort was made and several dozen were put in the hands of the best farmers late in the season. There was not a dissenting voice, but all agreed and took the trouble to report that the handy truck (for that is what they call it) beat anything they had seen or heard of. A patent was immediately secured on same. It is needless to say that they will take great pleasure in explaining to any and all the special merits of the "Handy" and by all means want to have a conference with you before you make any arrangements.

M. A. Woodard, of Greene county, who has accepted a position with the A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., came in yesterday. Mr. Woodard will travel most of the time.

The address of Mrs. Robert Cotten before the mothers' meeting (by the way the mothers were not all who were there by any means) Thursday night was highly enjoyed by all. Having heard so much about Mrs. Cotten previously all were anxious to hear her address and after hearing it a great many took advantage of the privilege of shaking her hand and talking with her. We hope to have her come again. The Tar Heel Band furnished music for the occasion.

Mrs. Maud P. Cobb, of New Berne, and Master Patrick Cobb, of Grifton, are visiting at C. D. Hooks'.

Josephus Cox, at Hamilton's old stand, has just received a nice lot of dried peaches, also some fine sweet potatoes. There is the place to go.

An old horse died here Thursday night. Did not learn whether it was falling in the well, lack of feed or old age.

J. E. Green, agent, went to Greenville on a wheel new year's day.

R. H. Hunsucker has a hen that lays three times a day about every fourth day, the remainder of the time she lays twice a day, making nine eggs in four days. She is the only one out of twenty-six that lays at all, and we are unable to account for her singular conduct, only on the ground that she is trying to lay enough for the whole business.

Notice.

After January 1st we will not sell any goods on account. This is not personal to anyone.

Business conditions make it necessary to adopt this rule, and feeling sure that we shall thereby be able to render our customers better service, it will be adhered to without discrimination.

Drugs on the Market.

In every city and town there are several times as many lawyers, physicians, dentists, and other professional men as the needs of the community require. Of course the entire legal profession is an outgrowth and a most costly one, of the competitive system. The 89,626 lawyers in the United States in 1890 were the Free Companions whose lances were for hire to the combatants in a regime of private economic war. There would have been no use for any of them under a system of economic peace. But even assuming that the profession is necessary, and that the present amount of legal work has to be done by somebody, two thirds at least of the present individual members of the bar are superfluous. A few great lawyers are overrun with work, and the masses of struggling practitioners scramble among themselves for cases, promote unnecessary litigation, compete in many instances for the privilege of planning and carrying out the predatory raids of rich enemies of society, and often find even these methods of attaining a livelihood marked, "No thoroughfare."

And similar tragedies are going on in all the other professions. Society is losing the services of scores of thousands of its best brains, while lawyers without clients, physicians without cases, teachers without pupils, journalists without employers, and artists without patrons fret their lives away in enforced idleness. Advertise anywhere for a skilled professional man to perform any sort of technical work at any sort of salary and judge from the swarm of responses what must be the pressure of educated persons for a chance to put their education to use.—Samuel E. Moffett, in The Pilgrim for January.

What the City Fathers Did.

At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen Thursday night seven members were present.

The report of the committee to prepare amendment to the town charter for submission to the Legislature was adopted. The principal amendment suggested to charter is to extend the limits of the town so as to take in all the suburbs.

Privilege to do market business at places outside the market house was granted to House & Atkins and C. C. Parkerson. One will open in the tobacco section and the other near the depot. These markets will be under the supervision of the market committee.

All applications for license to retail liquor were granted.

There will be a special meeting of the board next Thursday night to hear the report of the committee appointed to prepare bills for issuing bonds for improvements, to be submitted to the legislature.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1903.

THE BUSINESS WOMAN A FAILURE.

Rev. Russell H. Conwell, pastor of a prominent Baptist church in Philadelphia, has recently given his views as to the reason of the decrease in the number of marriages among the industrial classes in the above city.

"The secret in the decrease of marriage licenses," Dr. Conwell said, "may be attributed, in my opinion, to the significant fact that throughout the city the business colleges are turning out thousands of young women trained for the playing of an active part in the commercial world.

"The young woman of today, who formerly had little or no income, is no longer dependent upon the love of some young man she may be fortunate enough to win. There was a time when a girl of the working classes was threatened with poverty and was confronted with grave perils until she married and often she would give herself to the first eligible man who chanced to come her way.

"Now she is well equipped with a practical business education and is independent. She is able to support herself, and there is nothing to force her into matrimony."

It is easy to see that the learned doctor is in sympathy with the Northern sentiment that women should enter the business world on equal footing with men. But he has shown only the bright side of the picture and it is doubtful if the other side has ever occurred to him.

Connected with Dr Conwell's church is a large college where young men and women are taught the principles of business practice. Hundreds graduate from this college every year, and if we could follow the lives of a great many of them, especially the women, it is doubtful if the existing conditions would seem so satisfactory.

In this college, which, in its way, is a great institution, young women are taught to do the same things which their fathers and brothers do, and when their course is finished their first task is to find employment. Hardships and heartbreaks are often the result, and when they finally accept a situation they agree to work for about half the salary which would be offered a man. They take the job and one more man finds his occupation gone—and when he thinks of his sister slaving 10 hours a day in an office, his self-respect is likely to be gone, too, if he has the instincts of a man within him.

So the business woman is not such an elaborate success after all.

There is nothing in her life to compensate for the joys that are the right and due of the queen of a home. Day by day her nature develops into something far different than our dreams of what a true woman should be. Her feelings become blunted, sentiment is crushed, and as the years pass on she finds herself a hard, unlovable woman, with scarcely anything to compensate for all that she has sacrificed.

SAFES FOR THE HOME.

Surprisingly Hidden, Even From the Eyes of Servants.

The clumsy safe which formerly held the precious stones and documents of the wealthy has practically been abolished in the homes of those who can afford to keep abreast of the times in such matters, and in its place have been introduced curiously wrought places of concealment which the professional burglar would have great difficulty in finding. A little secrecy has been found to be worth more than a foot of chilled steel. The old-fashioned home or office safe is a direct invitation to a burglar. He knows that the diamonds, jewelry and spare cash and valuable documents are kept there. Otherwise, why have a safe in the home? There is hardly a man who does not at some time have considerable valuables in his home which he must intrust to his private safe.

The most ingenious method of modern safe builders is to construct a receptacle for valuables in the walls, floor or ceilings of the house. The work is as ingenious as it is effective. An expert examines the different parts of a room selected for the purpose and finally hits upon a place where concealment can be made the most effective. A square of a couple of feet or more is taken out of the plaster, and a chilled steel safe is made to fit in the hole thus made. The inside of the safe is lined with plush for holding diamonds and precious jewels, and there are compartments for bills and valuable documents. When fitted in its niche in the wall, ceiling or floor, the most ingenious part of the contrivance is then made by an expert. The opening of the safe door is made so carefully that it appears as if the side of the wall moves outward as if by magic. The spring which controls the mechanism is often concealed in the picture molding or cornice some distance from the safe itself.

To make it doubly sure so that no one would accidentally touch the spring and reveal the hidden safe, with its treasures, there is usually a second spring. The first one consists chiefly in removing a small piece of the molding or wooden base of the rim, and this discloses nothing but a bare surface of wood. A little examination will show, however, that this wooden surface is divided into little square lines. One of these squares holds the second hidden spring. By pressing it in a certain way it will spring open the door of the safe, located probably half a dozen feet away. Consequently if workmen or servants should accidentally knock off the piece of molding or wooden base which reveals the second spring the secret would still be intact.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Surprised Ohion.

An American who has been traveling in Japan says the Japanese have a word of salutation which sounds like Ohio. When he was in Yokohama, a fellow countryman was seeing the sights from a rickshaw. The Japanese are very polite, and when even the American met them they gave him the usual word of greeting. At first he wasn't quite certain, but as party after party bowed profoundly and said "Ohio" he became convinced that they were uttering the name of his own state, and he was a badly puzzled occidental. Finally, on passing a group of a dozen or more, who were more than usually courteous and who vociferated the word of welcome, he couldn't repress his astonishment any further. "Yes," he said, "I am from Ohio and from Jefferson county, but how did you fellows get on to the fact?"

The Roorbach.

Over fifty years ago a writer of monumental but plausible lies in Thurlow Weed's Albany Evening Journal signed his letters "Baron Roorbach." There was no such baron. There was no man named "Roorbach." But the absolute falsity of the writer's statements was such that a "roorbach" became a synonym for any kind of lie, especially for the kind against personal character suddenly issued against a man for his injury when he could not meet it in time to avert the harm. The lie of politics, the lie started for political purposes, is the "roorbach" most in use the week before election.—Brooklyn Eagle.

His Little Avocation.

"But," said the bright and good looking young woman, "haven't you any pursuit that you follow for the simple love of it in the hours when you are not at your office?"

The great and powerful organizer of capital stood for a moment abashed by the simple candor of a young girl. Then a ray of inspiration swept over his countenance, and he answered:

"So's mine, but I'm not raising any objections. Browning's dead."—Washington Times.

The Departure of Si

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

When I was recruiting in 1861, Si Jackson presented himself for enlistment. He was as homely and slab-sided as if he had been cut out of a swamp log with a wabby saw. I tried to get rid of him, but couldn't, and he became a soldier.

Then began the struggle between Si Jackson and the United States of America. The United States demanded obedience on the part of Si, and Si demanded that he be allowed to paddle his own canoe as he thought best. He was reprimanded, sent to the guardhouse, bucked and gagged and punished in various other ways, but he called the bluff every time. They were ready to court martial him when we marched away to fight the first battle of Bull Run, but he escaped from arrest and joined us on the field and was the only man in the regiment to reap any honor. Single handed and alone he captured the only Confederate prisoner taken in that fight and marched him back to the Potomac. Our captain tried to make Si believe that he had done his whole duty and could go home with flying colors, but Si wasn't on the go. On the contrary, he was in the guardhouse again the day after turning his prisoner over.

It has always been a mystery to the thousand men of the Fourth infantry how Si Jackson defied the United States and held his own. In the two years he was with us he put in nine-tenths of his time in the guardhouse. Four different courts martial sat on him and sentenced him to prison, but for some reason the findings were always revoked. A hundred different times he was threatened with being drummed out, but the threat was never carried into execution. He was examined by the surgeons and his discharge recommended, but he beat them at the game. He was sent into the enemy's country with the hope that he would be captured, but he always squeaked through. He was sent with the teamsters with the hope that the mules would end his career with their hoofs, but not a foot ever reached him. He'd fight, and fight well, but he would not obey orders. During those two years he never drilled a single time or had a spade in his hand. He never stood sentry for an hour, and if he remained on picket it was because he preferred to.

When Si had been defying the United States for two long years, he became discouraged. The load was becoming too heavy for him. There were also rumors to the effect that the next court martial would land him at the Dry Tortugas to drag a ball and chain behind him. Obstinate and mullish as he was, he realized that one man couldn't hope to beat military discipline forever. He hadn't been worsted yet, but it might be a good thing to quit while honors were even. Si Jackson's first decision was to quit and his second to leave the service in a blaze of glory not soon to be forgotten. Those of us who were watching him noticed that he had something on his mind, but were far from suspecting what a programme he was mapping out. To the west of our camp of 6,000 men was a corral holding 3,000 mules and horses. The 6,000 men were occupying about 2,800 tents. The guards about the corrals afterward remembered seeing Si hanging about for two or three days, but his plans were not suspected. At the western side of the inclosure were hundreds of bales of hay and bags of oats and corn for use of the animals, and the hot sun had dried the bushes until they were like tinder.

One night Si was ready for his farewell. It was a moonless night, with the wind blowing strong from the west and signs of a storm at hand. He had no goodbys to exchange and very little to pack up. It isn't at all likely that a kind word at the last would have altered his plans in the least, but no kind word greeted his ear. On the contrary, the captain, who happened to run across him, squared off and said: "See here, Si. I've got mighty tired of all this, and I'll give you the straight tip that if I can't get you out of my company I'll throw up my commission."

Si only granted in reply, and half an hour later he was preparing his surprise party. He dodged the guards of the western side of the corral and brought up among the hay, and five minutes later a big flame was rising from the bales. It needed but the smell and sight of fire to stir up a panic among the horses and mules. In three or four minutes they were edging around the inclosure in a mad mob, with shouts of alarm from all the guards. Twice the mob tore around the big field, squealing, kicking and pelting, and then it headed for a spot on the eastern side, and the fence went down with a crash that could be heard a mile away. The fire caught the bushes and followed the horses, and the horses dashed straight upon the camp. A thousand tents were knocked down and a thousand men injured, while two or three hundred of the animals came to grief. This was only half of Si's plan, however. The fire swept up to the corral fence, and the flying sparks set the first tents on fire. It was like touching fire to powder. In ten minutes the 6,000 men were tentless, with the great heaps of commissary stores burning, and more than 500 soldiers were singed and blistered in fighting their way through the flames.

"There, darn ye, I'm ready to go!" said Si Jackson as he looked down upon the scene of the calamity he had brought about, and he went. Whether he went north, east, south or west no man knows to this day, as he was never heard of after that night.

THE WOMAN WHO WENT FOR A GLASS OF WATER

[Original.]

When the Pacific railroads were new, a great deal of the property along the lines was a wilderness. It was often many miles between stations, and a station was frequently merely a place for people to come from a distance to get aboard the cars.

One evening in December a train approaching one of these sheds—for that is all it was—was flagged with a bundana handkerchief by four men. The engineer pulled up at the platform, and the men got aboard. They were for a time very well behaved, looking about them evidently with a view to observing their surroundings. The train consisted of a locomotive, a baggage car and a coach. The only passengers were two men, peaceable looking farmers, and two women, apparently their wives.

"See here, Mr. Conductor," said one of the party, "I'm the president of this company just now, and you're to look to me for orders. I'll trouble you to increase this funeral pace and snake us along to the next station across the divide. You go tell the engineer that I'll give him three hours to make the 112 miles."

"Who are you?" asked the conductor. "Who am I? I'm Simms." There was a grim silence. The two farmers cast glances at each other, and their wives got down under the seats. Simms and his gang had terrorized the region for months without being molested. No one either dared or felt disposed to make it his business to hunt them down. A few days before they had entered a town, plundered a bank in broad daylight and taken to the desolate region through which they were traveling.

"Now, we don't want nothing," continued Simms, "but to git on. There's no plunder aboard this train, and we don't want it if there is. Git us to B—by 9 o'clock, and neither you nor your passengers will be molested."

"All right," said the conductor. "I'll get you through without fail."

One of the gang went forward with the conductor to take position on the locomotive, another stationed himself in the baggage car, while the other two remained among the passengers. The train proceeded on its way as if nothing had happened. Simms at first remained in the coach, but soon got up and went forward, but not until he had called a man to take his place. He was very sharp with his men, cautioning them not to relax their vigilance because they had everything their own way, but they seemed to dread nothing, at least within the train, and indeed there did not appear to be anything to dread. The few train hands aboard moved about at their usual duties, while the farmers and their wives seemed to be dreading every moment that they would be murdered. Darkness came on, and one of the hands lighted the lamps. Simms came into the coach and talked in a low tone with the two robbers there. One of the farmers heard him say: "If this luck holds, we'll be where we can go in either of five directions. In this dreary region we'd git starvation sure." Then he went forward again.

It was about 8 o'clock. The two robbers in the passenger coach were sitting talking together. They had taken a position where they could keep the party of farmers before them. The farmers occupied two seats facing each other, the men facing the women and the robbers, the women with their backs to the robbers. The latter had quieted down. One of them got up and walked past the outlaws to the rear of the car. They followed her with their eyes till they saw that she had gone to get a glass of water, then ceased to pay any attention to her. Suddenly two words rang out sharp and clear above the rattle of the train:

"Hands up!" The order was shouted within a foot of the two robbers' ears. At the same moment the farmers each whipped out a revolver. The robbers' first impulse was to look back. They saw a woman with a revolver in each hand, the muzzles within a few inches of their heads. Then the two farmers approached and disarmed the robbers, while the two women threw off their outside apparel and appeared in men's attire. One of the two robbers gave a yell as a signal for his fellows, but his voice was drowned by the rattle of the train.

Two of the farmers now proceeded to the baggage car. One of them threw open the door, while the other stood with a revolver pointed into the car. The robber there was on the lookout and fired as soon as the door was opened, but as the man who threatened him stood beside instead of before the door he was uninjured. Simms at the time was on the locomotive. Hearing the shot, he was climbing over the coal in the tender to go to the baggage car when the engineer shot him dead. The robber in the baggage car, not receiving assistance, soon yielded to an order to throw up his hands. In five minutes from the time the supposed woman went to get a drink of water three of the gang had been captured and their leader killed.

A vigilance committee had for some time been trying to stop the depredations of Simms and his men, but had failed. The cashier of the bank they had last robbed, a very energetic man, attended to following the gang himself. He tracked them into a region from which he felt sure their quickest and surest plan of exit was to capture a train. This one was purposely prepared. The engineer, conductor and all train hands were armed, and the farmers and their wives were picked men disgraced. The leader of the posse was the woman who went for the glass of water.

A Scientific Discovery.

Kodol does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even when but slightly disordered or over-loaded. Kodol supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relieves the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. Kodol digests what you eat and enables the stomach and digestive organs to transform all food into rich, red blood. Jno. L. Wooten.

Unconscious From Croup.

During a sudden and terrible attack of croup our little girl was unconscious from strangulation, says A. L. Spafford, postmaster, Chester, Mich., and a dose of One Minute Cough Cure was administered and repeated often. It reduced the swelling and inflammation, cut the mucous and shortly the child was resting easy and speedily recovered. It cures Coughs, Colds, LaGrippe, and all Throat and Lung troubles. One Minute Cough Cure lingers in the throat and chest and enables the lungs to contribute pure, health-giving oxygen to the blood. Jno. L. Wooten.

Is the value H. A. Tizdale, Summerton, S. C., places on De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. He says: "I had the piles for 20 years. I tried many doctors and medicines, but all failed except De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. It cured me." It is a combination of the healing properties of Witch Hazel with antiseptics and emollients; relieves and permanently cures blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, sores, cuts, bruises, eczema, salt rheum and all skin diseases. Don't Worry.

This is easier said than done, yet it may be of some help to consider the matter. If the cause is something over which you have no control it is obvious that worrying will not help the matter in the least. On the other hand, if within your control you have only to act. When you have a cold and fear an attack of pneumonia, buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and use it judiciously, and all cause for worry as to the outcome will quickly disappear. There is no danger of pneumonia when it is used. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

It is easy to turn over a new leaf, but it is often difficult to make it stay turned.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

The nicest and pleasantest medicine I have used for indigestion constipation is Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets," says Melard F. Craig, of Middlegrove, N. Y. MISS MONIE BOWEY,
 No. 38 Perry Street,
 DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

A couple of winters ago I slipped on a frozen sidewalk and fell flat on my back. On being examined I found that I had sustained internal injuries which laid me up for more than two months. After that I noticed that I had pains in the back and groin which I never had before. I doctored and doctored for several months but as the pains increased instead of growing better I decided that I was not having the right treatment. Reading in the papers of the wonderful cures performed by Wine of Cardui I wrote to one of the parties and received a very satisfactory reply and I immediately sent for some. In a very short time I felt generally better and after seven weeks faithful use I was once more well and strong. I have never had a sick hour since and I daily bless your splendid medicine.

WINE OF CARDUI is one medicine that should always be kept on hand in every home for immediate use when female weakness first makes its appearance. Miss Bowey's painful and dangerous accident would not have resulted so seriously had she taken Wine of Cardui promptly.

Wine of Cardui makes women more womanly by curing their weakness and making them stronger. Wine of Cardui cured Miss Bowey. As a medicine for all women in every trying period of their lives can you think of a better medicine for yourself, your sister, your daughter or your mother? Can you think of a more acceptable present to give your friend than a bottle of this medicine which will bring her health and happiness? You are suffering? Your duty is to rid yourself of this pain. If your daughter, mother, sister or friend is sick and in need of relief, your duty is equally great to them. Many women, now well, owe their lives to friends who brought them Wine of Cardui.

Wine of Cardui is adapted to women at any age in any walk of life. For the working woman it gives her strength for her tasks and better treatment than a doctor for very small cost.

Your druggist will sell you a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui. Secure the medicine today. Take it in the privacy of your home. Relief will come to you as surely as you take it.

WINE of CARDUI A million suffering women have found relief in Wine of Cardui.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. Mrs. J. W. COOLBAUGH, Milo Center, N. Y.

HUMOR IN HORSES.

Story of an Animal That Has More Than Its Share.

Only those who are unfamiliar with animals doubt that they have a sense of humor. Jimmy is a lively road horse who has ideas of his own and very original conceptions of what is amusing. One day the children had erected a small tent on the lawn and sat within it drinking lemonade and playing that they were banditti. Jimmy walked softly up to the side of the tent and slowly inserted his nose through a convenient slit, says Our Dumb Animals. Eyes and ears followed and, his head once within at the back of the unsuspecting revelers, Jimmy gave one tremendous sneeze of that kind which is half a snort.

The banditti fell back in every direction, and the horse, withdrawing from the tent, laughed silently to himself before going back to his grass cropping. Jimmy's favorite amusement is that of scattering a flock of sheep. When he is feeding with them in the pasture, he suddenly stops eating and then dashes among them, sending them scudding over the hillside. Then he stands watching them until they again settle to their nibbling and after a short luncheon of his own repeats the pleasing diversion. Although this horse is the gentlest creature in the world, it pleases him exceedingly to frighten any one who has shown timidity in his presence.

Jimmy's two mistresses harness him without trouble or danger, but he delights in alarming one girl cousin who visits at the house. Sundry siftings and nervous starts of her own were enough to show Jimmy of what manner and temperament she was, and he is merciless in taking advantage of that knowledge. If she enters the stable where he stands accepting the harness in the most docile manner, he opens his mouth, showing a wicked row of teeth, and makes a feint of snapping at her. She shrieks, his mistress scolds and reasons with him, and Jimmy apparently is then repentant.

FACTS ABOUT FEET.

The typical Irish foot is flat, rather broad and not usually long.

The Frenchman's foot is proverbially long, narrow and well proportioned.

The Scotchman's foot is high and thick, strong, muscular and capable of hard work.

The Tartar's foot is short and heavy, the foot of a certain type of savage, and the toes are all the same length.

The Englishman's foot is in most cases short and rather fleshy and not as a rule as strong as proportionately it should be.

The Russian's foot possesses at least one peculiarity which is worth noticing. The toes are generally "webbed" to the first joint.

The Spaniard's foot is generally small and, thanks to the Moorish blood which flows in the veins of most Spaniards, elegantly curved.

The latest measurements seem to show that America is in the process of developing a race with the smallest feet among all the civilized nations.

The Teutonic and Scandinavian nations appear to have the largest feet, Swedes, Norwegians and Germans standing in this respect at the head of the list.

The Arab's foot is famous for its high arch, whereby a true Arab may, indeed, always be known, the Koran saying that a stream of water can run under the foot without touching it.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Ferguson Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.
