SEASONABLE BARGAINS.

YOU know our policy concerning the cleaning up of seasonable merchandise in its season. To make thorough work of a clearance sale every item must suffer the severest cuts. Not an item in this store that has not suffered with the "price knife." If you will take the time to make a careful investigation the economy of buying now will impress itself upon you.

Washington Letter

Special Correspondence from the Capital of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2, 1903.

By singularly clever tactics Senator Quay has placed the republican senators who are opposed to statehood in a most difficult position. He has secured the attachment of the omnibus statehood bill to the agricultural appropriation bill and predicts its similar attachment to the sundry civil and the postoffice appropriation bills. The administration senators have already countenanced the attachment of the general staff bill to the military appropriation bills and have thus established, at this session of congress, a precedent along similar lines. Having accomplished this, Mr. Quay has announced that he will not further press the statehood bill on the floor of the senate and thus the republicans are afforded an opportunity of demonstrating the sincerity of their desire to enact anti-trust legislation.

President Roosevelt's message to congress, transmitted last week, constitutes a most remarkable recognition of some of the monetary theories advanced by Mr. Bryan. Accompanying the president's communication were notes received from Mexico and China requesting the United States to join with them in an international movement to establish a standard for silver. The depreciation and fluctuation of which was causing untold loss to the countries named and to the Philippines and French and British colonies. In view of the fact that demonitization has resulted in so serious a depreciation of silver, it is suggested that the ratio now be fixed at 32 to one. The president suggests that he be empowered to take the steps suggested. He has also requested that congress authorize the appointment of three commissioners to meet with commissioners from the countries named and an effort will be made to enlist the co-operation of Great Britain and France.

Masonic Funeral.

The Masonic funeral at the grave of the late Mr. J. R. Rives, six miles from town, conducted Sunday by Greenville lodge, was largely attended, fully a thousand people being present. Eighty Masons took part in the ceremonies several neighboring lodges being represented.

Notice.

All those who had part in the play "Under the Southern Cross" that was presented last week, are requested to meet Mrs. T. J. Jarvis at Hotel Macon, Wednesday night, 4th.

Honor Roll.

The following pupils of Mrs. Blow's school are on the honor roll for the month of January:
Lillian Burch, Lucille Cobb, Allie Greene, Nina Harriss, Essie Ellington, Agnes Spain, Eloise Ellington, Essie Whichard.

Saw His Shadow

The calendar says today is ground hog day. If so the little fellow saw his shadow, for there were several intervals of sunshine during the day, hence we may expect some weather to follow.

Four parcels of town property belonging to the estate of the late Mrs. H. T. Daniel, were sold at auction to-day for division. The property brought good prices.

Our Raleigh Letter

Notes from the State Capital

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 2, 1903.

The solution of the senatorial problem on the sixty-first ballot, after three weeks of caucusing and fruitless balloting, by the election of Hon. Lee S. Overman, gives entire satisfaction to democracy of North Carolina, and not a single complaint has been heard.

One month from next Wednesday it will be "Senator Overman" and "ex Senator" Pritchard. Every republican in the legislature voted for Mr. Pritchard and he received 21 votes, Mr. Overman's vote on Friday at the joint session of the senate and house being 138.

Senator-elect Overman is exactly forty-nine years and one month old today, in the very prime of life, and there is probably no man in North Carolina better qualified at the very outset of his career to fill the place to which he has just been chosen.

This is not the first time the democrats of the legislature have nominated Mr. Overman for the Senate. He was caucus nominee eight years ago to fill the unexpired term of Senator Vance, but was defeated by Mr. Pritchard, whom he now, in turn, defeats for re-election.

LEGISLATIVE LORE.

The whiskey question, precipitated by the introduction of the Watts and London bills, and discussion during the past week before the joint committee, is red-hot and still a-heating. The whiskey interests are unquestionably stirred up, the distillers, wholesalers and retailers, all classes of them. And well they may be, for there has not been such a widespread temperance sentiment in the state and among the legislators in a generation as that which exists now. The meetings of the joint committee on propositions and grievances, which were addressed by scores of leading men and women, representing all callings, were so largely attended that the legislative hall could not hold all who would have entered if they could. It now looks as though a compromise bill, retaining most of the important features of the and London bills, will be reported and passed.

Liquor cannot now be sold in two-thirds of the counties of this state, and if such a bill as the temperance people ask for is passed John Barleycorn must soon bid farewell to North Carolina, as a licensed commodity at least. The liquor men have a number of lawyers here fighting the efforts of the temperance people.

An "industrial school" or reformatory for young and inexperienced criminals and neglected or forsaken or homeless youngsters prone to go to bad, will be established. This result is due to the efforts of the good women of the state, representatives of whom have secured a favorable report for a $5,000 appropriation to erect the initial building and dormitory. It is anticipated that a site, with a considerable area of farming and timber lands will be donated. The counties will be required to support the inmates until the institution gets on a self-sustaining basis, each county contributing $100 a year for each inmate from that county.

The child labor bill has not been taken up yet, but it is stated that it may come up next week. There is no doubt of a passage of a wise and sensible anti-child labor bill. Public sentiment demands it. The law-makers here are fully aware of

Opportunity is Knocking

SOON it will be time to say farewell to old Winter and welcome the incoming Spring. Modern retailing knows no better time to close out stock than these between season days. We have cut our prices to move out the stock on hand and here's your opportunity. The prudent buyer will read this ad and call at once. The profit to us is in disposing of goods that, while new now, would be "last season's" next season. Your profit is in the money saved—and where else would you look for such splendid styles as we offer, at such small prices? Reductions touch all Clothing, Hats and Haberdashery—Boys' and Men's.

Don't let this opportunity get away from you.

FRANK WILSON,

that fact, and they will enact the law when the time comes, be it next week or later.

Now that the senatorship is settled the legislature will get down more earnestly and systematically to work. It is really astonishing how many "bills," of all sorts, can be originated in the fertile brains of these law-makers, especially the "new member." Of course a large percentage of them are killed and many never get beyond the committee-rooms.

The question of who shall be the next governor of North Carolina—in other words, the democratic nominee next year—is being discussed by the legislators and other visitors to the capital, so many of whom have been here during the last three weeks. The names of Col. John S. Cunningham of Person, R. B. Glenn of Forsyth, W. D. Turner of Iredell, T. F. Davidson of Buncombe and Julian S. Carr of Durham are already "mentioned" by "many voters" and "Vox Populi" writers. Gen Carr, however, states that he is not a candidate—but that does not mean that, if his friends insist on nominating him, he will not accept the nomination.

Killed By Plumbers.

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—Through the act of two plumbers, George F. Scott, of Newbern, N. C., was today killed by gas in his room at No. 1121 Green street. Scott was ill in bed and asleep. In the room was a gas radiator, lighted. Plumbers went to the house to put in a gas stove in the kitchen. Before they began operations they turned off the gas. Having put in the stove they turned the gas on and in a few minutes Scott's room filled with deadly fumes, which escaped through the burners of radiator. One of the boarders who went to the room to call on the sick man was the first to learn of the fatal blunder of the plumbers. A physician was sent for, but when he arrived the victim was dead. Scott had been employed by the United Gas Improvement Company and had been here only a short time and was to have been married in the near future.

Sheff O. W. Harrington advertised an execution sale in the case of Armstrong, Cator & Co. vs. Mary L. Hellen.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1903.

THE NEXT ACT—IMPEACHMENT.

A few more such scenes in official life in Washington as have lately disgraced the nation and earned for the president the contempt of decent people, and it will become the imperative duty of the congress of the United States to impeach President Roosevelt.

No one save a hopeless partisan of the president can doubt that the fire brand speech of the negro Jim Hayes was a result of the fantastic idiocy of the bull headed warrior who dishonors and degrades the seat of Washington and Lincoln. So long as Roosevelt care to associate with negroes, and it ends there, no particular harm is done, but when, as a result of the president's virtually declaring that negroes are the social equals of white people, a negro office holder under the federal government advises his race to rise in arms and lay the South waste with sword and flame, it is time to snatch the rip-roaring rough rider from the high place he disgraces.

We honestly believe that the president of the United States is insane upon the question of negro equality, and that his presence in the White House is a danger to the country. So we say that if he continues to try the patience of decent people with his impossible policies and projects of negro equality, it is the duty of congress to place him where he can do less harm.

We are indebted to the Greene County Standard for the following grammatical contortion:

"The mail will of course be carried out by the Rural mail man from this office, to those that has boxes, and them that has no box will have to come here for their mail."

"The tobacco fever has reached this section," says the Southport Standard. It must have come from a certain pipe we remember—one that is strong enough to throw a fever away beyanst Southport.

The Raleigh Post will take notice that Barkis is willin': Messrs. Cleveland, Onley, and other disgruntled reorganizationists held another ante-presidential conference in New York recently.

The most creditable monument that South Carolina can raise to the memory of Editor Gonzales would be a gibbet and Jim Tillman hanging therefrom.

Isn't it about time for republican explanationists to charge the recent terrible loss of life in railroad wrecks to Cleveland's second administration?

Crum is not going to get his crumb as collector of customs at Charleston. It is said that some of the Republican senators will oppose his confirmation.

Mullen, Charlotte's postmaster, has squared himself with the post-office department. They found him not guilty but told him not to do it again.

Of course we are in favor of a statue of General Lee at Washington, but we are not so anxious to have Northern people erect it.

Germany ought to have a reformatory for princes and princesses who can't get along without other peoples wives and husbands.

A true friend of President Roosevelt would advise him to go back to his old job as police commissioner in New York.

If the negro's fool friends do not harm the negro to the extent of their ability it will not be the fault of said F. F.

There is so much satisfaction over Overman's election it's difficult to realize there was any opposition.

Just because it has nothing else to do the legislature of Missouri is carving out a Jim Crow law of its own.

The headline, "The London Bill Endorsed" has been doing strenuous duty in the state papers lately.

No, Jessie dear, a woman's mind is not to be judged by the time it takes her to to make it up.

We wish Bill Bailey would come and put an end to that whining nuisance of a song.

If the average reformer had some other occupation he wouldn't be sat upon so often.

The legislature will now begin to do nothing in earnest.

The Greenville REFLECTOR, referring to the lobby of lawyers employed by the whiskey interests to prevent the enactment of the Watts or London bills, says that a lawyer has a right to accept a fee and work for the whiskey interest. THE REFLECTOR goes on to say: "Those who do so are, for a price, selling their influence against morality and temperance, and are helping to fasten upon their people and their state the greatest evil in existence. They may have the legal right to do this, but they have not the moral right. THE REFLECTOR is frank to say that every lawyer who will thus sell his influence to an evil that is so great a curse to humanity, ought to be marked by every advocate of temperance, and should be reminded of it if he ever comes before the public seeking suffrage. The people are in earnest in their determination to rid North Carolina of saloons, and the lawyer, or anyone else, who throws himself in the way of this movement should take the consequences." This is strong language and is given here to show the strong feeling which exists in Eastern North Carolina.—Asheboro Courier.

A New England lassie dislocated her jaw last week singing "O Promise Me." The only trouble is that it won't always produce the same effect.—Winston Sentinel.

An Arkansas newspaper is printing poetry from the pen of Samuel Miggs Muggles. Sakes alive! What a name for a poet. But perhaps he isn't.—Durham Sun.

THE LITTLE LACE SMUGGLER

[Original.]
Little Gretchen Lahmer of Brussels, Belgium, was coming to America. She was advised by a business acquaintance to put several hundred dollars which she had saved beyond her passage money into the beautiful lace made in her city and carry it with her to New York. If she could get it through the custom house free of duty, she would add considerably to her little capital. She was informed that nothing one wears is durable. Therefore after purchasing some white and black lace she set about decorating her clothing with it in such fashion that it would not likely be noticed by the custom-house officials. With the black lace she trimmed her mantle, putting on, of course, a profusion, while the white was made into bouffees on her dress beneath.
Gretchen crossed the ocean in the sweet summer time, when it was delightful to sit on deck and watch the green waves, the gulls and the blue heavens far ashore by day and the starry dome by night. Besides, the moon was at the full and, beginning with the twilight, rose later every evening. Gretchen was alone, but a young man, an invalid, on the first day out sat in his steamer chair near her and formed her acquaintance. Though the weather was warm, he was invariably wrapped in an ulster. He told Gretchen that he had dropsy.
Gretchen, lonely herself, understood more perfectly the feelings of this young man, who was not only unattended, but ill. She therefore devoted herself to him. Every morning at 10 o'clock when the weather was fine—and it was fine throughout the voyage—she would place the young man's chair for him in a sheltered nook, cover him with rugs, talk to him, read to him and in every way in her power contribute to his comfort. The invalid seemed profoundly grateful for these attentions. When she put a pillow under his head, he would look into her eyes what was more than gratitude. He regretted that he could make no return for her attention except help to improve her English, which was very imperfect. It is but natural that with the language of love passing between, for Gretchen was becoming attached to her charge, they should get on rapidly with mere commonplace expressions. The young man had had a good education in the public schools and seemed quite ambitious to succeed in life. This made Gretchen's heart bleed for him. She would wrap his ulster more closely about him, and he would look up with that grateful, languid smile so touching in an invalid.
When they approached New York, Gretchen began to be worried about her lace. She craved sympathy and confided her secret to her friend. He reassured her by telling her that if she would go ashore with him he would look out for some of the officials whom he knew and each try to distract their attention from her or, if they noticed her superfluous finery, persuade them to let her go unmolested. She gladly accepted his offer and when the ship was docked supported him, still wrapped in his ulster, down the gangplank.
"Wait here a moment," he said, "and I will see if I can find a friend among these customs officers."
The invalid approached an inspector and said to him:
"What is there in it for me if I put you on to a woman who is smuggling lace?"
The officer arranged that he should receive the value of such information, and the two approached Gretchen.
"There she is," said the invalid, and the officer forthwith turned poor Gretchen over to a woman who searched her thoroughly and confiscated every yard of her precious lace. This was nothing to Gretchen compared with the shock the man's treachery caused her. She left the dock weeping. But it was not for her little savings. It was for the image she had set up in her heart, which had been so roughly broken.
The next day Gretchen received a card at her boarding house with the name upon it of "Charles Turner Whitman." She had never heard of such a person and thought there must be some mistake. However, she went down into the parlor, and who should be there but the invalid, but an invalid no longer. His chalky complexion had become ruddy, his step was quick and strong, his whole appearance cheery. As soon as Gretchen saw him she turned to leave the room, but he caught her and brought her back.
"Wait, little sweetheart, till I explain. When we went ashore yesterday I had on me a small fortune in lace. My legs, body and arms were wrapped with it. If I succeeded in getting it in without confiscation, it would be the last of several such efforts and complete the amount I determined to make before discontinuing a practice which I cordially detest. No sorer way of passing the officials unsuspected could be devised than directing their attention to some one else. Your few yards were nothing to the hundreds I had on me. You were kind to me on the trip, and you have been the means of my completing my work undiscovered. Share my snug fortune with me. Be my wife, and together we will enter upon a career less risky and discreditable than smuggling."
It was some time before Gretchen could recover from the shock she had received. Then she smilingly agreed to take the matter into consideration. Evidence was forthcoming that there was nothing against her lover but the several smuggling trips referred to, and she at last consented to marry him. With the proceeds of his trips abroad they set up a small shop and lived happily. GLADYS HARRINGTON.

A Prison Tragedy

[Copyright 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]
One of the many prisoners received at the Alton penitentiary when I was deputy warden was a man named Horton. He was editor and proprietor of a weekly paper. He was a pretty strong writer and made many enemies. The article which led to his author's imprisonment was a five line squib ridiculing a local doctor. The doctor called to demand a retraction, a fight ensued, and the editor had the misfortune to kill his man. He was sentenced to be hanged, but the governor commuted it to imprisonment for life. When Horton reached the prison, he was made librarian to the prison library.
After a year or so Horton's wife got a divorce, his friends ceased to call, and he was virtually dead to the world. There was living in the town in which the prison was situated a young lady named Calhoun. She used to come in every Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with papers or other things for the prisoners, and sometimes she had company and sometimes not. Saturday afternoon was a holiday with the prisoners—that is, all were locked up in their cells after the noonday meal and could read, write or sleep. This order did not include the librarian and certain other "trusties."
One Saturday afternoon Miss Calhoun was an hour late. It was in April, and the day was dark and foggy. The order was to pass her in and out without question. At 7 o'clock in the evening some of her friends called at the prison to say that she had not returned home.
The country around the prison was searched all night long, and soon after daylight the mystery was solved. The dead body of the girl was found in the prison yard. On the second floor of a storehouse lay the half naked body, while hat, dress, skirts and wrap were in a heap beside it.
About eight months after the murder, when Horton had been with us for three years and four months, he made his escape by means of a tunnel which he had been over two years digging. It began in a clothes closet off the library and ended ninety-three feet away outside the prison walls. What was done had to be accomplished between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. Horton could not bar any one out of the library, nor could he tell what minute some one would enter. No convict ever worked for liberty with such odds against him. He simply took the one chance in a thousand.
You will want to know how I learned of certain things. A year after Horton's escape we heard of him in Montana. He had joined a small band of trappers and hunters and was living among the mountains. After he had been located it was decided that I should be sent out to attempt his capture. When I reached Gallatin, I learned that Horton's party was in the mountains to the north and enlisted two men in the search for him. We were on the trail of the hunters for a month before we found them. One evening we rode into their camp prepared to capture or kill the fugitive murderer, but he was not there. Two days before he had started out alone to inspect some traps and had not returned. The rest of the party, numbering six, had been out looking for him on the day of our arrival, but had found no trace. The search was resumed next day, and along in the afternoon we found him. He had fallen over a cliff and landed on a shelf about forty feet below. His fall had been broken by a bush, but he had been severely injured and was almost dead when we got him up. He had broken a leg and an arm, and as there was no show to get a doctor we knew that death must soon end his sufferings.
During the last day of his life Horton was not only conscious, but talkative and free from pain. He insisted on telling me all about the tunnel business, and of course I was interested in the details. I plainly told him that I had suspected him from the hour of finding Miss Calhoun's body and that, figuring it out as I might, no one else had the opportunity that he had. He did not answer me for several minutes and then quietly said:
"I will give you my idea of that affair, though of course it may be all wrong. When Miss Calhoun and I separated, she started for the exit and I for the library. There were several 'trusties' about, and no doubt one of them spoke to her, and she may have turned aside. It was a dark, foggy day, you remember, and the man might have clutched her by the throat to prevent an alarm and carried her to the storehouse. He took great risks, but was not discovered. I have always felt much grieved over the fate of that poor girl."
"What motive do you think the murderer had?" I asked.
"Probably to do her clothes and pass out to liberty."
"But why didn't he carry out his plan?"
"Probably something threw him off his nerve as he approached the wicket. He could have gone out unquestioned, but something happened to make him suspect that he would be nabbed."
"And you will not confess, realizing, as you must, that death is not far away?"
"My dear man," Horton replied as a smile played over his pale face, "let's talk about that tunnel and drop all dismal subjects. So all of you called it an excellent bit of civil engineering, eh? Well, I think it was. I was very proud of that tunnel, and I sometimes felt like going back to have a look at it."
Four hours later he was dead, passing away as peacefully as if he had never shed a drop of human blood. M. QUAD.

tendency of the times.
The tendency of medical science is to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has been observed that the tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pain in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted; it always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.
Money talks, sure enough, and people are generally willing to listen to it, too.
The Easy Pill.
DeWitt's Little Early Risers do not gripe nor weaken the system. They cure biliousness, jaundice, constipation and inactive livers, by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach, liver and bowels that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely. These famous little pills exert a decided tonic effect upon the organs involved, and if their use is continued for a few days there will be no return of the trouble.

A Weak Stomach.
causes a weak body and invites disease. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures and strengthens the stomach, and wards off and overcomes disease. J. B. Taylor, a prominent merchant of Christman, Tex., says: "I could not eat because of a weak stomach. I lost all strength and run down in weight. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol, I concluded to try it. The first bottle benefited me, and after taking four bottles I am fully restored to my usual strength, weight and health."

A Mother's Recommendation.
I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy.—Mrs. J. A. Moore North Star, Mich. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Hello Scrap.

There was a scrap around at the central telephone office Saturday night, in which both combatants retired with bloody faces. J. I. Smith rang up central and wanted to communicate with Grimesland. John Gay was the operator at the time and replied that the Grimsland line was busy. Later Mr. Smith rang again and was again told the line was busy. A conversation between the two followed over the phone, in which some words not learned in Sunday school were used, so that Mr. Smith felt called upon to walk around to central and see about it. He found Mr. Gay at the switch board. The conversation was renewed here and the words waxed so warm that it melted the fuse and there was a mix up and lively communication for a few moments. When the ring off came Gay was bleeding from punches in the face and Smith had a gash from a knife across the side of his head, while a window was broken out by the transmitter flying through it to seek refuge in a neighboring yard.

LETTER TO W. S. ATKINS,
Greenville N. C.

Dear Sir: Everybody considers painting a necessary nuisance, and you are probably no exception.

You can't abolish it altogether; but you can make it come half as often, and cost only two-thirds as much each time, and have your house look better all the time.

Everybody knows that the sea shore is hard on paint. The Farrington residence at Rochland, Maine, a sea-coast town, was painted with Devoe seventeen years ago. The house has never been repainted, and seems to be well painted yet. If you want to take the trouble to be convinced, we can send you a hundred other instances; but none so striking as this.

This is not all. Devoe Lead and Zinc not only wears longer, but it paints more square feet to the gallon than any other paint—especially mixed paints. It is the "Fewer gallons; wears longer" paint.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.
