SEASONABLE BARGAINS.

YOU know our policy concerning the cleaning up of seasonable merchandise in its season. To make thorough work of a clearance sale every item must suffer the severest cuts. Not an item in this store that has not suffered with the "price knife." If you will take the time to make a careful investigation the economy of buying now will impress itself upon you.

How Shall We Make this Association a Power for Good.

[Essay read by Miss Mollye R. Bryan before Pitt county Teachers' Association.]

Just as mankind everywhere is desirous of achieving a success and of making the most of life, so are we, as teachers, desirous of accomplishing much success and of doing the most good in our worthy profession. At times, it is true, some people act as if they little cared what was the outcome of their exertions. But even in the lives of the most abandoned and reckless there are moments when their good angel points out to them the heights to which they might ascend, and a wish arises for "something better than they have known." It was the same desire and need felt for "something better than we have known" which led to the organization of a Teachers' Association in our county. Not that our teachers were careless or were falling short in the performance of their duty, but that they, by means of an association, could make of themselves better teachers and thus raise themselves in their profession.

And now since the association has been organized one of the first questions that arises is: "How shall we make it a success?" We know that to carry out any project, we are confronted with two ends, success or failure, but as this association is not going to meet with failure, we shall only consider how the other end may be accomplished.

To win success, much labor and perseverance will be required of us. We must remember that those who start for glory must imitate the mettled hands of action, and must follow the game, not only where there is a path, but where there is none. We must not repine because fate sometimes seems against us, and if we trip or fall let us, like Caesar when he stumbled on shore, stumble forward. There is no royal road to success. The path lies thro' fields of earnest, patient labor. We cannot succeed at a single leap or in a hurry. The ladder on which we rise must be built of material to stand wear and tear, and there is no substitute for thorough going, ardent, sincere, earnestness. What matter if a round does break or a foot slip? Such things are to be expected and must be overcome. Rome was not built in a single day but proofs of her magnificent temples are still to be seen. We are endeavoring to build a temple to last thro' all eternity and may we not grow weary. We cannot expect our association to accomplish great things in one or two meetings, but by the constant united efforts on the part of its members, there is no estimating how much good may be done in due time. The little stream as it gently glides down the hillside is a power for good if only to relieve the thirst of travelers. But take that same stream and collect the water into a large dam, then you have a power for great good. Under perfect control, it may run mills, supply cities with drink and protect them from fires.

A public school teacher out in some lonely district, toiling day after day does much good, of course; but gather all teachers in a body where they can exchange ideas and get great benefit from the advice and experience of other teachers—perhaps better ones—so that they will become better teachers, then has the greatest good been done. This association is such a body, and for it to become a power for good, we by attending the same, must become better teachers. If we do not, the association is of no good whatever. If we were to meet here every month with every teacher in the county present, and have many papers read and eloquent discussions to follow; yet if there was nothing said to improve us in our profession, it would profit us nothing. On the other hand, if only a few were to meet each time, and receive fresh courage and help and strength we are sure to be improved and this association will have accomplished its purpose.

Such a meeting must be especially helpful to young, inexperienced teachers. Suppose such a teacher teaches some things in a way she thinks best, and a little later, has to punish some mischievous boy for some of his wild pranks. Next day, the father appears on the scene and says his children can't learn this new fangled way of teaching, and with threatening looks says his Johnnie shan't be imposed on. Such is enough to quail the heart of the more experienced, but if she learns that others teach just the same way and inflicts like punishments, then she is strengthened for her work and ready to meet the next emergency.

Education is a question of progress and we must remember there is no such thing as a stand-still. This teaching year after year the very same things has a tendency to make one lazy, but we should read more and have something to tell besides the words of the text books. We do not expect to teach a subject this year, the same in every detail as last year. Have we not learned from last year's experience (if from no other source) some additional points to advance or develop?

No time for reading and study is the plea. That can be no excuse. What would we think of a physician who had no time to keep in touch with the advancement of his profession? A new remedy is brought out, if he knows nothing of it he may lose a case. He certainly must keep up his professional reading. So with the lawyer. Our work is a profession dealing with fully as critical cases as either those of the physician or lawyer. Do we want to lose a case? More than immediate results depend on the success of our work. The nobleness of our profession is not a mere theory. There are minds to be moulded and started aright. Think of the power one has to regulate the trend of those minds, to develop physically, mentally and morally, by precept, by influence, by example, the pupils who have been given in our care. Whoever does not understand and realize this responsibility is most decidedly in the wrong profession. There is the canvas upon which to paint. Are your conceptions clear that you may produce upon the canvass, a picture which has life and soul, which will stand the wear and tear of time? But you say the canvases is not all alike. Very good, now comes into play your skill. To reach as near the same result in each one as possible necessitates variations in the use of materials. There is a mind that works well in one direction, but slowly in another; the cause of this one-sidedness must be investigated. There is another whose mind acts with great difficulty in every direction. To convey one ray of light in that direction is now the object; find the cause if possible; learn the environment, habits and associates. If this investigation be carried on in a friendly way, the child will be pleased with the interest, and gradually yielding to the influence the mind will open and the teacher has something to work upon. How can such work as this be narrow?

ing? A teacher should always have some interest outside of school, in the way of advancement along other lines of thought. But here is the excuse, "I have home duties," "must have recreation," etc. Perfectly correct, but change of work is rest. Some branch of art or science in which one is especially interested can be managed the interest shown, the knowledge gained, change of association and contact with another plane of thought (entirely another world as it were) broadens one for his or her work. Professional reading is a part of the daily regime also and could not be dispensed with. Twenty-four hours, eight must be taken for sleep and rest, six for school, ten arranged systematically and to the best advantage—surely much may be accomplished. David Perkins Page said that a teacher should be profoundly impressed with the seriousness of his calling; that he should understand its underlying principles and not be content with merely hearing the lesson from the text book; that he should be permeated with a profound sense of responsibility to the pupils themselves, to the parents and to the Creator; that he should know much more than he is called upon to teach; that he should be the incarnation of every virtue; that he should illustrate in his daily walk and conversation, all that is lovely and of good report; and that he should be a bulwer of character for both worlds.

At no age has there been greater need of such teachers. Two thousand years ago the Great Teacher, striving to place manhood on higher, nobler, and happier stages of life, said to the twelve: "The field are white for the harvest," meaning there was work pressing needful to be done. This may be said today more emphatically than then. The education that has been inaugurated has only made the harvesting more imperative. It may be properly said to have acted as a fertilizer, thus giving the fields a whiter look than they would otherwise present. Teaching, to be worthy of its name, must be undertaken in a missionary spirit. Look at it what way we will, its object is to do good; the best teacher is the one who does the most good. There is the explanation why high

TAKE TILLMAN DOWN.

No sound reasoning can charge the follies of President Roosevelt to the North, or the wild, senseless performances of Senator Tillman as reflecting the sentiments of the South. By his intemperate ravings in the senate Tillman has brought his state into disrepute and himself very near the line where toleration ceases to be a virtue. It is time to take the pitchfork senator down. He not only is a failure as a good citizen, but he is absolutely useless to his constituents as their representative in the senate. He is narrow, ill-balanced, and utterly unfit to occupy a seat in the senate or in any other body of lawmakers.

If South Carolina and the balance of the country can stand it till the end of this session, we can, but South Carolina had better by far never send another senator to Washington if Tillman is of the best she breeds. Take him down.

It is said that Austria and Russia are preparing to make war on Turkey, and that the United States are about to form an alliance with France to oppose the allied powers. Germany and England are knocking the stuffing out of Venezuela, and the sultan of Morocco is at war with some nation, we forget just which one. The white-winged dove of peace seems to have lost its bearings and drifted "away over yonder."

If the multitude of petitions for temperance legislation that have been sent to Raleigh mean anything, they mean that the people are in earnest about closing the saloons in North Carolina. The members of the legislature should beware how they ignore the will of the people. The political future of most of them will be determined by the support they give the London bill.

Says the Nashville American: Nashville gave a free rein to liquor and gambling and gained 6 per cent. in population in ten years. Atlanta drove the gamblers out and regulated the traffic in liquor and gained 37.1 per cent. in the same period."

Isn't it strange that it should be so difficult to convince a man that it is better to buy shoes and clothing for his wife and children than to buy whiskey to saturate his hide with?

It will be noticed that your uncle Marcus Aurelius Realthings Hanna isn't talking through his bonnet to any considerable extent these days. When Teddy goes up against Mark in the next republican national convention the rough rider will come out looking like a withered bouquet of last summer's roses.

There is pending in the North Carolina legislature a law making it a misdemeanor, punishable by ten years in the penitentiary, for a man to run away with another man's wife. Maybe he deserves the ten years, and maybe he is generally glad of the opportunity to do ten years in order to get rid of the female end of the elopement.

Every now and then we here somebody say that if the London bill becomes a law it will ruin the democratic party. That is veritable rot. If the democratic party cannot be held together except by whiskey, then it had better go to pieces.

Richmond negroes do not approve of the recent speech made in Washington by the negro lawyer, Hayes. They have held a meeting and adopted a resolution to that effect. They declare his utterance to be incendiary.

It is announced that the administration is deeply concerned over the ratification of the Panama canal treaty. It's been hanging fire for about '25 years, so don't get uneasy, Uncle Sam.

Washington now rivals Patterson, N. J., as anarchist headquarters. Maybe they would have been arrested if there were not so many negroes on the police force at the capital.

Lives of great men remind us that when our time has come to go some of the chumps we leave behind us will yell at the hearse: "I told you so."

Tendency of the times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold of from an attack of influenza (grip) and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted; it always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Ask a conceited man a question and he will never say "I don't know."

The Easy Pill.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers do not gripe nor weaken the system. They cure biliousness, jaundice, constipation and inactive livers, by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach, liver and bowels that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely. These famous little pills exert a decided tonic effect upon the organs involved, and if their use is continued for a few days there will be no return of the trouble.

TICKETS FOR TWO

(Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.)

Rod Scott was waiting his turn at the Pullman window where he wanted a "lower" for Chicago. Just ahead of him was a very pretty girl, and he could not help overhearing the conversation. She, too, was buying a ticket to Chicago and wanted a berth as well. She had made a mistake in the amount necessary to secure a sleeper, and when the ticket seller called for the additional $2 she discovered that her purse was empty. It was an embarrassing position for the girl, but there was no help for it, and she took her railroad ticket and passed on to the waiting room.

Rod could not help noting the outcome. He bought his own ticket and then saw the girl standing in the adjoining room examining her empty pocketbook.

His sympathies were aroused; she looked so forlorn, and he thought of his own little sister and wondered how she would feel under similar circumstances.

That settled it. He walked quickly toward her and, raising his hat, said: "Pardon me, but I could not help seeing the trouble you were in at the ticket window. Won't you allow me to be your banker in the emergency?"

She looked up at him shyly. He had a good, honest face.

"Oh, thank you; but I don't like"—"Of course you don't," said Rod; "but I'll give you my card, and you can send the money back to me when you get home."

Her face brightened up. "You are very kind. My father was to have been with me, but was detained at the last moment. I thought I had all the money I needed to get home."

"Well, I fortunately have plenty," said Rod, "so let us get the ticket."

Of course he saw that it was in the same car, and it was natural that they should occupy the same seat.

It was all too soon for Rod when the berths had to be made up, but he arranged that they should have breakfast together.

Rod says he will never forget that breakfast. He never did know what he ordered, but he feasted upon a pair of gray eyes which took shy glances across the little table. All the time he was trying to summon up courage to tell how much he wanted to meet her again.

Another hour and they would reach their destination, the pleasant tete-a-tete would be over, and he did not even know her name. Rod was getting desperate.

"By the way, do you expect any one to meet you at the station, or may I?" "Oh, yes; papa said he would wire, so, you see, I won't have to trouble you any more."

"Trouble! I know you don't mean that. It has been a great pleasure to me, and I only wish I could"—

"Don't say anything more, Mr. Scott. I am under many obligations to you, but papa will write you when he returns."

Poor Rod! He wanted to say more, but politeness prevented him from pressing a matter which he felt might embarrass her.

When the train pulled into Chicago and he saw her affectionately greeted by an elderly lady, he awakened to the realization that his pleasant day dream was over.

Rod was assistant freight agent on the B. and A. road, with headquarters at Omaha. He spent a week in Chicago, and on his return home he found the following letter awaiting him:

Dear Sir—My daughter has given me your card and asked me to thank you for your courtesy to her when she was returning home. I inclose draft for $5, which will reimburse you for the amount you expended on her. The general freight agent of the road, Mr. Fletcher, is a very old friend of mine. Kindly remember me to him, and whenever you are in Chicago I will be glad to have you call on me. Yours truly, JOHN H. MASON.

It was astonishing how much attention the Chicago end of the B. and A. road required. Rod found it necessary to make weekly trips there, and he never failed to call and inquire for Mr. Mason's health and incidentally to accept the hospitality of the Mason home.

"Alice, she of the gray eyes, always welcomed the guest with such winning smiles that he thought he was in paradise. On one such evening she was singing an old Scotch ballad with the refrain, "Lassie, could you lo'e me?" He stooped over her as she sat at the piano, and, looking into the gray eyes that were turned toward him, he whispered, "Alice, dear, could you lo'e me?" He read his answer there and sealed it with a kiss.

Six months later a carriage was being driven toward the station. A few stray kernels of rice still clung to the steps.

The carriage stopped, and the occupants went hurriedly to the train which was starting for the east.

"Oh, Rod, you haven't got the tickets!"

"Haven't I, sweetheart? When I travel with somebody, I always make up my mind that I'll have to pay for a couple, and so I get them in advance."

"That's the meanest thing you ever said to me, Rod," was the laughing rejoinder, "but you've got to pay for them now."

Where Iron Is Sacred.

Among the Barlongs, a great African people, iron is a sacred object. They are expert workers in metal, which they still smelt from its native ore by the most primitive methods ever devised by man. This art was to them in former days a source of wealth, influence and power, and the legend is that when people did not know the value of the stones found in their brooks a "wise man" saw a vision. The spirit of his chief stood beside him and said, "Gather stones and burn them to make spears." The sage thought it was a dream and that the chief was hungry, so he sacrificed an ox. But the vision returned, and the chief looked sorrowful. He stood a long time and at last said:

"My son, why do you not obey your father? Go to the river, gather stones and make a hot fire. After that you will see iron with your eyes."

The sage was greatly frightened and feared some calamity, but dared not refuse. When he had made a hot fire, iron came out of it, and then he knew the chief had taken pity on his children. He told his son the secret before he died, but he was a vain coxcomb and, wishing to show his own wisdom, made iron in the presence of strangers, and so the secret of the art was lost to his tribe, but they have always continued to regard iron as sacred above all other metals.

Letter From Warm Climate.

"Speaking of pulpit jokes," a churchgoer remarked, "I have yet to hear a better one than that on a reverend gentleman of a small congregation in the city. He is a fine preacher, a man along in years, loved and revered by his flock. His pulpit utterances never verge upon levity of any sort. He abhors a resort to humor in church."

"One Sunday evening he was speaking to his congregation about Mrs. Jones, one of the prominent women of his church, who had gone south for her health. In his previous remarks he had, with feeling, referred to Mrs. Smith, who had recently left this world for a better one."

"He startled his hearers by saying: 'I have just received a letter from Mrs. Smith. She says it is very warm where she is now.'

"Shocked at the audible titter in the staid congregation, the good man paused, looked blank and then gasped, 'I meant from Mrs. Jones,' and hastily announced the hymn."—New York Telegram.

Proud of the Cure.

William R. Travers, the New York city broker, on one occasion desired to go to an address in suburban Brooklyn, but, being unacquainted with the locality, accosted a stranger and asked directions. It so happened that the stranger stuttered and stammered quite as badly as Travers, who after the man had made two or three ineffectual attempts to answer grew angry under the impression he was being mocked and hotly inquired:

"How d-d-dare you t-try to m-m-mock me?" "Ex-ex-excuse m-me!" exclaimed the stranger. "I have an im-im-impediment in m-my s-s-s-speech."

"Oh, I s-s-s-ee!" stammered Travers, the look of anger giving way to a look of sympathetic concern. "W-w-why d-d-don't you g-g-go s-s-see D-d-doctor S-s-smith? He c-c-cured m-me."—Philadelphia Times.

First Love.

People who marry while very young are apt to find out when it is too late that they have made the greatest mistake in their lives and that, though it may seem very sweet to marry "the first and only love," this same "first love" is the very last person in the world that they ought to have married.

Some, indeed, may advise couples to marry before they are out of their teens and settle down before the distractions of the world can attempt to shake their allegiance to each other, but this settling down too often proves to be a mere temporary phase and is followed by an unsettled condition that lasts for the rest of their unhappy lives. Second thoughts are often best in love.

Corded Trunks.

Trunks corded instead of strapped are thought by some theatrical managers to be fatal to the interests of their companies. "I can't have any hangman's ropes among my people," exclaimed one well known farce comedy manager on noticing cords upon one of the trunks belonging to a lady he had just brought at large expense from east to west. And such a horror had he of the "hoodoo" effect upon his company, were a woman addicted to such methods to remain a member of it, that he quietly paid the astonished newcomer two weeks' salary, adding her fare back to New York by way of compensation for discharging her.

Idomatic Blunder.

"Mr. Henpeck, let me introduce you to the Count de Dippee."

"Ah, eet ze honor to meet a musician. I hear, sar, zat you an' your family play ze music."

"Why, I don't know the first thing about music."

"Why, I hear eet all around zat you 'plays second fiddle' to your wife!"—Baltimore Herald.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. MRS. J. W. COOLBAUGH, Milo Center, N. Y.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet with Mrs. G. E. Harris Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

Putting in Tiling.

The town authorities have had the old wooden sewers replaced with large tiling where drains cross the streets. That kind of work is worth something.

An evidence of what the republican leaders think of the president's negro policy is furnished by the action of the commerce committee of the senate which has determined to turn down the nomination of Dr. Crum, the negro appointed collector of the port of Charleston, S. C. Although an earnest effort has been made to defend the Indianola postoffice case it is freely admitted, confidentially, that the president has seriously blundered in that respect and has caused grave embarrassment to his party. Moreover, he is at outs with his secretary of the treasury, who declares that Mr. Roosevelt is coquetting with free silver and stultifying the republican platform.—Washington Correspondent.
