The prices we have marked on our entire stock of fine Dress Goods, Clothing and Furnishings should appeal to you in a most forcible manner. If we are reasonable we are right, and if we are right we are bound to be reasonable. The most economical buyer has investigated and found prices as priced. At no time in the year does this store offer more to its patrons than at the closing of a season. Our prices have been so attractive, so replete with many saving opportunities, that every woman naturally turns our way when out shopping, and men, too, as for that matter. RICKS & WILKINSON.

A Pitt County Boys Success.

Mr. Zeno Stocks, a Pitt county boy once—now a man—was in Greenville yesterday shaking hands with his quondam friends and acquaintances. He was a young man of ambition and wanted education. His father disinherited him and he left the paternal roof, and sought his own ambition in books and schools. He first went to school to Maj. Harding in 1869 at what is known as the "Aunt Polly Smith" school house, afterwards, he was at Farmville and Carolina Seminary at Ormondsville, Green Co. Leaving there he went to Illinois and taught school—became rich and married. He is now at Columbia, Mo., where the state university is located—for the purpose of educating his two sons. Mr. Stocks is a very large land owner and is now engaged in apple growing having 2000 acres in apple trees from which he is realizing a large income. He is a genial, clever, well balanced man of southern type. He was a school mate of Col. I. A. Sugg in the dark days after reconstruction and he says he comes to North Carolina as much to see the colonel as any thing else. It is a pleasure and a great pride to know of the success of a Pitt county boy. They always succeed wherever they go because they are made of stuff, right stuff. Mr. Stocks was much amazed at the great progress and development of Greenville, and Pitt county in the last number of years—since his last visit.

Burglar Killed.

We learn from the Kinston Free Press that a negro burglar named Walter Hunter, was killed in that town Tuesday night while officers were trying to arrest him. The negro had broken in several stores and the officers came upon him while in one of them. One officer caught the negro but he fought away and broke to run when both officers fired at him. The coroner's jury returned a verdict that the officers were performing their duties and that the killing was justifiable.

Ward, of Everetts, spent Wednesday in Bethel. Charles Whichard, of Pinners Point, spent Wednesday with his parents near here. Mrs. J. T. Ward, of Parmele, spent Wednesday in Bethel.

A Wilson woman cured her husband of staying out late at night by going to the door when he came home and whispering through the keyhole: "Is that you Willie?" Her husband's name is John and he stays home every night now, and sleeps with one eye open and a revolver under his pillow.—Wilson News.

LETTER TO CARLOS HARRIS.

Greenville N. C.

Dear Sir: You naturally want to make your own and your customer's money go as far as possible. So, in the general interest, we tell you why fewer gallons of Devoe Lead and Zinc will paint a house than mixed paints.

Let's suppose you are using lead and oil. Instead of lead and oil you put in four fifths whitening, lime, water, and other stuff that doesn't paint at all. Put that against a gallon of lead and oil, and what will it do? One fifth as much.

How much of your labor is wasted? Four fifths. How good a job will it make? No comparison. How much good will it do you in your business to turn out such a job?

And so on. Devoe Lead and Zinc paints a house with fewer gallons than mixed paints, and wears twice as long as lead and oil.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

P. S.—H. L. Carr sells this paint.

RENSTON ITEMS.

RENSTON N. C., Feb. 12, 1903. Miss Allie Dail has suffered right much for the past week with a sprained knee, but her many friends are pleased to know of her rapid improvement.

In referring to the bed bug question, we will only say that, "The bit dog always hollers." If the Winterville correspondent wishes to take it on his town why it is all right.

Miss Lossie Barahill returned Monday to her school at Winterville.

Henry McGlohon, of Vanceboro, came up Tuesday to visit his sister, Mrs. E. E. Dail.

E. E. Dail has been on the sick list for the past few days.

Miss Mollie Bryan spent Sunday at her home in Winterville.

Miss Dollie Braxton has been sick for a few days. We wish her a speedy recovery.

We are sorry to state that little Chester Craft, son of Eli Craft, has been very sick for some time.

Some of our neighbors complain about not getting their REFLECTORS regularly.

If Mr. Cleveland was an independent we would be one of his warmest admirers. You might ask us would we have him advocate and vote for measures in which he could not believe and we would answer that the man who feels this way about it has no business connecting himself with any political party. We have always thought that as Mr. Cleveland had accepted the greatest favor the democratic party could give he should have swallowed the Bryan pill and made the best face over it possible.—Durham Herald

Try Our Pants

It isn't possible to improve on the style, workmanship and perfection of fit of our Trousers. We are showing many patterns in fine Cassimere, Cheviot and Worsted Trousers. They are absolutely correct in every detail. These Trousers were made by specialists—men who design and make Trousers and nothing else. We feel safe in saying no custom tailor could match them for double the price.

War on Trusts Hopeless.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 9.—In an address on socialism and anarchy, the Rev. Andrew Burns Chalmers, pastor of Grand Avenue Congregational Church, expressed the opinion that the fight against the trusts is hopeless, because a power higher than the government is back of the tendency of men to be brothers, whether they are capitalists or laborers.

"Because the final bond of the trust is brotherhood," he said, "it has been a difficult matter to legislate against. It is as easy to destroy the socialism of capital in the combination as it is to eradicate by legal enactment the spirit of brotherhood among men. Law may compel men to be more brotherly, but law cannot compel men to be less brotherly."

"The whole machinery of our national government has been employed in the fight against the trusts, and it seems to be a losing battle. There was never a time when the spirit of co-operation of socialism was as powerful as now. I do not believe all the governments of the world could stop the growth of that spirit."

Found $500 Ring Among Rags.

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Venia Cummings, of North Adams, while sorting rags in the mills of Cotton Brothers last Saturday found a diamond ring with three stones in an old fashioned setting valued at $500. Mrs. Cummings showed the ring to her employer, Mark Cotton, who at once took it, and said that if it were worth more than $50 he would give her that amount for it.

A dispute developed, and Mrs. Cummings was discharged from her position. She consulted counsel, and a suit for $500 has been entered against Mr. Cotton to recover the ring. The rags in which the jewelry was found came from the country around Rutland, Vt.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 12, 1903.

In the name of progress let the people of Greenville get together and do something for the town and the coming generations which will inherit it. It is neither wise nor patriotic to retard the march of improvement by petty cavillings and inconsequential objection to details. The charter, school and street improvement bills as introduced may not be all that could be desired, but they certainly ought to pass, and it is for the ultimate good of the town to put them into effect as soon as possible.

We stopped again in Raleigh Tuesday and spent part of the day looking on the legislative proceedings. Both branches were busy with routine work and kept pretty well up with the business. The most important matters of the entire session are the bills relating to temperance, child labor and finance. These are topics of much discussion. The committee is at work on the finance bill and will soon have it ready to report. No better idea can be given of the out come of the temperance legislation than was told in our letter of the 9th from Raleigh. Large numbers of petitions continue to go in every day, and nothing short of a stringent temperance law is going to satisfy the people.

The Greenville bills had not been returned from the committee, but the outlook was for a favorable report. These bills ought to go right on through the house, as they did in the senate. They are purely local matters affecting only Greenville, and as two of the bills cannot become laws until ratified by a vote of a majority of the people of the town, they ought to have the privilege of settling the matter among themselves. If any are opposed to the bills they can so express themselves in their votes.

As something had been said about a committee of citizens going to Raleigh to oppose the Greenville bills now pending before the legislature, THE REFLECTOR has endeavored to ascertain the line of opposition. At the depot this morning we talked with two of the gentlemen who have gone to Raleigh, and both of them stated frankly that they had no opposition whatever to the improvement bill or the graded school bill, but they did not like some features of the charter amendment bill. Asked for an explanation of these, they said the objection was to certain of the boundary lines mentioned in the charter which are deemed a discrimination, and the clause under which four of the aldermen are named as their own successors in office. These are matters of minor importance and, we hope, can be easily adjusted.

Col. John B. Webster, of Reidsville, can give the young fellows lessons in the art of legislating. The colonel steered for Raleigh Tuesday with a little bill in his vest pocket, and before you could count the whiskers on the moon that bill was a law that wipes out the one bucket shop of Reidsville. The colonel has not forgotten how in his riper years.

We didn't know the dignified and demure Associated Press ever sent out fake stories, but there is really something very mysterious about those telegrams affecting Rockefeller and the trusts. Not a person has yet been found, writes Mr. Pence to the Raleigh Post, who will come forward and say that he saw one of the alleged telegrams.—Greensboro Telegram.

A triangular war is on between the Central American states of Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador, neither of which is large enough to furnish a respectable scrap on its own account.

It is said that Lieutenant Hobson aspires to the presidency—that is, if Roosevelt does not leave it in such bad repute that the finger of suspicion will be pointed to any man who seeks it.

Not early a week having elapsed without anything unusual in the White House, it may be that the president carried out his "policy" in haste and is repenting at leisure.

Tendency of the times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold of from an attack of influenza (grip) and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted; it always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Silence is the fence around wisdom.

A Weak Stomach.

causes a weak body and invites disease. Kodol Dyspepsia Cures and strengthens the stomach, and wards off and overcomes disease. J. B. Taylor, a prominent merchant of Chriesman, Tex., says "I could not eat because of a weak stomach. I lost all strength and run down in weight. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol, I concluded to try it. The first bottle benefited me, and after taking four bottles I am fully restored to my usual strength, weight and health."

A Mother's Recommendation.

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy.—Mrs. J. A. Moore North Star, Mich. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

The bent of many a man's inclination is crooked.

The Easy Pill.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers do not gripe nor weaken the system. They cure biliousness, jaundice, constipation and inactive livers, by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach, liver and bowels that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely. These famous little pills exert a decided tonic effect upon the organs involved, and if their use is continued for a few days there will be no return of the trouble.

The scratch of a pin may cause the loss of a limb or even death when blood poisoning results from the injury. All danger of this may be avoided, however, by promptly applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. DEACON HASTINGS' FIDDLE.

[Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.]

It was a well known fact when Abel Hastings was elected one of the deacons of his church that he not only owned a fiddle, but played on it. He had been censured for this act of worldliness, but as it was his only weakness and as he was eminently fitted to fill a deaconship his brethren went ahead and took chances. It might be just possible, argued the majority, that a man could fiddle and not bring the church into disrepute. But at the same time he was expected to play nothing but the most solemn airs.

The first move on the part of Satan was to induce the new "pillar" to stop and gaze at some circus bills posted on a barn. A brother deacon caught him red handed and lectured him for an hour on the enormity of his offense. The transgressor promised better things.

But, lo, when the circus arrived he permitted his daughter Minnie to attend in company with young Ike Harper! His excuse that young people had a curiosity to see lions, tigers, bears and kangaroos didn't go down, and he was warned that any more trifling would be a serious matter.

The deacon was penitent, but it wasn't four weeks before he bought a piano for his daughter. At an informal meeting of the other deacons, the pew openers and the box passers it was decided that a piano could not be classed under the head of naturally wicked. The question was, Could the deacon live in the same house with a fiddle and a piano and maintain his religious integrity?

The deacon's critics were watching and waiting, when they caught him tripping in another direction. His barn faced the road, and when an agent for a stomach bitters came along and offered him $25 for the use of the roof for a year the good man pocketed the cash. A mighty sign soon appeared on the roof, and the last letter was hardly finished before Deacon Hastings was in trouble. It was the opinion of the majority that all stomach bitters were three-fourths whisky and that the deacon had sold himself to the cause of intemperance and ought to be disciplined. He was going like a lamb to the slaughter when the agent hired a man to drink four bottles of the bitters at once and proved that there was nothing in it to lift a man's heels off the ground. The object lesson couldn't be denied, but yet no one was satisfied. He realized this fact and didn't dare give a cornhusking or an apple paring that fall.

Nemesis was close on the deacon's heels, however. His daughter Minnie was a general favorite, and one winter night a lot of young people appeared as a surprise party. He couldn't turn them away, and he reluctantly brought out his fiddle.

The fiddle and the piano started out with "Sweet By and By," accompanied by all who could sing, and how they ever switched off on to ragtime the deacon could never explain to himself. It was like a dream to him next day. When told that the young folks had formed in sets and danced to his "first four forward and back—ladies change—gents to the left—all promenade," he studied over it and sighed.

Before noon next day it was known far and wide that Deacon Hastings had fiddled for a dance. That he would be church-ed was regarded as a matter of course, and it was determined that his fellow deacons investigate before he could run away from the scene of his crime. Accordingly, at 7 o'clock on the evening after the party, they fled into his parlor to put him on the rack.

"Brethren, I hain't got much to say," began the culprit. "If there was a dance, and I guess there was, then the fiddle sort of got away with me."

"But you also called out the figures to be danced, didn't you?" asked one. "Mebbe I did. When the music got to goin', I felt that I had to mix in. Durin' my sinful days I used to go to every dance within ten miles."

"There can be no doubt, brethren," said the same deacon, "that it was sinful music and that there was dancing, but we must not be too impetuous. Deacon Hopkins, will you let us hear the strains given last night?"

The deacon called his daughter down and got out his fiddle. While he was tuning up three of Minnie's girl friends arrived and were ushered into the room. When the music was ready, the deacon said:

"I will show you as nigh as I can remember just how it was. Deacon Jones, you stand here with my wife. You others stand up with these girls. Now you are all ready. Salute your partners! Ladies to the right—gents to the left! All salute! Promenade half way round—half way home! All balance and swing your partners!"

The deacons had stood up reluctantly. They had hung back at the first call. It was only for a minute, however. A warm wave swept them from head to heels and back, and they went through the figures with a vim.

"That's the way it was," said Deacon Hastings as the music stopped—"only more of it; two hours, mebbe."

The deacons retired to the kitchen for a consultation, and when they had got there they looked into each other's face and queried, "Well?"

When they had returned to the parlor, Deacon Jones, speaking for the rest, said:

"Brother Hastings, we find that you played sinful music and that you called sinful calls for a sinful dance, but we also find that your fiddle got away with you and that everybody enjoyed the occasion, and so you won't hear any more about it. I may add in this connection, being as we are here assembled and being as your fiddle and piano are in tune, you might favor us with a few more lively airs."

Whales in the Thames.

In former times the appearance of a whale in the river Thames was considered ominous. One was caught off Greenwich three months prior to the death of Oliver Cromwell, and the common opinion was expressed by Heath in his "Flagellum." "It pleased God," he remarks, "to usher in his end with a great whale three months before, June 2, that came up as far as Greenwich and there was killed." Evelyn, in his "Diary," under the date of June 3, 1658, mentions that a whale was killed off Greenwich and that it drew an "infinite concourse to see it by water, horse, coach and on foot from London and all parts." According to Robert Hubert, in his "Catalogue of Natural Rarities," the tongue of this whale was exhibited daily for some time at the "Miter, near the west end of St. Paul's church."

In February, 1857, another whale was caught in the Thames, and in the "Times" of that month appeared an advertisement for a piece of ground, some 40 feet by 60 feet, "on which to exhibit a whale." The piece of ground advertised for was found in the Mile End road, and the whale was exhibited until March 14. In the same month—namely, on March 21—expired the house of commons, which had been elected in 1852.

Having Fun With a Tragedian.

On one of the times when Barry Sullivan, the great Irish tragedian, was playing Hamlet a certain clever low comedian named Hoskins was the gravedigger. After answering Sullivan's question, "How long will a man lie in the earth ere he rot?" Hoskins proceeded with the business of illustrating his reply.

Taking up Yorick's skull he spoke the words of the text: "Now, here's a skull that hath lain in the earth three and twenty years. Whose do you think it was?"

"Nay, I know not," replied Sullivan as Hamlet.

"This skull, sir," said Hoskins, "was Diavolo Antonio's, whom Booth fought in this city!"

The house roared with laughter, while Sullivan stamped and fumed, exclaiming: "Yorick's, sir! Yorick's!" "No," said Hoskins coolly, when the tumult had subsided, and taking up another skull. "This is Yorick's skull, the king's jester; but 'tother's Antonio's, just as I told you."—Kansas City Independent.

Bottom of a Sea Follag Out.

Scientists tell us that, counting from the sea level, the lowest body of water on the globe is the Caspian sea. For centuries its surface has been gradually settling down until now it is eighty-five feet lower than that of its near neighbor, the Black sea, which also lies far below the level of the ocean. The common conclusion all along has been that the Caspian was simply losing its waters by evaporation, but recent investigation shows that this is not the case. Soundings made and compared with records of soundings made over 100 years ago reveal the astounding fact that there is even a greater depth of water now than then. This leaves but one hypothesis that would seem at all tenable—that the bottom of the sea is actually sinking. There is much speculation in scientific circles as to what will be the final outcome.

Rice Paper Not Made From Rice.

Rice paper is not made from rice nor from rice stalks, nor has it any connection whatever with rice. It is of Chinese manufacture and is made from the pith of a certain tree resembling the elder. The pith is extracted from the tree in large cylindrical masses, and with sharp knives the Chinese pare off the cylinder till instead of a cylindrical form they have a large flat sheet. This is pressed and other sheets added until the required thickness is secured. The paper is then rudely sized and is ready to use. It was called rice paper under the supposition that when it was first introduced into Europe it was made from rice stalks, and the name has never been changed.

Cheese.

Cheeses come under three general heads, whole milk, skim or sour milk and whole milk and cream. The ripening of cheese, upon which depends its flavor, is due to the action of bacteria, which are ever present in milk; also in the rennet which is used in the manufacture. Cheese which has been improperly handled is apt to accumulate deleterious bacteria. Cheese has great nutritive value. It yields nearly three times the amount of caloric yielded by moderately lean beef.

Indignant.

How He Knew.

It was a contested will case, and one of the witnesses in the course of giving his evidence described the testator minutely.

"Now, sir," said counsel for the defense, "I suppose we may take it, from the flattering description you have given of the testator, his good points and his personal appearance generally, that you were intimately acquainted with him?"

"Him!" exclaimed the witness. "He was no acquaintance of mine."

"Indeed! Well, then, you must have observed him very carefully whenever you saw him?" pursued the examining counsel.

"I never saw him in my life," was the reply.

"Now, now, don't trifle with the court, please. How, I ask you, could you, in the name of goodness, describe him so minutely if you never saw him and never knew him?"

"Well," replied the witness, and the smile which overspread his features eventually passed over the court, "you see, I married his widow."

Primitive Sleds.

From history we learn that the boys in the time of George III. coasted on sleds made of a small board, with beef bones as runners. But these dropped out of sight when an inventive genius built one out of a barrel stave, for his invention was extensively copied. The barrel staves were called "jumpers" and "skippers" and were made of a single barrel stave of moderate width, to which was nailed a twelve inch seat post about amidships. A piece of barrel head constituted the seat. To navigate this craft required no little skill, the revolutions performed by the rider while "gettin' the hang of the derved old thing" being akin to the antics of a tenderfoot on a bucking broncho. A more stable and docile jumper was made by fastening two or three staves side by side, but these were not considered as fast travelers as the single staves.—Outing.

When Umbrellas Were Heavy.

The great objection to umbrellas 100 years ago was their weight, and when it is stated as a matter of fact that the very smallest umbrella then weighed no less than three and a half pounds it will probably be admitted that the objection was a justifiable one.

Instead of the thin rainproof fabrics which now form the covering of umbrellas nothing better was known than leather or oilcloth. The ribs were of wood or whalebone, and such a thing as a steel rod was, of course, unknown. The stick was usually of heavy oak. In those days, too, many umbrellas had the additional incumbrance of feathers over the top, on the theory of "shedding water off a duck's back." But the oilcloth and leather umbrellas, notwithstanding the feathers, were apt to leak.
