"It's the Hit Hog that Hollers."

During an interval in which Misrepresentative King was resting from the arduous duty of running the legislature of North Carolina, he amused himself by launching through his paper about a half column of unmanly innuendo against this paper—at least we are left to assume that we are the object of our learned solon's self-righteous spleen. The article in question is as follows:

"We notice that our jug neighbor, the bosses organ, has, with its usual disregard for the truth, made statements relative to our position on the Greenville bills that are utterly untrue and he knows it. Also he has made statements about the gentlemen who came to Raleigh with petitions from the majority of the people, that are not only untrue, but a reflection on some of the best citizens the town ever had. We know how we have been misrepresented, grossly and intentionally by some, but we also know that in nothing have we done but what our people want.

"There are not bosses enough in North Carolina to make us swerve from the path of duty and misrepresent our people.

"People of Greenville, you sent me here to fight for your best interests. We are doing it and will only fall in the last ditch. But gentlemen, we are not falling."

We regret that we are called upon to hold up to public scorn and reproof a man whose code of honor does not permit him to openly assert the name and position of those he attempts to slander. For a brave man, though he be in the wrong, we can entertain feelings of respect. Any other kind may never hope to inspire in us any feeling save contempt.

The first part of Misrepresentative King's snake-like innuendo is so utterly little and contemptible we dismiss it without a thought.

As to the assertion that we made untruthful statements regarding the gentlemen who went to Raleigh to oppose the Greenville bills, we quote the article in THE REFLECTOR which is supposed to have called forth Misrepresentative King's ire:

"It is rumored on the streets today that a delegation of antis will leave tonight for Raleigh to fight the Greenville improvement bills, and incidentally the temperance bills. Up to the hour of going to press the personnel of the delegation could not be learned, but it is supposed that it will be composed mainly of those who were opposed to the first proposition to issue bonds. THE REFLECTOR will endeavor to inform the public in tomorrow's issue as to the names of the gentlemen making up the delegation."

During the absence from the city of the editor-in-chief, the above rumor came to the writer, who was in charge of THE REFLECTOR. After making several attempts to verify the report and to learn the names of the delegation, without success, the rumor was printed as a rumor and nothing else, without the slightest intention or desire to reflect upon any citizen who saw fit to oppose any measure before the legislature.

In regard to Misrepresentative King particularly, every word that we have said is the simple truth. If the truth makes him wince, it is something to his credit, as showing that it is possible to pierce the armor of his self-importance.

With something of the cheap melodrama of the boy who stood on the burning deck, our distinguished misrepresentative exhibits a decided preference for the last ditch as a place in which to fall. This is largely a matter of personal taste. We have but little objection, and would have still less if Providence should see fit to send a good big washing rain about that time.

We believe the subject of these remarks is fully earning his title of misrepresentative. When he and

Messrs. Whedbee and Arthur were before the committee having under consideration the Greenville bills, our misrepresentative said:

"Mr. Chairman, it is to be expected that these gentlemen are in favor of the bills, as their expenses in coming here are paid by the board of aldermen," or words to that effect.

Whereupon Mr. Whedbee arose and said: "Mr. Chairman, I wish to brand that statement as unqualifiedly and maliciously false, and to state that Mr. King knows it to be false. Before I was appointed on this committee I gave notice to the board of aldermen that I would go only at my sole personal expense."

Mr. Arthur stated to the committee that while he did not forward the board before his appointment that he would pay his own expenses, as he did not know he would be appointed, yet he stated to the board after his appointment that such was his intention.

We have good and sufficient reasons for believing that Misrepresentative King knew all this and knew that he was uttering an absolute falsehood when he attempted to place Messrs. Whedbee and Arthur before the committee in a false light. With these facts in view and others that will come to light before the close of the legislative session, we are of the opinion that it will be a rather difficult matter for Misrepresentative King to convince the people of Pitt county that he did what he was sent to Raleigh to do. And as for falling in the last ditch, no doubt the people will prepare a suitable one for him—one that's long and deep—about the time of the next election. Certain it is that a great many people who helped nominate and elect him have already placed orders for kicking machines and are impatiently awaiting their arrival.

As associate editor of THE REFLECTOR the writer is personally responsible for the statements in this article and in the one to which exception was taken, and in both of them and all matter appearing in THE REFLECTOR he is upheld and supported by the editor-in-chief.

We beg the indulgence of our readers for presenting these remarks. The smallest kind of a mosquito, you know, can make you brush him off your nose.

The Cake's Ours

THE finest and best men's toggery is here. Put that word "Finest" in your pipe and smoke it, for we mean it.

Clothes first, of course—that's our chief business. But you must have Haberdashery, too. This store is one of those "satisfactory stores" you run into now and then; but they are few and far between. In a satisfactory store you feel that you have made a satisfactory trade. If you want to experience this feeling, come here for a Hat or some Underwear, a Shirt, a pair of Gloves, or anything you may need. Quality of the goods and the prices give you that feeling at once.

Parlor Gambling.

It would look as if the process of making gamblers has been too slow for some people, and so the parlor is often converted into a polite gambling room.

In what does the prize offered in the social game to make the play interesting differ from the stake which the gambler wagers? If it is wrong to play euchre for $5, what makes it right to play for an article that costs $5?

A mother, waiting for her boy late one night noticed an unusual flush on his face when he returned.

There existed the closest bond between them, but she had great difficulty this time in discovering the reason for his excitement. Finally he confessed that he had been playing cards for money with his companions and had lost all that he had. Amazed she chided him and lectured him as to the consequences of such a course.

She was more amazed still when he asked if his conduct was any different from that of the guests of a few evenings before as they sat at the table in her hospitable parlor, playing euchre for the prizes she had offered.

What answer was there for her to make? None at all. The mother who gives a euchre party may live to see her boy a gambler; and the young lady who does it may blame herself if her future husband be a professional blackleg.—Durham Thrift.

No Danger.

It is surprising the report that has been circulated around town that a band of white caps were making their headquarters in the hospital building with the purpose of capturing negro women for dissection has been denied time and again, conceived in the fertile imagination, no doubt, of some brain that had better been thinking of something else, the negroes will persist in believing it, and those employed in town that are compelled to pass that point on their way home insist on leaving their work in time to get home before dark. Thursday a colored woman was seen packing up her clothes, and when asked for an explanation replied she was preparing to move in the country for fear of being captured by the white caps. Again we repeat the report is a lie and there are no white caps located in the hospital.—Washington Gazette.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 18, 1903.

THE VANISHED GLORY OF THE STATE OF PITT.

Alas! for the glory of the good old state of Pitt. Once she was a power among the states that make up the free, sovereign and independent nation of North Carolina, sending her full quota of lawmakers to the congress at Raleigh to take part in the judicial and economical affairs of state. The voice of our representatives (plural, please) was heard in the councils of the nation. Following the traditions of our fathers we sent two representatives and a senator to Raleigh to make laws, and the balance of our lawyers to lobby for or against them. We were a proud people, and pointed with pride to the fact that Pitt was as big as any state in the country, had as many votes and could afford to elect as many representatives. But how the times have changed! We no longer rank with our sister states who have the proud privilege of sending three representatives to Raleigh. We must take a back seat. Our star is a falling one. We hide our heads with shame, when we have to admit that we have only one representative. Friends, countrymen, get out your sack-cloth and ashes, and prepare to weep, for we shall tell how it all came about. Here follows the mournful tale, and you must know it's true, because it is what Representative King wrote to his paper this week.

"The stock law question for Pitt county where there are petitions for or against it will be taken up this week by its representative."

Shades of our ancestors, how the mighty have fallen! We were under the impression that we had sent Senator Blow and Representative Little to Raleigh to gather a mite of glory from Mr. King's reflected effulgence, but it must have been a dream, a delusion and a snare, since Mr. King says he's the only ouliest, and Mr. King is an honorable man.

Well, we can only sigh for the good old days when we had three representatives in the legislature, and could lift up our voice with the greatest, but with all our lamentations we have plenty of time to admit that a contemporary stated our case exactly when it said: "It must be mortifying to some counties to see what they have sent to the legislature." It is indeed.

FOR SHAME!

As sad as the winds that howl the requiem of a wasted life are the shattered idols that are strewn all along the pathway of human existence. The wreckage and debris of idols that have shown their feet of clay and crumbled into dust are but melancholy tombstones marking the death and burial of dear illusions, the vanishing of ideals and the departure of many a dream of the good and true. As the years roll on we have less faith in our ideals, because we have seen how they have gone the way of human things, but we never grow quite so far away from the dreams of youth that we have not some one ideal to cherish, in spite of the bitter experiences of the past.

It was so with us. We looked upon the Charlotte Obersever as a tower of strength, an exceptional journal, that never could, under any circumstances, admit anything yellow into its columns. But our little hour of idealism has run its course—another idol shows its feet of clay. The Observer of the 15th comes to us polluted with the indecent, repulsive details of the Bishop trial in Charlotte.

The details printed by the Observer had not even the merit of news. We simply cannot believe that the readers of the Observer demanded such foulness. Shame upon them if they did, and shame upon the Observer for supplying it!

Hanna's Son in a Scrape.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 14.—John H. Winder, general manager of the Kanawha & Hocking Coal company, a Mr. Hanna, son of Senator Hanna, and others, are charged with assaulting Hon. W. G. Caldwell, a member of the legislature from Ohio county, early today while the latter was going home from the legislative hall in a cab. The other men had been at a club during the night, so it is charged. They were on their way to the Kanawha & Michigan depot and wanted a hack. They hailed the hack in which Representative Caldwell was riding and attempted to enter it. Caldwell protested and said the hack was his. Winder and Hanna are said to have entered the hack and it is charged that Winder dealt Caldwell a hard blow in the face, rendering him unconscious. Representative Caldwell was thrown out of the hack and the others took charge of it. Caldwell was picked up by friends and taken to the hotel in a serious condition. Winder, Hanna and others left on an early morning Kanawha & Michigan train for Columbus, O. A warrant for their arrest was sworn out by Caldwell and telegraphed to Point Pleasant, W. Va. The affair has caused a very great sensation and it is stated that requisition will be made on other states for the return of the parties implicated.

It's mighty hard for a man to understand how a woman who fools around so recklessly in a sleeping car can so terribly care about pulling down her bedroom curtain overlooking her own backyard.

The idea is not to put trusts out of business but to so regulate them that they cannot put smaller concerns out of business.—Durham Herald.

Nowadays there are two qualities recognized in advertising estimates. A few years ago quantity of circulation only counted. Now quality is demanded.—Press and Printer.

Tendency of the times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold of from an attack of influenza (grip) and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted; it always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

A Weak Stomach.

causes a weak body and invites disease. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures and strengthens the stomach, and wards off and overcomes disease. J. B. Taylor, a prominent merchant of Christman, Tex., says: "I could not eat because of a weak stomach. I lost all strength and run down in weight. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol, I concluded to try it. The first bottle benefited me, and after taking four bottles I am fully restored to my usual strength, weight and health."

A Mother's Recommendation.

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy.—Mrs. J. A. Moore-North Star, Mich. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

The Easy Pill.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers do not gripe nor weaken the system. They cure biliousness, jaundice, constipation and inactive livers, by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach, liver and bowels that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely. These famous little pills exert a decided tonic effect upon the organs involved, and if their use is continued for a few days there will be no return of the trouble.

Even an empty cupboard contains much food for thought.

The scratch of a pin may cause the loss of a limb or even death when blood poisoning results from the injury. All danger of this may be avoided, however, by promptly applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. AN INSPIRATION

(Original.)

His name was John Jones, but as he wrote plays he adopted the nom de plume of Ernest Montgomery. Montgomery is a long name, and we shall have to reduce it to Monty, which is crucifying to the romance of it, but since his wife called him Monty there should be no objection. He wrote at home with his study door locked. This did not prevent his occasionally hearing the baby squall or being called upon to leave a dramatic scene to go for a yeast cake. He had never succeeded in getting a play accepted, and the family funds were very low. Monty said that if he could only get an inspiration the money would flow in like water.

Monty was at work on a play in which the heroine was as spotless as Caesar's wife should have been. She was falsely charged with infidelity to her husband by the villain of the play. When the author came to the accusation scene, which, with the proved innocence of the lady, he intended for the climax, he was puzzled to know just how she would receive the stab. Would she faint? Would she hurl back the charge with passionate tears? Monty was a careful student of all the emotions he portrayed, and he conceived the idea of submitting some woman to a similar test in order to observe her emotions. The only available person was his wife. Mrs. Monty was a matter of fact woman, with not a spark of romance in her nature, and had no use for her husband's literary works except for the money it was hoped they might bring. Still she was a woman, and all he wanted to know was how any woman would act under the circumstances. He resolved to try the experiment on her.

One day after the arrival of the postman Monty called sternly for his wife to come to the study. She came up with her sleeves rolled up to the elbow, a rolling pin in her hand and in no good humor at being interrupted.

"Margaret!"

"Why, what's the matter, Monty?"

"Read that!"

Mrs. Monty took the note he handed her, and Monty fancied her on the stage. She read the accusation. Bill Summers, a friend of her husband whom she did not like, advised Monty to watch her and he would find that she was intimate with Andy Maxwell, a friend of her husband whom she did like. Monty watched her as she read and saw a thundercloud gather on her brow. "Now," he said to himself, "I shall get something definite." And he did.

"Margaret," he said solemnly, "what have you to say to that?"

"What have I to say? It is true, every word of it."

Monty turned white as a sheet and staggered back.

"And why is it true?" she continued fiercely. "Because I have been driven to it by my husband. 'Read this!' she shrieked, plunging her hand in her bosom and withdrawing a note. 'I found it in your pocket. I resolved to be avenged upon you, and now that revenge has come.'"

Monty's hand trembled so that he could scarcely grasp the note, and he was too stricken to read it. His wife took it from him and read it to him. It was from a woman who consented to an assignation he had evidently proposed. It had been manufactured by some one for a purpose, for there was no truth in what it charged. But what was his innocence worth now that his wife had confessed her guilt? Life was turned into a horror. His home, his wife, his child, his life—all were destroyed. He saw himself and his wife glaring at each other in a divorce court, fighting for the possession of their child, and heard the poor little thing's cries because she could not have both her papa and mamma. Then at last he was dying alone in a hospital, with no one to press his hand or look love's parting into his eyes.

"Monty," cried his wife, "for heaven's sake, don't look like that! It's all a put up job. I was telling Andy that you wanted an inspiration, and you have been telling him that you wanted to know how a wife would act when falsely accused. Andy put the two together and laid the plan of fooling you with that note I drew on you. I've had it in my pocket for a week, but hadn't the heart to use it. The note you gave me made me mad, so I could do my part. Now you've got an inspiration, put it on paper."

While Mrs. Monty was delivering herself of this, Monty was gradually coming to himself. Before she had finished they were locked in each other's arms and Monty was sobbing like a woman.

"There's nothing to put on paper. I was crushed and didn't say a word."

"But you felt it all."

"Yes, but I could never transcribe my feelings. Besides, they don't fit my play."

"Yes, you can. Write a play they do fit. Now, Monty, dear, go to work at once while it's all fresh."

"Sweetheart," said Monty, holding her off tragically and looking her over with an intense admiration he had never shown her before, "I believe you've hit the bullseye. Leave me, and if I am shut up here a week without coming out don't disturb me. My third and fourth acts must be written now and the play fitted to them afterward."

When "The Reconciliation," by Ernest Montgomery—that play that made Algernon Christy famous—was put on the stage, at the close both of the third and fourth acts there was not a dry eye in the house. The playwright is now rich.

F. A. MITCHELL.

GREELEY'S REVENGE.

Outcome of the Editor's Tiff With Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

The late Elizabeth Cady Stanton was particularly apt at retort, and one of her swift parries of a thrust delivered by Horace Greeley against her favorite doctrine of woman suffrage is historic.

"Madam," said Horace one day during the civil war, "the ballot and the bullet go together. If you want to vote, are you ready to fight?"

"Certainly, sir," she responded. "I am ready to fight, just as you are fighting, through a substitute."

Notwithstanding their differences of opinion, Mrs. Stanton and Greeley were personally friendly until the New York constitutional convention of 1868. A woman suffrage clause was strenuously pressed upon that body and as vigorously opposed by Mr. Greeley. One day, after the Tribune editor had made some particularly rasping remarks upon the subject, George William Curtis rose and said:

"I have the honor, Mr. Chairman, to present a petition in favor of the woman suffrage amendment signed by Mrs. Horace Greeley and 300 other ladies."

Greeley was furious and rightly ascribed the appearance of the memorial at that moment to Mrs. Stanton.

"Why did you not put my wife's maiden name on that petition and call her Mary Cheney Greeley?" he demanded the next time they met.

"Because," said Mrs. Stanton, "I wanted all the world to know that Horace Greeley's wife protested against her husband's report on the suffrage amendment."

"All right," retorted the editor. "Hereafter you shall always be spoken of in the Tribune as Mrs. Henry B. Stanton." And so it was to the time of her death, although the name of Elizabeth Cady Stanton was known to hundreds of thousands who could not identify the woman by the appellation under which the Tribune, for revenge, tried to obscure her fame.—Pilgrim.

POLITENESS IN JAPAN.

Even "Giving Notice" Is Made an Occasion of Compliments.

Politeness distinguishes the relations between mistresses and maids in Japan. It is so inextorable in Japan that even the ceremony of "giving notice" is turned into an occasion of compliments. There are no vulgar threats or sulking or recriminations or scoldings or "answering back." A servant will never tell her mistress that she is dissatisfied or has had some better place offered her. That would be unpardonably rude. Instead she asks for a few days' leave of absence. This is willingly granted, for Japanese servants have no settled time for taking holidays.

At the end of the given time the mistress will begin to wonder what has become of the girl. She is not left to wonder long. A letter arrives couched in the most polite and humble terms and giving any excuse but the real one. Sometimes it will be that she has found herself too weak for service or that illness at home detains her. Whatever it may be, the plea is never contested, but accepted as final and a new servant engaged. Then, after some weeks have passed, very likely after taking a fresh place, the old servant will turn up one day, express her thanks for past kindnesses and regrets at not returning in time, will take her arrears of wages and her bundles and disappear forever. So the matter ends with the kindest semblance of feeling on both sides.

If the mistress on her part does not wish to have the girl back, she will not tell her so to her face, but will send word. Even when servants come on trial for a few days they often leave nominally to fetch their belongings or make arrangements for their return, never because they have any "complaints" to make. Any discomfort is to be endured rather than the suspicion of bad manners or of anything leading up to a "scene."

Breaking It Gently.

Young Wife—Why, dear, you were the stroke out at college, weren't you? Young Husband—Yes, love.

"And a very prominent member of the gymnastic club."

"I was the captain."

"And quite a hand at all athletic exercises."

"Quite a hand? Why, I was the champion walker, the best runner, the head man at lifting heavy weights, and as for carrying, why, I assure you, I could shoulder with ease a barrel of—"

"Well, love, just please hold the baby for a couple of hours. The nurse has gone out, and I'm tired!"

Tony Weller's Advice.

"And how long," he asked, "have you been a widow?"

"Oh," she replied, with a blush, "the year was up yesterday. But, indeed, I didn't suppose you were so anxious, dearest. You must give me a month at least to get ready."

When he got outside again, he murmured to himself:

"Now I know what old Weller meant."

The Popular Thing to Say.

MRS. IDA McDONALD,

Supreme Deputy of the Maccabees of the World.

MRS. McDONALD, No. 477 Beaubien Street, Detroit, Mich., is a prominent woman who was greatly benefited by the great woman's medicine, Wine of Cardui. Mrs. McDonald is the supreme deputy of the Maccabees of the World, and one of the most widely known women in the United States. Thousands of women gather to hear her lecture everywhere she goes. The great work she has done for the Maccabees is appreciated by every member of the order. She was so absorbed in her work that she neglected to give her health proper care—failed to take warning that the symptoms of approaching kidney trouble gave her, the sallow complexion and torpid liver. But Wine of Cardui cured her the same as it has cured thousands of others and Mrs. McDonald has written this letter in order that other suffering women may secure from Wine of Cardui the same relief she got from it.

that I must do something to regain my health. A friend advocated your Wine of Cardui treatment so strongly that I decided to try it, although I had little faith in patent medicines. I am now very thankful that I did so, for within ten days blessed relief came to me, and in less than three months I was cured, and have enjoyed fine health ever since. I know there is nothing better for a sick woman who wishes to enjoy perfect health and am very pleased to give my hearty endorsement."

No suffering woman can afford to ignore such a letter as Mrs. McDonald writes. Her plans and advice have proved valuable in building up one of the greatest women's organizations in the United States and she takes time to give advice which she knows will help you.

Do not delay in securing this medicine. There is nothing to gain and everything to lose by delay. The choice is before you. Will or will you not secure relief now by taking Wine of Cardui? All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui as well as 25c packages of Theodor's Black-Draught.

WINE of CARDUI

A million suffering women have found relief in Wine of Cardui.

NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND BUSINESS NOTES.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Feb. 18.

"Bud Joe," assistant postmaster, informs us that a letter came to this office yesterday addressed to Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., North Carolina. Have forgotten whether he said Winterville was on the envelope. Anyway seems like the incident makes us feel more hopeful than ever of our grand little (big) town.

Misses Laura Cox and Cora Carroll spent Sunday at Shelmerdine. Can't make 'em fast enough. We mean that A. G. Cox Mfg. Co. cannot make fertilizer distributors as fast as the orders call for them. Miss Bertha Eawson, of Ayden, spent part of Saturday with Mrs. Jno. D. Cox.

Sim Chapman was in Grimesland section Sunday.

C. A. Fair and B. F. Manning are attending the State Council of Junior Order United American Mechanics now in session at High Point, as representatives from Winterville lodge.

Hearing a man remark the other day that A. G. Cox Mfg. Co.'s wagons looked as well as western wagons called our attention to their finish as well as quality. Knowing that they base their reputation on quality we have probably failed to lay proper stress on appearance. The next new one you see on the road examine it for yourself.

Miss Taylor, of LaGrange, spent Sunday with Misses Effie and Hattie Kittrell.

Any one desirous of purchasing one of the most desirable lots in Winterville with new 7 room dwelling and all necessary out houses will do well to correspond with W. L. House, of this place. Being desirous to make some special arrangements he will give some purchaser a bargain.

Mrs. W. J. Kittrell, of Grifton, who has been spending a few days with Misses Carrie and Henrietta Wesson, of this place, returned home Monday night.

We hear tell of lots of houses and fences being blown down, even of a train's being blown from track at Plymouth, but never in the annals of history has a wire fence been blown. A. Cox Mfg. Co. can give you some wire fence pointers that will be worth gold to you, farmer.

Prof. G. E. Lineberry, with a whole host of school girls, attended the teacher's meeting at the court house Saturday.

Jos. Ross, from near Whichard, has bought a house and lot and moved to Winterville. He is in the Jos. Edwards house.

On Monday Senator Blow introduced in the senate a bill to incorporate the town of Oakley and a bill to prohibit the sale or manufacture of liquor within three miles of Carolina Christian college at Ayden.
