The Personality of this Store

THERE is a personality about this store. You feel it and believe in it if you are familiar with the store. The attitude of this personality toward the public has revolutionized trade in the last few years. You who remember the old shopping methods of years ago can best appreciate the difference now from then, and can realize how many of the inconveniences and unpleasant features of shopping have disappeared in the last half dozen years, since the policy of pleasing people under all circumstances has been established.

But it is not the old attitude of "bowing and scraping" to cajole a customer into a bad bargain which could not be righted afterward. It is an attitude of assurance in the worth of the merchandise presented. An attitude of confidence that establishes the law that every salesperson shall tell the absolute truth always, and reply to all questions asked frankly, pleasantly and intelligently. This store follows the old policy—tell the truth about merchandise. If a piece of dress goods has cotton in it, that is no disgrace. We tell it frankly. Many people prefer a little cotton in a certain class of dress goods. If a customer wants an all-wool dress it is here. If the price is higher, it is right. If some other store has told the customer that a part wool is all wool, and that customer thinks our goods dear, and goes to the other store to buy the deception, we have lost a sale, but kept our reputation, and will probably get that customer back when the cotton begins to show in the cheat.

It is not a question of morals or sentiment. In the cold logic of "Honesty is the best policy." This store's personality presents an attitude of pleasantness, confidence, frankness, helpfulness, anxiety to please and satisfy in every transaction. Whenever this store fails in any of these particulars some human agency has failed in its loyalty to the principles of this store. And where there are many human minds and each with a pair of human hands, with the instincts of human frailty, composing an organization, human weakness will at times fail. But the idea is ever present. The intent is in every pulse-beat, and every error is promptly, pleasantly and, if possible, effectually righted, the flaw in the machinery corrected and endeavor continued. We are trying to deserve the success that has come to our store. If we knew how to serve the whole public better, we would do it. The best that seems possible today we are doing; we hope to do better tomorrow.

Saturday evening, February 21st, from 3 to 6 o'clock, we will sell

IN HIS NAME.

Only a Drummer, But One of The King's Sons.

An incident occurred on the train a few afternoons ago, that shows man's humanity to the weak and destitute, and that there is a bond of sympathy that unites all hearts in the presence of sorrow. When the train stopped at Grifton a sad faced woman accompanied by six small children got on the car and occupied the seats nearest the door. This of itself might be considered nothing unusual to be seen by persons accustomed to much traveling. But there was another, a young lady, who got on the train at the same station and took a seat further down the car that was partly occupied by another passenger, too many people being on the car for each to occupy a whole seat. Soon after the train pulled out the person on the seat with the young lady made some inquiring remark about the lady and children up in front. She replied that it was one of the saddest cases she had ever known, and upon being questioned further told a pitiful story that touched the hearts of all who sat near enough to overhear her conversation.

It was this: Earlier in the year a man with his wife and six children had moved from near Winston and come to the eastern section of the state. He had rented a farm near Grifton and settled there to try and make a support for himself and family. Some days ago while the man was out doing his work he was suddenly seized with some trouble, fell over into a ditch and was drowned. In the short time they had been there they had become acquainted with only a few people, so that the mother and children had been left comparatively among strangers and almost penniless. Kind people in the neighborhood had buried the husband and father and made up something for the mother, and now she and the children had started as best they could to make their way back to relatives at her old home.

Sitting on the opposite side of the aisle from the young woman as she softly told this sad story, was a drummer—a man who was not only large in stature but also had a great heart within his breast. He had rested his head on his hand and listened quietly. When she had finished he put his hand in his pocket and taking it out held it toward a companion on the seat with him. The hand was not empty, and his companion, quickly taking the hint, added liberally to what it contained. The large drummer then arose from his seat, and walking through the car held out his hand to first one and another, never speaking a word. Nor was a word necessary, for in not an instance did the hand fail to meet a generous response. He then walked up to the front of the car where sat the sad faced mother with her back to the others, knowing nothing of what had been said or done, where he gently laid the offering in her lap and returned in silence to his seat. The act was done so gently, so modestly, as to make it beautiful and touching.

When THE REFLECTOR was told of this incident no names were learned, and possibly it is best so. But the Recording Angel in Heaven knows the names, and doubtless opposite that of the drummer and those who joined him in the offering is written "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me."

Latham-Mathews.

On last Wednesday morning a pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Anthony's Chapel of St. Mathews's church, the contracting parties being Miss Harriet Elizabeth Mathews, of Washington, daughter of the late Hon. Edward T. and Jane E. Mathews, and Mr. Charles Louis Latham, of Greenville N. C. The ceremony was performed and the nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. Father Lee. The bride was elegantly attired in a becoming gown of white cloth, elaborately tucked and trimmed with old lace, a picture hat of pale blue tulle trimmed with black ostrich feathers completing an effective toilet. She was attended by her aunt, Mrs. Henry Custer, with whom she entered the church. The groom was accompanied by his best man, Mr. Julian Buxton, of Portsmouth, Va. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion with plants, palms and flowers. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at 822 Connecticut avenue, to which only the relatives and a few intimate friends were invited. Many handsome and valuable presents were received by the young couple.

The honeymoon will be spent in the Northern cities and in North Carolina, where they will be entertained by the groom's relatives, and will be at home to their friends in this city at the Gladstone on March 25.—Washington, D. C., Post, 22nd.

Lenten Services at the Episcopal Church.

Tomorrow being Ash Wednesday, there will be services at the Episcopal church at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. There will also be daily services through lent at 4 p. m., except on days when the rector will be necessarily absent. These absences will be announced whenever they may occur.

The seriousness and significance of this penitential season emphasizing the struggle in the wilderness, the death on the cross and the glorious resurrection on Easter day, should go home to the hearts of all Christian men and women. Let it be an honest earnest struggle in this wilderness of sin; a real discipline of mind and heart and will which has for its goal a death unto sin and a resurrection unto that Life which was in Christ Jesus.

The church is always open to all who care to worship there.

Wm. E. Cox, Rector.

Notice to Telephone Subscribers.

All subscribers to the Greenville telephone exchange are requested to call by number and not by name when they wish to communicate with any other subscriber. The number of subscribers to the exchange has grown so large that it is impossible for the operator to remember the numbers of each and give connection promptly when only the name is asked for. Always give the number when you ring and delay will thus be avoided. Any subscriber not having a directory can get one by notifying central.

A Case of Experience.

The Salisbury Sun gives a story worthy of most serious notice and reflection over in the experience of a well-to-do and contented Rowan farmer who left the county after selling off his property and joining the the Mormons in far off Idaho. Three years of such life and experience was quite sufficient to convince the Rowan man that Mormonism was not of his liking and to lead him back to his once prosperous home to begin life anew. The alluring and seductive argument of the unknown and untried often appeals to those who are far better off than they think and leads them into new paths, the turning from which brings them back to the starting point, with nothing but loss on the credit side. The Concord Tribune thinks that the experience of this once happy and prosperous man should be published far and wide for it is convincing argument that Mormonism is not to be desired, nor any other new fake which is daily held up to honest folks.—Durham Sun.

Bishop Guilty of Manslaughter.

The jury on the trial of Bishop, at Charlotte, for the murder of Wilson, returned a verdict at 12:20 Sunday afternoon, that Bishop was guilty of manslaughter. Monday morning Judge Neal sentenced him to five years in the penitentiary.

The jury had had the case since Thursday, and it looked like they were deadlocked and would not reach a verdict. Two or three times they went into court and notified Judge Neal that they could not agree and asked to be discharged, but each time the judge sent them back with instructions to continue together until a verdict could be reached. The patience of Judge Neal is commendable.

NO LAWYERS BEYOND THE PEARLY GATES.

Our friends the lawyers will have to make other arrangements for the future, as the Durham Sun, at one fell swoop, rules them out of Heaven:

Of course Durham will appeal the case to the highest court in the land, but it begins to look as if the only redress it will ever get will be in the court house in the skies.—Greenville REFLECTOR.

Brother, "the court house in the skies" is the last place you would expect the Southern Railway Company to remove a case to, and besides it is "beyond" the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Fact is, no Durham traveler ever buys a ticket via the Southern to that blest abode, and few railroad lawyers ever expect to practice their "profession" in that "court house in the skies." If the change of venue ever reaches that "court house in the skies," the case will then have to be heard without argument, as no lawyer will be there, and a speedy decision upon the merits might be looked for.

Another scheme to mulct the South is apparent in the bill introduced in congress by Representative Burleson to place a tax of one tenth of a cent on every bale of cotton, ostensibly for the purpose of reimbursing the government for gathering statistics of the cotton crop. This is but another phase of the century-old method of robbing the South for the benefit of the balance of the country. The government charges no special premium for recording facts about Western wheat, Pennsylvania coal or New England nutmegs. The government sharks need the money, that's the why and wherefore, and they look to the South to furnish it, the same as in the past.

With his usual whine Pitt county's legislature freak attempts to wriggle out of the ditch to which we consigned him last week, but with utter failure. He is unable to justify his conduct, and resorts to cheap billingsgate to hide his discomfiture. Such tactics are worthy of a tenth rate newspaper and an "editor" without any rating at all, but they are beneath our contempt. Good white paper should never be spoiled by anything so unworthy.

Just think of a steamship with capacity to accommodate over three thousand passengers. Such is the White Star Line's new steamship Cedric. She would not have to take but one or two trips to transport all the inhabitants of most of the towns of North Carolina.—Wilmington Messenger.

But just think what would happen if a number of citizens of rival towns should get mixed in the cargo. The Cedric would be "the ship that never returned."

There was talk of having the legislature to authorize an issue of $400,000 bonds for the state, to meet expenses and appropriation, and now it is said the governor is advising that the amount of bonds be even larger—a round half million. Better go slow in that direction, gentlemen of the legislature.

It is positively painful to note the difficulty Andrew Carnegie has in giving his money away. If it is impossible to get rid of it any other way we suggest that the little Scotchman kick the bucket and give the lawyers a chance.

The jug neighbor next door to "its representative" no doubt thinks it very strange that he should apply that contemptuous term to said jug neighbor after having voted to give him a license.

If the legislature adjourns without passing some temperance legislation it will establish a record for cowardice that will prove a hoodoo to the political future of every member of it.

No doubt "its representative" thinks as well of himself as usual, as he is too thoroughly saturated with his own importance to be touched by anything less than a Gatling gun.

At this writing Pitt county's missing representatives have not been located, and the great "P" continues to run the legislature.

A new scheme to work the negroes is exposed. Will somebody please expose a scheme that will really make them work?

From the bare facts in hand it would seem that a hemp-stretching seance in Raleigh would be very appropriate just now.

So that's all the fight there is in "its representative"—he has no other argument or weapon save "y'c u're another."

Wonder if "its representative" would take Messrs. Blow and Little in out of the cold should he find them?

From the way the animal whines it is apparent that "It is the Hit Hog that Hollers" hit the spot.

Getting a tax on dogs may have to wait for another legislature.

Well, well, Pitt county will try to do better next time.

Kicking machines are still in order.

Why Tell Nasty Things at All?
The Charlotte Observer is being criticised by some of the state papers for printing the evidence in the Bishop case. While some of the evidence was not as clean as it might have been, the Observer's local man has the knack of telling a nasty thing nicely.—Durham Herald.

Tendency of the times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold of from an attack of influenza (grip) and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted; it always cures. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

The Easy Pill.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers do not gripe nor weaken the system. They cure biliousness, jaundice, constipation and inactive livers, by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach, liver and bowels that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely. These famous little pills exert a decided tonic effect upon the organs involved, and if their use is continued for a few days there will be no return of the trouble.

A Mother's Recommendation.

causes a weak body and invites disease. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures and strengthens the stomach, and wards off and overcomes disease. J. B. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol, I concluded to try it. The first bottle benefited me, and after taking four bottles I am fully restored to my usual strength, weight and health."

A HOLDUP

(Original.)

It was in the olden time when a traveler between Denver and Laramie must go in an old fashioned stage-coach. There was one season when the coach was robbed as often as once a week. Passengers knew that there was one chance in seven of being held up on the road and traveled with little or no money on their persons. Nevertheless there was no other way of transporting valuables, and sometimes persons were obliged to take great risks.

It was necessary for me to go through to Laramie on important business. I found in the coach a young lady and two miners. This generation cannot realize the high position of women in that uncouth country at that period. As rare and beautiful birds are protected by game laws, so were the few women always safe in the chivalrous sentiment of the many men.

Of course we all soon got acquainted, the miners, who were of rough exterior, leaving the young lady to me. The chief topic of discussion was what we would do in case of a holdup. One miner said that he had a hundred dollars in dust in his hip pocket with a revolver and would draw the revolver first. The other miner had $50 hidden under his shirt and if required to surrender it at the point of a pistol he would certainly do so. The young lady, who was going east to spend the winter, had her ticket and some small bills in her pocketbook, the rest, four $100 bills, concealed in her hair. I confessed with equal frankness that all I had brought with me was in my vest pocket and if it was taken I couldn't help it.

Sure enough, the holdup came. The first we knew of it the coach came to a stop and the door was flung open from the outside. Half a dozen masked men stood in the road with rifles cocked and ready for use while another held their horses. The man who opened the door ordered the passengers out and to stand in line to be searched. I was first examined and relieved of some $50 in my vest pocket. The miners came next. The man with the revolver in his hip pocket had no opportunity to use it, for we all stood hands up. He and his friend were both plundered. The robbers were rather pleased to find more than usual and after politely wishing us a pleasant journey were about to permit us to go on when one of them, looking at me sharply, said:

"Young man, weren't you taller in the bank when a lot of us went through it one day two years ago?"

"I was."

"Well, I reckon you must be in the same business now."

"I'm buying horses for the government."

"What—buying horses with this chicken feed?" referring to the cash they had taken.

"See here," I said. "You men are not so sharp as you think. I wouldn't be delayed on this trip for a gold mine. If I tell you where you can find $400, will you let us go?"

At first they said that if I didn't give them the information I should never go on and began to search the coach. Not finding anything and fearing an interruption, they assented to my terms.

"You will find it in that young lady's hair," I said.

They at once took off the girl's hat, removed the hairpins and found the bills, which they held aloft with glee.

It is many years since I saw the glance of contempt given me by the young lady, but it is as plain in my memory today as it was then. It was something to wound my amour propre, but the fierce glances turned upon me by the miners indicated that when left alone with me they would end my career without benefit either of clergy or jury.

The robbers, delighted with the addition to their find acquired through my instrumentality, jumped on their horses and rode away in a hurry. The two miners watched them till they turned into a wood. Then the man with the revolver slowly drew it from his hip pocket and, pointing it at me, said:

"Say yer pra'ars!"

"One moment, 'T—"

"Not a second! I'll teach you, you low down dog, that no man in Colorado can play such a game as that on a woman."

"But—"

"Say your pra'ars!" thundered the man, nervously endeavoring to keep his finger off the trigger of his pistol. It began to look as if I should be sent out of the world without an opportunity to speak a word in my defense, but the young lady interfered.

"Leave him to me," she said, brushing the pistol aside with her hand. "He injured me, not you."

The man stood irresolute.

"Give me a chance to explain," I pleaded.

"Why did you do it?" asked the girl.

"I am the cashier of the —th National bank of Denver. I have fifty $1,000 bills sewed up in my clothing. If I hadn't diverted the attention of the robbers, they would have got it all. Your $400 will be returned with a splendid interest. You men will each receive a handsome present, and whenever you want grub staked while working a claim you will get it from our bank. Now let us get on as fast as possible and save the treasure. Something might induce the agents to return."

They consented with alacrity. After the girl reached her home she received a certificate of stock of the bank worth $5,000. The men later on were grub staked in working a claim which they sold for a good profit.

T. FEBIGER EARLE.

One of Herrmann's Tricks.

Not many months before his death Alexander Herrmann, the magician, was a guest at the famous but now defunct Whitechapel club, the rendezvous of Chicago Bohemians. On the night in question a venerable Japanese priest was present. In the course of a few tricks Herrmann picked up a deck of cards and asked some one to select a card. The seven of clubs was the card drawn from the pack, and it was shown to the spectators, but not to the magician. The card was replaced in the deck, which was shuffled and then handed to one of the spectators.

"Look through the deck, please," said Herrmann.

The holder of the cards did as requested.

"Is the card that was drawn in the pack?" asked the wizard.

"No, sir," answered the spectator.

"What was the card?"

"The seven of clubs."

"Well, gentlemen," said Herrmann, "if one of you will kindly unlace the prelate's shoe you will find the card that has vanished from the pack."

After a smiling protest the Japanese priest unlaced his shoe, and there, to the amazement of all, was found the seven spot of clubs.—Rochester Post-Express.

Spider Fancies.

An elderly lady who lives in her own house at Buttes Chaumont, Paris, has discovered that spiders are peculiarly appreciative of music. She has made great pets of them, and her house is full of spiders of all kinds, on whom she spends her time and fortune.

Her proteges are lodged in a large, airy room, where she has provided every necessary support for their different webs. Her great favorites are immense black spiders, which, with their hairy legs and great bodies, look very repulsive to others.

When she is inclined to show off their capabilities for music, she surrounds herself with a circle of water to keep off their too delicate attentions and plays slowly, softly and in a minor key on the harp. From all corners of the room the spiders run toward her, listening with evident pleasure, but should she strike up a noisy, gay, inharmonious strain they scamper back to their holes as though disgusted.

A curious fact in connection with this story is that the lady bears the birthmark of a spider.

Mistletoe.

The mistletoe comes chiefly from Brittany. Some 700 tons of the charming white berried plant are exported from French ports yearly. This mistletoe is to the Breton what the pig is to the Irishman—it pays the rent. The peasants of Normandy and Brittany cultivate the parasite on their apple trees—contrary to popular belief, it rarely grows on oaks—and it forms their most profitable crop. A few years ago the French department of agriculture decreed the destruction of all mistletoe, on the ground that it injured the apple trees. The peasants, however, denied the impeachment, and as the order is not enforced, they grow and export more "guy" than ever for the Christmas enlightenment of English and American homes.

Instinct Stronger Than Will.

A curious story is told of Darwin and snakes. He used to go into the London Zoological society's gardens, Regent's park, and, standing by the glass case containing the cobra de capello, put his forehead against the glass while the cobra struck out at him. The glass was between them. Darwin's mind was perfectly convinced as to the inability of the snake to harm him, yet he would always dodge. Time after time he tried it, his will and reason keeping him there, his instinct making him dodge. The instinct was stronger than both will and reason.

Splendid Isolation.

"Why do you remain apart from others?" asked a young lion of his sire.

"Would not a herd of lions present an imposing array?"

"By no means," answered the elder.

"It would greatly diminish the respect now felt for us. Sheep may herd together, but the lion must flock by himself."—New York Herald.

The Boston Boy.

Mamma—Johnny, did you wipe your feet on the mat when you came in?

Johnny—I couldn't get my shoestrings untied. They were in a hard knot.

Mamma—But what have shoestrings to do with it?

Johnny—I couldn't wipe my feet without taking off my shoes, could I?—Boston Transcript.

Hopeless.

He—Suppose I should ask your father if I could marry you. Do you think I would stand any chance?

She—No. Your case would be hopeless.

He—Do you think he would really say "No"?

She—Not that; but he would leave it to me.

A Double Barreled Joke.

The facetious boarder had the plot laid for a killing joke.

"It's a wonder," he said, "that you didn't serve up this hen, feathers and all."

"The next time," said the landlady, with marked emphasis, "I'll serve her, bill and all."

Causes.

"Success," I asserted sagely, "is due to our accurate judgment of human nature."

"And," retorted the man who always carries things to extremes, "to its inaccurate judgment of us."—Brooklyn Life.

The man who teaches women to smoke always marries one who won't let him do it himself.—New York Times.

Babylonian Creation Legends.

The story of the creation, as told on the clay tablets of ancient Babylon, is interesting. Several deities appear to have been regarded as in existence at the beginning of things. At least two, Apsu and Tiamat, represented chaos, and the former rebelled against the gods in consequence. The chief struggle was between him and Ea, whose son, Bel, created the world. Man was made by Marmuk, who in spite of the difference in name may have been identical with Bel. The creation of man was the culminating event of the history. Marmuk told Ea that he intended to perform his task and asked his father to behead him. Man was to be made out of Marmuk's blood and bone. Marmuk appears to have survived decapitation, as he subsequently took part in the councils of the gods. Many parallels between these legends and the Hebrew story of the creation can be detected by scholars. The idea that seven days were devoted to the work may have long antedated Abraham's time. The oldest tablets yet discovered are not originals, but copies. These date back only 668-626 B. C.

Benton and His Wife.

Senator Benton of Missouri was a model of tenderness and devotion to his invalid wife. It seems that during her later years her mind became impaired by a paralytic stroke, but she never failed to recognize her husband and was fond of being near him. Once when her distinguished husband was entertaining a foreign prince in the drawing room Mrs. Benton came to the door in a state of undress and stood gazing at her husband. The attention of the company being attracted in her direction, Benton turned to see what the attraction was. On perceiving his poor wife he immediately rose, went to her, took her tenderly by the hand and, leading her into the room, said, "My dear, Prince So-and-so; prince, Mrs. Benton, sir." Then affectionately placing a hassock for her by the side of his chair he resumed his seat, and, leaving one of his hands in hers for her to toy with, he went on with the conversation. The prince was quick to take in the situation and adapted himself to the occasion with consummate tact, while all the Missourians were deeply affected.

The Silk Hats Worn in London.

There are always two kinds of silk hats, each of the best quality, on sale in London. One is the strictly fashionable model, "the latest," or whatever one may choose to call it, which is retailed in the west end at from a guinea to 25 shillings. The other is the style which immediately preceded it and has "gone out," although the quality is unchanged. This is usually called the "city" hat and costs 16 shillings. The distinction is a very peculiar one. Employees of large London commercial houses are not expected to be up to the hilt in fashion, and if they are it is sure to be resented by their employers. A London city magnate would not be seen wearing the same shape hat as one of his bookkeepers, and so the great army of salary drawers keep just a shape behind the bondholding community.

A Caution to Sweethearts.

In 1834 the Primitive Methodists of Burnley issued an edict against Sunday courting. They regarded it as so serious an offense against the dignity of the Sabbath that they actually passed in solemn and sober earnest the following stern and autocratic minute: "That we do not allow young men, and young women of our society to court with each other on Sunday; neither do we allow our single men and women to walk in the street together, arm in arm, at any time; neither do we allow them to stand at street corners chatting together."

Grant's Baggage.

General Grant always yielded in a sort of whimsical way to his wife's domination of himself and his affairs. The "family" ran the household as it pleased, without much reference to General Grant's predilections. Once at the railway station in Galena he called the attention of a friend to a truckload of trunks ready for shipment east. "Do you see that pile?" he asked. "That is the Grant's baggage. Do you see that little black valise away up on top? That's mine."

Had It.

"Yes, it's a fine house, Mandy," admitted the prim and angular Aunt Rachel, to whom all its magnificence seemed a sinful waste of money, "and I suppose there's really no room for improvement."

"Oh, yes, auntie; I have that, too," said her city niece, showing her into the elegant little apartment where she usually dressed for dinner.—Chicago Tribune
