SPRING 1903

NEW WHITE GOODS WELCOME

COLOR is eliminated from the card today. White Goods first in store displays as they will be in your thoughts, we trust. Ten years ago, yes, four or five years, even—who would have dreamed of the beauty to be brought out in fabric art without a touch from rainbow tints? Pure white, but so varied have been the dreams of designers, so cleverly have loom wizards wrought, that there is hardly a limit to variety. White has only been thought of as a repellent for summer's heat. The sheerest effects have been sought, but now, however, white fabrics, chevots, madras and piques are brought out in rich style assortment. White has overstepped the limits of summer months and hereafter will be an all-the-year-round factor.

WHITE PIQUES

In a large variety of the up-to-date styles and designs in Imported Piques that are worth your while to inspect at 12 1-2, 15, 20 and 25c.

WHITE DIMITIES

In all of the newest designs and weaves, dots, stripes and lace stripes at 8 1-3, 10, 12 1-2, 15, 18, 20,
22 1-2, 25 and 30c.

WHITE MADRAS

In Crepe de Chine designs with Satin stripes that will retain its lustre after it is laundered at 30 and 35c.

WHITE LAWNS

In Lace Striped and Hemstitched Patterns. Such a line has never before been your pleasure to see in Greenville at the following prices per yard:

10, 12 1-2, 15, 18, 20,
25, 35, 40 and 50c.

FEBRUARY was a month for clearing out all winter goods. Low prices were marked on entire stock of goods that were not wanted. This week and next we must clear the shelves of the remainder of winter stock. Bed Blankets, Comforts, Ladies' Jackets, Skirts, Fur Scarfs, Men's Overcoats, Clothing and Furnishings.

Friday, March 6th, we will sell Comforts that were $1.50 for 98c.

On Saturday, March 7th, we will sell Men's Macintosh Coats, with Cape, 44 inches long, former price, $3.00, for 98c.
SIZES 34 TO 46.

Suggestions as to Opening Exercises.

[Paper read before Pitt County Teachers' Association by Miss Laura Cox.]

I suppose every one who has had a subject assigned thinks that he or she has had the most difficult of all, but it you will think seriously for awhile you will discover that the subject assigned me, "Suggestions as to Opening Exercises," is really one upon which you can not expand if you stick to the subject.

To formulate some definite plan as to how public schools shall be opened is more than we are well able to do, but we might suggest how or what we would do. Surroundings and circumstances have, or ought to have, something to do with our opening exercises. There are many different families represented in one little school, consequently many different opinions as to what or how things should be done, especially as pertains to anything devotional.

Many people object to a public school being opened with devotional exercises because they fear some special doctrine might be taught, and indeed it might be a temptation to carry it too far, for some teacher might be so zealous in his or her own belief as to want to interperse more or less denominationalism in them and as a natural consequence the parents, whose religious belief hap to differ with that of the teacher, would be much dissatisfied, so the question for us to solve is, what would be just to teacher, parent, and pupil?

The morning exercise carries great possibilities with it, therefore we should make it as attractive as we well can. We ought to start the day happily; so that, it matters not what the child has to endure before leaving home, his memory of the opening exercises will be at all times a pleasure and the inspiration gained may go with him through life. We should have some music but not of too serious a nature. The songs should be calculated to lift the soul to God in praise, thanksgiving and adoration. The Bible should be read, but with great care. The pictures of torment should be left out, and those lessons of hope, courage and promise coupled with those of duty should be touched very heavily. We might take Bible stories and interest the children with them, for what child is it who would not be interested in the story of Joseph's coat of many colors, of Daniel in the lion's den, of the sleeping Samuel when the Lord called him, of Moses in the bulrushes, and of the life of Christ himself.

The selection of scripture, the prayer to be offered, and the music require a great deal of thought.

If we are thoughtful as we should be we can make it the sweetest part of the day.

In some communities we might be fortunate enough to have some of the leading patrons to visit us and conduct these exercises for us, if so, this might prove to be a blessing to us as well as the children, for many parents would feel highly honored to be called upon to perform such a task.

The reading of the Bible in an indifferent manner does not increase the pupils reverence for it nor touch their emotional nature. Rather than have the real end of the so called devotional exercise subverted it would be much better to omit it altogether. There is little difficulty in making them interesting to pupils. They should be brief and pervaded by the teacher's interest and a reverent spirit. The prayer should be brief and in form and spirit it should be a school prayer.

If we can so plan these exercises that no one's conscience will be hurt by them, but will be looked forward to by all with pleasant anticipations, and back with fond memories, we have found the key to success in this part of the work.

There are three avenues which should remain open for the introduction of needed religious truth and sanctions in our schools. These are Christian literature sacred song, and Christian teachers; and against these there is no law.

Quick Building.

A little more than two weeks ago the town of Grimesland was swept by fire, and J. O. Proctor & Bro., the largest merchants there, were among those burned out. This firm set to work at once to put up a building in which to resume business. They employed about twenty carpenters and having lumber convenient the work was pushed so rapidly that in less than two weeks from the time it was started a two story building 46x72 feet had been erected. Mr. W. E. Proctor, who was in town Monday, told us they were moving in the new building.

The Newspapers are Business Enterprises.

There seems to be a feeling on the part of some people that a newspaper does not need money. They do not seem to regard it as a business enterprise in the conduct of which money is required just as in any other business. The fact is the newspaper business is the most exacting business in every way. It has financial obligations to meet the same as any other business, and they must be met promptly. Its income is derived from many sources and in small amounts. Hence the necessity of prompt payments by its patrons.

The conscientious publisher deserves all he gets and more. His business means long hours and the greatest care in its conduct. The newspaper has the entire public to deal with. It has to deal with all the factions and cranks in the community, with all the frauds and folks with axes to grind, and to do this successfully requires judgment and much patience. It has power, to the credit of journalism be it said, is nearly always wielded for the public good. Questions of vital concern to home people never fail to find support from the newspapers, and this, too, without remuneration—often without even a word of encouragement or thanks. The publisher devotes his time, energy and money to the promotion and welfare of his town and community, and the people never give a thought to the matter of cost to him.

Every community needs good newspapers. The life and business of a town are judged by its newspapers. The way to have good newspapers is to assist in making the business more profitable. Subscribe for your home paper, read it and pay for it. Advertise in it, not because the paper needs your help, but because the paper can help you. And when you do so pay the editor like you pay the butcher, the baker and other people. Do not require him to "trade it out"—eat up or wear out the amount of his bill—thus inculcating in him the principles of extravagance which are repugnant to his nature.—Newton Enterprise.

A bank wrecker was fined $5,000 the other day, and by paying the sum will escape jail. Why wouldn't it be a profitable business to wreck banks at $6,000 a week?—Washington Times.

PERSONAL NOTES

Brief Mention of People Met
With in the Social World

J. S. Joyner, of Baltimore, was here today.

Thos. McGee, of Goldsboro, is in town.

J. W. Waters, of New Berne, came in this morning.

J. S. Mooring left this morning for Richmond.

G. E. Cherry left this morning for Norfolk.

Burwell Riddick, of Suffolk, came in Monday evening.

T. B. Tyack left Monday evening for Kinston.

J. S. Norman returned Monday evening from a trip on the road.

Mrs. M. H. Quinerly left Monday evening for LaGrange.

Mrs. Sarah Beddard, of Whitakers, came in Monday evening to visit relatives here.

Mrs. M. L. Wood, of Bertie, came in Monday evening to visit at Hotel Macon.

T. H. Walker left Monday evening for his home in Virginia to remain until the next tobacco season.

Mrs. Williams and children, of Wilson, who have been visiting relatives in this section, left Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Munford and little son, Charlie, returned Monday evening from New Orleans where they had been to the Mardi Gras.

A Chicago confectioner who was swindled out of $7,378 by confidence men with a neat story about an Italian princess, must have been something of a marshmallow.—Atlanta Journal.

One who shall for the present be nameless fires this conundrum at us: "What drug did Lot ask for when he got to heaven's gate?" "Where shall I find my salt, Peter?"—Chicago Record Herald.

Mr. Smith (in street car)—Madam take my seat. Mrs. Jones (who has been standing fifteen minutes)—No, thanks. I get off at the next corner. Mr. Smith—That's all right. So do I.—Chicago Journal.

LOVE AND THE LIGHT OF MORNING.

A shelter rude and a crust of bread,
But your hand in mine on the way I tread,
And the red blooms over the roses dead,
And love, and the light of the morning!

A sorrow filling the lonely years,
But your smile like light in a rain of tears,
And your sweet, firm faith and your whispered prayers,
And love, and the light of morning!

And so we mingle and so we meet,
And shall—till the journey, at last complete,
We rest with the beautiful dream and sweet,
And love, and the light of morning!
—Atlanta Constitution.

The Way of a Maid With a Man.

"I've seats for the play," quoth the man to the maiden, as into the parlor he sped,

"They're pretty well back, but I know you'll excuse it; the house was sold out, so they said; The seats were all gone, so we'll ride on a street car—you'll find it a novelty sure—

And I know you'll be vexed; I forgot to bring flowers, but certainly, that you'll endure!

"I regret very much that I have an engagement to go with another young man.

He got a whole box and a cart load of posies, for he is a person who can.

It's not quite the fad to embark on the trolley, as you are perhaps well aware;

And society frowns on a youth who computes with a basis of five cent fare."

—Cleveland Press.

Died.

Mrs. Martha Kennerdy died a little past 3 o'clock this morning at the home of her son, Mr. A. F. Kennerdy, in West Greenville, after an illness of several months. She was 68 years old and leaves one son, Mr. A. F. Kennerdy, one brother, Mr. A. A. Forbes and one sister, Mrs. Caroline Evans. Besides these there are a large number of near relatives and many friends who mourn her death. Mrs. Kennerdy was an excellent woman, her life being filled with deeds of love and kindness.

The funeral will take place Wednesday at the family burial ground four miles from town.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 3, 1903.

"What are politics?" asks the Wilson Times. Politics is.

Theodore has failed to show that a good bear hunter necessarily makes a good president.

Senator Morgan is on the home-stretch—if he doesn't decide to make a few more brief remarks.

"The president talks through a friend," says a press dispatch. Theodore must have bought a gas proof hat.

We fail to see why the fact that Governor Aycock and Senator Simmons drafted the Watts bill should be against it.

We extend congratulations to the Durham Sun upon the occasion of its fourteenth natal day. May its light never fail.

A new baboon at the New York zoo has been named after the kaiser, and it's now up to New York's fashionables to become jealous.

The employee who can be depended upon to run the business while the boss is away, will own the business if the boss goes away too often.

Among other tribulations we are to have a visit from Anna Gould's old man, Boni Castellane. We hope he will bring his car fare along with him.

Senator Hoar probably thought he owed something to his party for his views on expansion, so he hooked on to the negro as the handiest thing lying around.

Unless all signs fail Congressman DeArnold of Missouri will figure prominently in future democratic performances. He is already the idol of western and central democrats.

"History always vindicates the dimmerats, but never in their lifetime," says Mr. Dooley. Colonel Bryan will have to take his'n in the great beyond along with the rest of us.

When Northern and Southern democrats divide, there are enough on either side to defeat the whole party. When republicans divide—Oh, well they never do, not so as you would notice it.

Some people in the western part of the state are saying that many distilleries cannot afford to move to town. Well, they can grind their corn up and send the meal to the starving children of drunken parents.

Well, well. As much time as congress has on its hands doing nothing, the members imagine themselves so busy that they have actually gone to desecrating the Sabbath. A four hours' session was held the past Sunday. Fine example for the national law makers to be setting the people of what is claimed to be a Christian land.

We regret that the Raleigh Christian Advocate should see fit to throw mud at the Watts bill, now that it's all over. We wanted the London bill, but not getting that think it wisest to make the best of what we have, at least for the present. As to the Watts bill being endorsed by the liquor interests, that is, of course, all bosh.

These are the opening lines of the irrepressible Barnyard Rippling's latest poem in celebration of Mr. Chamberlain's mission to South Africa.

"When my fresh-turned furrows run and the deep soil glistens red, I will repair the wrong that was done to the living and the dead."

Mr. Chamberlain ought to take the balance of that poem along to keep cannibals at a safe distance.

From the following telegram from New Haven, Conn., to the Baltimore Sun it would seem that Smoot of Utah is not the worst thing in pants.

"Rev. H. L. Hutchins reported to the federation of churches here today that he has found polygamy practiced in Connecticut, and an appalling state of illiteracy, immorality, political corruption and a growing proportion of imbecility in rural sections. He is an agent for the Connecticut Bible Society.

"Hard cider and the exceptionally poor state of the public school system were mentioned as the causes, and, added to these causes, the growing habit of intermarriage between blood relations. In many towns the churches are deserted, he says and "Godliness is only a tradition." The town of Asheville was cited as one place where some of the inhabitants are opium eaters."

Chartered a Train.

Mr. J. B. Duke, of New York, president of the American Tobacco Company, came in on a belated train from the north yesterday morning and found the train for Durham gone. This would have materially interfered with most men's plans, as the average person would have been compelled to wait here until the next regular train went to Durham, but things are different with Mr. Duke. If there is no train to carry him to his destination, he leases one and speeds on his way. This is what he did yesterday when he found the train for Durham gone. Going to Superintendent Chapman he wished to know if he could lease a train to carry him to Durham and was answered in the affirmative. The train was ordered at once and Mr. Duke said that he wished to get to Durham by a given time. Engineer Avery was given charge of the train and in one hour and ten minutes from the time the special left this station it was standing in front of the home of Mr. Washington Duke in Durham. —Greensboro Telegram.

The president must be finding the task of holding open the "door of hope" for the colored brother a somewhat chilling occupation. —Columbia State

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil this Story to Tell it in the Headlines.

To use an 18th century expression, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harman, of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced, as I was." For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, and Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

John Stapleton can eat more cabbage than a cow.

A Remarkable Case.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I run down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Jno. L. Wooten.

Dave Johnson got his old white hat burned last week.

Wakeful Children.

For a long time the two year old child of Mr. P. L. McPherson, 59 N. Tenth street, Harrisburg, Pa., would sleep but two or three hours in the early part of the night, which made it very hard for her parents. Her mother concluded that the child had stomach trouble and gave her half of one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which quieted her stomach and she slept the whole night through. Two boxes of these Tablets have effected a permanent cure and she is now well and strong. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, and Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

"Bob" Davis works night and day to provide feed for his mule. Boys, let's all work.—Sneedville (Tenn.) Times.

The Stomach is the Man.

A weak stomach weakens the man, because it cannot transform the food he eats into nourishment. Health and strength cannot be restored to any sick man or weak woman without first restoring health and strength to the stomach. A weak stomach cannot digest enough food to feed the tissues and revive the tired and run down limbs and organs of the body. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cleanses, purifies, sweetens and strengthens the glands and membranes of the stomach, and cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Jno. L. Wooten.

The Standard Oil Company has declared another dividend and it is now believed that Mr. Rockefeller will be able to pull through the winter and pay his telegraph bills.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Colds are Dangerous.

How often you hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. Sold by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, and Farmville Pharmacy, Farmville.

Continuous advertising creates confidence. The prevailing opinion is that one cannot be constantly before the public without being found out and known for what he is. The people believe in a man who can stand trial by the public. —Printers Ink.

PROPOSAL BY PIANO

[Copyright, 1902, by McClure's Newspaper Syndicate.]

Clarice Vantine sat in the coolest corner of the hotel piazza idly strumming upon her guitar. The light from the parlor window fell at her feet, a broad band of yellow streaking the soft gloom of the vine hung corner. Some one was picking out popular songs with one finger, but presently the labored playing ceased, and Clarice gave a sigh of relief.

Her aunt, Mrs. Harvan, sighed also in deep satisfaction, not, however, over the departure of the pianist, because she had been deaf to music and all other sounds these ten comfortable years. Her contentment was due to the fact that she had steered Clarice through an entire summer at Ocean View without once having permitted a tete-a-tete with Carleton Jason, though he had not missed a single Sunday since their arrival.

There was no particular reason why Mrs. Harvan should discriminate against Carl save that he had found favor in Clarice's eyes and Mrs. Harvan wanted her pretty niece to herself. She loved her, but with a love that was completely selfish, though never lacking in generosity. Clarice was showered with all the good things of life save that which she now wanted most of all—love.

Carl Jason had made this final trip to the shore expressly to lay his heart and his comfortable little fortune at the feet of Clarice—that is, provided Mrs. Harvan would kindly get out of his way long enough. Prowling round the porch this very moment, he realized that he should have sailed for Europe a week since and that on the following Saturday he must start whether his love story moved on another chapter or not. Worst of all, this was Clarice's last night at the hotel. On the morrow she and Mrs. Harvan would return to their home in an inland city, whither Carl could not follow them and still make his sailing date on Saturday. Carl was thinking wrathfully of this twentieth century bondage when his eye caught the gleam of Clarice's guitar. He started to his feet; then, with well assumed nonchalance, strolled into the parlor.

When Clarice heard the twirl of the piano stool, she made a tiny move, prepared to be bored again by some incompetent musician. She preferred silence and her thoughts of Carl.

But she drew a breath of happy relief when she recognized the touch. No one but Carl played just like that, and now he was putting his very soul into Tosti's "Goodbye." She did not lean forward lest she should thus attract her aunt's attention, but on the last refrain her guitar was keeping perfect harmony to the passionate rise and fall of the piano music.

A moment's pause and then Clarice smiled merrily, for there floated out from the parlor the strains of a popular song, "Ain't It a Shame?" The guitar promptly answered, "Ize Waited, Honey—Waited Long For You." Back from the piano rang "I Thought I Heard Somebody Calling Me." And she smiled again as a moment later the music changed to "Take Your Clothes and Go," for she realized that this musical hint was not for her.

Carl waited a moment for her comment, which came tinkling in the refrain of "You're All Right, but You Can't Ring In," to be answered by "I Don't Want to Play In Your Yard" and "Won't You Come Out and Play" from the piano.

Clarice glanced at her aunt. "In the Sweet By and By" she played, and eager response came in "Oh, Promise Me!" and that his meaning might be perfectly clear Carl ran in a few familiar bars from the "Lohegrin" wedding march. A vivid blush mounted to the girl's forehead, and she gazed nervously at her aunt. Surely such a keen eyed chaperon must mark her embarrassment. For a moment the guitar lay untouched. Clarice was pondering the question, and not until the first few strains of "Answer" floated out upon the night did she again pick up her instrument. But her decision had now been reached, and right bravely she played "I'll Be Your Honeysuckle; You Be the Bee."

A mighty crash emanated from the piano, followed by the lively chorus of "I'm the Luckiest Coon In Town;" a second's pause, then, with martial swing, "Hold the Fort, For I Am Coming!"

When Carl stepped out on the piazza, Mrs. Harvan regarded him with an unfavorable eye. When he bent over Clarice's hand, she frowned. But this mild disapproval changed to vehement gestures when he caught up the mouth-piece of the flexible ear trumpet the elder woman carried.

"I have asked Clarice to marry me, Mrs. Harvan," he explained, "and she says yes. I must go aboard on Saturday next, and I'd like to take her with me. We can be married as you pass through New York tomorrow, sail as planned on Saturday and buy that trousseau in Paris. I know you don't want to be separated from Clarice, and I don't blame you; so won't you come with us?"

"When did you ask her?" demanded the old lady suspiciously.

"Just now," he made answer into the ear trumpet. "I played my proposal on the piano."

Mrs. Harvan stared at him in amazement, then smiled grimly.

"Well, if you were shrewd enough to do that you were bound to get her some time, so I might as well yield. But as for that trip, I don't care for the sea, and I—guess you'd enjoy your honeymoon better alone. Now, I'm going upstairs, Clarice, and don't you stay up later than 12."

Moon Worship Among Many Peoples.

Figures of the moon as religious emblems can be traced to a very high antiquity. The ancient Egyptians had two moon gods—Khons or Khonsu and Tel or Thoth. The latter wore the moon on his head, either as a full moon or as a crescent. The divine honors paid to the cat on the banks of the Nile were probably due to its supposed connection with the moon, as shown by the changeable pupil of the feline eyes. In Greece both Phoebus and Phoebe were moon gods, and by Isis the Greeks understood the same planet. The Romans had many gods. With them Luna was the moon, the daughter of Hyperion and sister of the sun. According to Livy, the temple of Luna stood on the Aventine.

The ancient Goths, Germans and Finns were all moon worshippers, and in ancient Britain the moon occupied a high position in the celestial hierarchy of the Druids, who were always represented as bearing crescents in their hands. It is possible, too, that Andraste, the goddess to whom Boadicea appealed with outstretched hands, was the moon.

Joking Friends in Old Days.

In a romantic and picturesque old hall in Derbyshire, England, is one of those curious relics of bygone times which carry the mind back to the habits and customs of our great-grandfathers. A handcuff looks a strange thing to be fixed to the screen of the banquet hall of a baronial mansion, but one is there. When the banquet had advanced toward its zenith, if any gentleman among the guests refused to drink the full quantity that was deemed the proper thing at that time he was merrily carried to the oak screen and placed with his arm upraised and secured and locked in that position by the iron ring. His sleeve, then wide open, offered a tempting receptacle for the wine which he had refused to drink, and the contents of the goblet, with as much more as the roisterers thought fit, were poured down the unlucky victim's arm, and woe be to him if he did not take the joke in the spirit in which it was given.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Too Plebeian a Dish.

The pains of being a dignitary in an ancient country with a tradition of splendor is illustrated by this anecdote from India. It is related that the viceroy's eye lighted one day upon a dish at which he gazed for a moment with incredulity. "What is this?" he demanded at last. A trembling retainer gasped that it was rice pudding. No less a personage than the viceroy's consort had ordered the humble pudding which eminent statesmen may be seen eating at their clubs with undisguised enjoyment any day of the parliamentary session. But the viceroy frowned. "Take it away," he said. "Never let me see such a thing again." This is how the orient differs from the occident. Rice pudding might have ruined the dignity of the vice regal table in native opinion.

Chinese Transportation Methods.

The cheapest method of transportation in the world is that by Chinese junks that are dragged up and down their winding rivers by strings of sweating men, who are paid only 8 cents a day for their work and have to pay their board out of that small sum. Next in cheapness to transportation by junk is transportation by camel team. This method is used in distributing coal. Great numbers of Mongolian camels, led by a string through their pierced noses and tied one to the other, each carrying two bales of coal strung across their backs between the humps, are to be seen winding their way from the coal mines to the larger cities in northern China and covering with their swaying steps about twenty miles a day.

A Free Translation.

Willie Emerson-Smith (reading)—And they gathered from the dollar of the earth—

Teacher (in astonishment)—From the wha-a-t?

Willie Emerson-Smith—From the dollar of the earth.

Teacher—The text says "from the four quarters of the earth."

Willie Emerson-Smith—Well, aren't four quarters a dollar?—Baltimore American.

His Sad Story.

"Cleanliness can do you no harm," said the housewife.

"I don't know about dat, ma'am," replied the dusty wayfarer.

"Did you ever lose anything by it?"

"Yes, mum. I was 'tattooed man' in a circus one time, an' when dey made me take a bath all de figures came off, an' I lost my job."—Chicago News.

He Needed the Money.

Bookkeeper—I would like a little more salary, sir. You see, I'm married now, sir.

Employer—And need the increase for your family?

Bookkeeper—No, sir; for myself. You see, my wife knows just what I'm getting now!

Golden Weddings.

"But, papa, things have changed since you were young."

"Yes, they have. Folks used to wait fifty years for a golden wedding, and now they demand it at the start."

Then She Got Mad.

She (having nothing else to say)—It's funny how we ever came to think so much of each other.

He—Funny? It's positively ridiculous!

The noblest characters are those who have stored the life saving vessel through storm tossed seas. A bed of down never nurtured a great soldier yet.

Delaware Deadlock Ended.

The Delaware senatorial deadlock has come to a close and the legislature has elected two senators, J. Frank Allen for a term ending March 4th, 1907, and L. H. Ball for a term ending March 4th, 1905. Addicks was present and said he would be a candidate in 1904.

A Bicycle Built for Coons.

David Snellbaker, of Alloway, followed the bark of his dogs and found they had tread three coons. He shot all his ammunition away except a little powder, without bringing them down. As a last resort he took the balls from his bicycle, put them in his gun and brought down the animals. This story is not completed until it is told that he found most of the balls afterward in the carcasses, replace them in his wheel and rode home with the coons on his back.—Philadelphia Press.
