LETTER TO J. L. DAUGHTRY.

Greenville N. C.

Dear Sir: There is going to be, from now on, in Greenville a good deal of painting done, that will last in good condition from 3 years up—10 years is common; we know of it good in 15; and we know no limit—it seems to be likely to last as long as the house lasts, in favorable conditions.

The painter that uses this paint will get all the business he can do.

Devoc lead and zinc is the paint. It looks as good as any, costs no more; and is ready—no tinting or mixing to do.

The zinc is ground in with the lead by machinery—you can't do that.

Test it yourself, if you like; but there's plenty of evidence for it. We take the risk of how it turns out—there is no risk.

Do you want this work?

Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOC & Co.

P. S.—H. L. Carr sells our paint.

Beginning Wednesday morning Mrs. M. D. Higgs will have a beautiful line of Mahler's silver-ware, suitable for bridal presents, at the store of J. F. Davenport.

Easter Greeting.—Get one of those nice Palms at Riverside Nurseries. Get your orders in also for cut flowers. They are going fast. Phone 40.

Higher English in Schools.

[Essay read by Miss Lizzie Anderson, before the Pitt County Teacher's Association:]

While grammar and rhetoric hold central, pre-eminent places in our curriculum of study, they have their limitations, even in regard to the language of students.

They are able to achieve their own ends perfectly only when pursued in connection with literature, each aiding and supplementing the other.

Too many rules tend rather to hinder a student's composition. It is necessary that the language study should grow into a creation of ideas and an enlargement of vocabularies.

It is not enough to know how to form correct sentences; one should be able to speak fluently and gracefully.

Nothing will so effectually accomplish this result as a course of good reading in connection with the study of the lives of the best writers and speakers.

Who can resist the charm of Irving? And yet he owed his ability of expression of putting the right word in the right place to his having, in early life studied the thoughts and language of the best English writers.

While this study will not make Irvings of all, it will help to make useful, intelligent men and women.

Just as you can tell a child of intellectual parents the first day he enters the school-room, you can judge a man or woman who has made companions and friends of Lowell, Longfellow, Emerson, Milton, and Shakespeare.

Without being aware of it, they have assimilated some of their graceful manner of expressing themselves.

Milton calls a good book, "The precious life blood of a master's spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life." How essential it is that the boys and girls be early taught a love both for that master-spirit and for his life blood.

In filling their minds with noble thought, they will naturally imbibe some of these thoughts. Every one knows the influence of friendship. The books we read are our friends; with this advantage over material friendship—in them we get the highest and noblest thoughts of the men who wrote them. Their thoughts, their ideas, their very lives seem close to us. It is this feeling of affinity between author and reader which prompts visitors to Westminster Abbey to linger longest around Poet's Corner.

The imagination must have play and one should be armed in early life against the light, frivolous reading matter with which our markets are flooded by cultivating a love for a higher class of literature.

You can not give a lad brains, but you can help him to make a wise use of what brains he has. Taste in literature can be found and cultivated as readily as in other things.

A boy or girl who has had, say two years, training in the study of good English will not readily fall a victim to a low, degraded class of reading. To such a one it will seem insipid.

In choosing the subjects to be read I think we should be governed largely by the special needs of the students with whom we have to deal. For boys and girls of the age and mental caliber that we have in the majority of our schools, it seems to me that book is best for them which appeals most strongly to their minds and hearts, and arouses in them higher aspirations, even though it is not so productive. (CONTINUED ON FOURTH PAGE.)

WHAT THE PROPAGANDA MAY MEAN

We are opposed to the Southern Educational propaganda because we object to the children of the men who wore the gray being "educated" by Northern money and Northern teachings. We do not care for the "education" that is prepared in Boston and sent down South in case lots. If Northern money wants to come South to make more money, let it come, but if it wants to come South to make Yankees, we had rather see every cent of it ground into dust and flung into the sea.

It is stated that the ultimate object of the propaganda is to educate the Southerners to the point where they will permit the establishment of mixed schools in the South. We don't know how true this may be. But we do know that before this thing comes to pass, there will be no demand for mixed schools, for either the white race or the black race will have become exterminated, and it's not going to be the white race, or history is a lie.

The South is able to achieve its own fame without assistance from abroad. We may not educate our children just as the North would like, but we will be true to ourselves in our own way in the end.

Presidential Bulletin—The president enjoyed absolute quiet today. He stabbed a couple of mountain lions, tore apart the jaws of a jack rabbit and brought a couple of wild horses into camp under his right arm. After lunch he dictated eleven hundred rear-end speeches to his stenographers, rebuked a few officials just to keep in practice and played a nice, lady-like game of ping pong with balls made out of 18 ton boulders covered with deer skins, the bats being slender young oak saplings about 36 inches in diameter. The patient is doing well.

We haven't much sympathy for Charleston in its latest affliction of Tillmanism. When Tillman speaks in the senate the senate is helpless, but when South Carolinians invite to their board a man whom they know is unworthy, they bring their discomfiture upon themselves. Tillman has not injured himself—that being impossible—but he has been the means of teaching the Charlestonians a valuable lesson. It is to be hoped they will stay taught. As for Tillman—well, we'll leave him to the police court.

The result in Ohio was disappointing to your uncle Marcus Aurelius Trustus Hanna. Well, he has no one but himself to blame. He had enough money to make the thing sure.

Now that Greenville's election went the way we wanted it to go, we can afford to let the republican chairmanship slide.

"Niver wrote diellect, me bye" said the only Irish citizen of Greenville. "Look at Dooley. Sure, an' he was wunst a poor man, thot niver knowed where th' last meal come from. Aftter wroitin' about 93; methric tons of diellect he broke into a maggyzine of litrachoor, science an' arrut an' got rich. Now his only ray-creation is tellin' folks it's no disgrace to be poor. Niver wrote diellect. If yez must wr-ite furriu' go and live in Noo Jersey."

How would you like THE REFLECTOR to say you "Sundayed" in Frog Level? This is the way the Olustee Outlook, of Olustee, Oklahoma, writes a personal: "O. T. Hix Sundayed in Leger."

"About this time," begin to look out for the peanut politician who claims that the recent municipal elections foreshadow something or other regarding the presidency.

"A manufacturer says the automobile will soon be put in reach of all," says the Durham Sun. Wouldn't it be well to put them in reach of repair shops?

Carter Harrison is again elected mayor of Chicago. Watch Carter. Like Caesar, he is ambitious.

It is now the style for women to be vaccinated on the ankle, but what will the poor soubrette do?

The strawberry crop may be dead but the crop liar is not.

Vance Spivey, a white man who was in Halifax jail under sentence of death for murder, committed suicide Tuesday night and cheated the gallows of a victim. He cut his throat with a piece of glass which he had kept hid in his shoe.

The Supreme court has decided that E. L. Utley, who killed the hotel clerk at Fayetteville, was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary appealed to the higher court, must serve his sentence.

A Prominent Minister Recommends Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Rev. Francis J. Davidson, pastor of the St. Matthew Baptist church and president of the Third District Baptist Association, 2731 Second St., New Orleans, writes as follows: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for cramps and pains in the stomach and found it excellent. It is in fact the best cramp and colic remedy I have ever used. Also several of my parishioners have used it with equally satisfactory results." For sale by Wooten's Drug Store Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy Farmville.

The Buffalo authorities are finding some consolation in the old-time theory that murder will out.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A Demonstration of What Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Can Do.

"One of our customers, a highly respected citizen of this place, had been for ten years a sufferer from chronic diarrhoea." writes Walden & Martin, druggist, of Enterprise, Ala. "He had used various patent preparations and had been treated by physicians without any permanent benefit. A few months ago he commenced taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in a short time was entirely cured. Many citizens of Enterprise who know the gentleman will testify to the truthfulness of his statement." For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy Farmville.

Too Great a Risk.

A reliable remedy for bowel complaints should always be kept at hand. The risk is too great for anyone to take. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy never fails and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store Greenville, Farmville Pharmacy Farmville.

If all the offensive plays are to be egged, the American hen must proceed to work over time.—Washington Post.

A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore the more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store Greenville Farmville Pharmacy Farmville.

The secret service men of the presidential party are the most public part of it.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The most careless thing a girl can do is to kiss a man without making him do it against her will.—New York Press.

A Sweet Breath

is a never failing sign of a healthy stomach. When the breath is bad the stomach is out of order. There is no remedy in the world equal to Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for curing indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders. Mrs. Mary S. Crick, White Plains Ky., writes: "I have been a dyspeptic for years—tried all kinds of remedies but continued to grow worse. By the use of Kodol I began to improve at once, and after taking a few bottles am fully restored in weight, health and strength and can eat whatever I like." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Jno. L. Wooten.

For liver troubles and constipation there's nothing better in creation than Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. They always effect a cure and save doctor bills.

Little Early Risers are different from all other pills. They do not weaken the system, but act as a tonic to the tissues by arousing the secretions and restoring the liver to the full performance of its functions naturally. Jno. L. Wooten.

The Vultures.
 The question is mooted whether the vulture knows of its quarry by sight or smell. How does it communicate the news of a feast to its fellows? A tiger had been killed.

Colonel Ramsay ordered the carcass of the skinned tiger to be dragged out from under the thick mango trees into the open. Taking out his watch, he asked us to make a guess as to how long the vultures would take to clean the flesh off the bones. Some one said half an hour. As there was not a vulture in sight, this seemed even betting, but Colonel Ramsay gave them ten minutes, which proved to be correct. There was one vulture at first seen soaring round and round very high up in the cloudless sky. He closed his wings and dropped on the carcass with a swoop. In two minutes the sky was full of vultures, all concentrating from every side on the spot, and arriving with all the impetus their drop from a great height gave them as fast as it takes to tell the story. Then there commenced a frightful scene of literal carnage, every one tearing with sharp, hooked bill at the entrails first, then at the flesh, all fighting for room to get a piece and tumbling over one another with frantic haste.—"The Forests of Upper India and Their Inhabitants," by T. W. Webber.

What Holds the Novel.

Frank Norris, author of "The Octopus" and "The Pit," was a most virile writer and a man of decided opinions. He was wont to say of the great factors in molding public opinion that "the pulpit speaks but once a week, the press is read with lightning haste and the morning news is waste paper by noon; but the novel goes in the home to stay."

This opinion was aired by Mr. Norris in the lobby of a hotel in a small town in Illinois. Among those present was a country editor, who was prompted to remark that the novelist's views reminded him of his dog Wolf. Wolf persisted in running away from home, killing chickens and annoying children in the community. At last a method was adopted by which the dog was confined to his own homestead.

"Chained him, eh?" was the thought voiced by several of the company. "Yes, sir," declared the editor. "And if your modern novel goes into the home to stay let Wolf remind you that it's on account of the binding."

Political Economists.

While great fortunes and great industries have almost invariably been created by uneducated men, parvenus unembarrassed with learning, who taught themselves what they found necessary to know, we find, on the other hand, that those men who have made commercial science, political economy, their study have not shown any success in business and have remained theorists. Most political economists have had to live on their pen. Mr. Cobden went bankrupt in business. It is true that Ricardo was well off, but he was a stockbroker by trade, and with him political economy was only a hobby, not a serious result. It is strange how few business men of the first rank have a good word to say of political economy.—Nineteenth Century.

Pocketing a Fee.

For a whole year the famous English physician, Dr. Radcliffe, attended a friend without a single fee passing between them. As he was leaving after his last visit the patient said: "Here, doctor, is a purse in which I have put every day's fee. You must not let your kindness get the better of my gratitude; so please take it." The generous physician put out his hand to reject the purse, but the chink of the gold was too much for his amiable resolution, so he put it in his pocket, saying, "Singly, sir, I could have refused them forever, but all together I am afraid they are irresistible."

The Roman Aqueducts.

The Roman aqueducts were marvels of architecture. The Aho was forty-three miles long; the Martio forty-one, of which thirty-eight were on 7,000 arcades seventy feet high; the Claudia was forty-seven miles long; the arches 100 feet high. The Roman aqueducts brought 40,000,000 cubic feet of water daily into the city, and the various sections of the metropolis were supplied with water by 13,504 pipes.

Helping Him Along.

"Then there is such a thing as heart failure, is there, doctor?" said the handsome young widow. "Certainly, madam," responded the bashful young physician. "The records of the profession are full of"—"It's a perfectly unnecessary disease, isn't it, doctor?" On this hint he spoke.—Chicago Tribune.

Deeper Meaning.

"I went to the church fair last night, and I think I see a new meaning in that old adage now." "What's that?" "It's my idea that none but the brave have any business there."—Philadelphia Press.

A Boy's Travels.

OVER A GRAVE

(Original.)

EDITH IDA WHITMARSH.
 Born May 10, 1880.
 Died Feb. 25, 1900.

A girl carrying some plants entered the cemetery and passing over the walks to the grave thus marked stopped before it. She was surprised to see that some one had placed fresh flowers on the rounded earth. Dropping the plants, she bent over the flowers to see if there was anything to identify the person who had placed them there. She was disappointed. There was not even so much as a bit of ribbon to bind them together. She had come on the birthday of the dead to plant some shoots and knew that he or she who had been there before her had known of the anniversary, for there were just twenty roses.

Between Edith Whitmarsh and Geraldine Sheldon had been one of those rare attachments in which two girls became absorbed in one another to the exclusion of all others. At least this was the construction Geraldine Sheldon had put upon their intimacy, supposing that she was Edith's only friend. Yet here was evidence that some one had been sufficiently intimate with her to love her and had loved her sufficiently to place flowers on her grave on the anniversary of her birth.

Leaving the plants where she had dropped them, she turned and left the cemetery. Was it dissatisfaction with her friend that she had deceived her, or was it jealousy? She did not know herself.

She did not visit the grave again for a month, when what was her surprise to see the plants she had left growing on the mound and bearing buds just ready to bloom. This was too much. This monster with whom she had been forced unknowingly to divide her friend's love had had the assurance to plant the shoots she had in a fit of jealousy left unplanted. Besides, there was a vine creeping up the headstone.

For a year Edith continued to visit the grave of her friend, noticing that some one had from time to time added little decorations. She herself had refused to divide the care of the sacred spot with another, but when the next anniversary came round she had so far softened as to take to the cemetery a pet azalia which she had been long training. There was no new trace of her rival. Breathing a sigh of relief, she imbedded the roots of the azalia and was smoothing the earth about it when she heard a step. Looking up, she saw a man of perhaps thirty advancing toward her. He paused before the gate shutting off the lot.

"You are?" she asked. "Earle Gardner."

"My mysterious rival?" "No. You had no rival in Edith's feminine love."

"But you loved her?" "As my wife."

"As your wife?" The voice and the manner bespoke an overpowering wonder. "And the mother of my child."

"The mother of your child?" "Edith was forbidden by me to tell you of our love and marriage. My mother was for a year on the brink of the grave, and for reasons which for the present I will pass over I could not acknowledge a wife so long as she lived. You remember Edith's visit to Washington a year ago last winter and her death there. She died in childbirth."

Like a ray of light struggling through gloom a bit of forgiveness entered Geraldine's soul.

"The child?" "She is at my home. My mother is dead, and I am now master of the estate. But Edith left her instructions with regard to her little namesake when she should become a year old. This came round last February. Till now I have made no change, but if you are ready to assume the charge—"

"She left the child to me?" "During her babyhood."

"And then?" "That can only be determined by circumstances. It is hard for one about to die to make a wise provision for the future. Edith only arranged for a few years."

"But why did she not leave the babe to me from the first?" "Because at the time my marriage must still be kept a secret. Besides—"

"Well?" The man looked embarrassed. "Come, I am impatient. You said, I believe, that Edith left her instructions for the child when it should be a year old."

"Yes, when Edith would have been dead a year."

"What had that to do with it?" "A husband may marry again at the end of a year."

"Marry again? If you loved Edith as I loved her—as I love her today—you would never marry another."

"She left her instructions to me to marry at the expiration of the year."

"She did?" "Yes; conditionally on the consent of the woman of her choice."

"Her choice? You mean your choice?" "They may be one."

"Explain."

"You are the woman she chose to care for her bereaved husband and child."

For the public schools, where time, capacity of students, and library are all limited, I would recommend an easy text book on American literature, to be studied in connection with the reading of those books and poems which appeal most strongly to the child-mind. Read these, "The Children's Hour," "In School Days," "The Children of the Lord's Supper." American literature is so rich with in books for children, the field so wide, that any discretionary teacher can supply her needs. Children of this age will enjoy reading such books as "Little Woman," "An Old-Fashioned Girl," "Stepping Heavenward," and derive from them wholesome lessons of self sacrifice and love of duty.

In our high schools I would suggest that we enlarge upon this course of study in American literature by studying Longfellow's "Courtship of Miles Standish" and "Evangeline," Whittier's "Snow-Bound," and Bryant's "Thanatopsis;" and by encouraging students to read as many of our good books as time will permit.

Then, for the second year, a text book on English literature to be pursued in much the same manner. At the very least, let the course prepare students for a creditable entrance into our best colleges and universities. Encourage your students to think for themselves, to form their own ideas of the lessons to be derived from the books they read, and, when reading from an author like Hawthorn, to seek to find the hidden meaning or to "read between the lines," as it were. When studying about the life and works of a poet, read them selections from his poems and require them to memorize some quotation from him. With the prose writers it is not expedient to take time in the classroom, save for an occasional book of the very best, but, whenever possible, read them extracts from books and essays and occasionally give them an oral sketch of a leading one. In this way they are more indelibly impressed both with the book, or poem, and with the man who wrote it. While learning facts about literature they are becoming familiar with literature itself. The idea is not so much to teach a mass of facts as to train pupils in the reading habit and provide them with the power to select the right kind of reading matter.

For those students, who leave us to enter college, this training will be found of incalculable value. And for that vast majority, who enter upon that larger school of life, it is indispensable. They are thus provided with a love for good reading and an enjoyment of it which will enrich and beautify their whole future lives.

We seldom ever witnessed a sadder scene than we did on Sunday last as the pupils of our school and neighborhood generally gathered at the Sunday school to bid farewell to our much loved teacher, Miss Delia Smith. Her instructions as a teacher, as well as her presence in the neighborhood will ever be remembered with the tenderest of feelings. The old as well the young feel the loss of her, whom to know is to love.

PACTOLUS ITEMS.

J. H. Gurganus returned from a trip to Norfolk Monday.

The latest rumor in town: Nobody believes anything they hear.

Miss Deb Fleming, of Stokes, is visiting her sister, Mrs. G. H. Little.

H. G. Huntley went to Washington Tuesday on business, "A new hat."

C. E. Bradley and H. G. Huntley spent Sunday evening down on the river, but not fishing.

J. J. Harrington, who has the public school here in charge, has it under fine control and its success every time. Jack knows just how to handle the little folks.

C. F. James spent Sunday with his father near Whichards.

J. J. Satterthwaite claims he has the newest thing out. It is a half bushel measure full of biddies.

T. H. Langly left Monday for Spring Hope to enter the revenue service as store keeper and gauger.

Our popular A. C. L. agent, H. G. Huntley, came out this morning looking a little off. What's the matter? Oh, them consarned old extras run too late last night.

Next Sunday is Easter. Wonder how many will go out to show their new bonnets. Well, it's fortunate I do not wear them, if I did I would not be allowed to take any part in the new bonnet exercises.

Miss Roland James, near Pactolus, was married Sunday at Bethel to Mr. John Harvard, of Scotland Neck. Congratulations to them both, and our sympathy is with those poor fellows who were left.

We saw our old friend W. B. Whichard, of Whichard, pass through town Monday enroute to the river, presumably looking for shads track. Now be careful, Willie, when night comes on, or you will repeat your luck of twelve months ago—(lost in the old pine field)
