HERE IS THE DIFFERENCE.

On Which Side do You Stand?

We can understand how it is that a man who is engaged in selling whiskey and making his living out of it should stand for the open bar room and oppose a dispensary.

We can also understand that an extreme prohibitionist who has conscientious scruples about having any part whatever in undertaking to regulate the sale of liquor should oppose a dispensary.

But we cannot understand how it is that the great mass of the conservative, thoughtful people, who stand midway between these extremes, should prefer the open bar room to a dispensary.

The bar room runs wide open day and night. The dispensary runs only in the day. The bar room invites the young and the weary to make its saloons their place of evening resort to warm by its fires and partake of its beverage. The dispensary closes its doors at night and says to all men that the place where liquor is sold does not furnish a resort that can be helpful and uplifting either to the old or the young.

The bar room contributes a large per cent to the criminal class and leaves the property to be taxed to bear the burden. Every thoughtful man must know that a large per cent of the violators of law come from the bar rooms. If he doubts this let him read the report of the mayor's court. Statistics will demonstrate that a considerable part of the taxes paid go to defraying the expenses of the arrest, trial and maintenance of those charged with crime traceable to the evil effects of strong drink. In Greenville the property is taxed to its maximum limit, while the bar rooms are taxed but little above the minimum limit. If it be true that the sale of liquor contributes so much to the burden of taxation, then it ought to be made to bear its full share of this burden. The dispensary system does this. It seeks to minimize the evil and at the same time it gives all the profits which arise from the traffic to relieve the taxes of the people. So we repeat, we cannot understand how thoughtful, conservative people can hesitate to take the dispensary in preference to the open bar room.

Came to Town to Marry.

An ebony hued couple drove in town Wednesday afternoon. The man was diked out in his best, and the woman robed in pure white. The curious kept an eye on them to see what was in the wind. The couple landed at the office of Maj. H. Harding, where they modestly informed the 'Squire they had come all the way from Swift Creek township and wanted to get married right away. Mr. E. E. Griffin kindly tendered his services to go after the license, and while this preliminary was being waited for quite a party collected to witness the ceremony. It was not long before the courtly 'squire had them standing before him with joined hands and in his best style fixed there for life. The crowd hung on a moment to see the bride get "saluted," but they didn't see it.

NORTH CAROLINA'S RESISTANCE TO THE STAMP ACT.

[Essay by Miss Dora Cox, of Winterville, that won the Grimes medal in contest on North Carolina history.]

The Stamp Act was a law passed by the British Parliament on the 22nd of March, 1765, saying that all checks, notes, bonds, deeds, wills, newspapers, pamphlets, and almanacs should be written on stamped paper, the stamps for which should come from England, the value of them ranging from a half penny to six pounds.

The cause of the passage of this unjust act was to compel the American colonies to help pay the great debt made by the French and Indian war, during which time they had fed, furnished, and clothed more than thirty-five thousand men, besides N. C. had no voice in parliament.

When William Tryon became governor of N. C. in March, 1765, the people of this colony were in a very rebellious temper, so much so that he prorogued the assembly that had been in session only two weeks. Tradition says it was prorogued on account of a statement made by speaker John Ashe, who, when being asked by his excellency what course the assembly would take in regard to the stamp act, replied, "we will fight it to the death."

This they fully intended doing in N. C. for on Saturday the 19th of Oct., about seven o'clock in the evening, nearly five hundred people assembled at Wilmington and exhibited the effigy of Earl Bute, and after letting it hang by the neck for some time, they made a large bonfire with a number of tar barrels, and committed it to the flames. After the effigy was consumed, they went to every house in town, and bringing all the gentlemen to the bonfire, insisted upon their drinking liberty, property, and no stamp duty, also, at the conclusion of each toast, giving three huzzas for the confusion of Lord Bute and his adherents. This was done because the people were informed of Bute's having several times expressed himself much in favor of the stamp duty.

Again on Thursday of the same month, a great crowd of people assembled, and made an effigy of liberty, which they put in a coffin, and marched in solemn procession with it to the church yard, a drum in mourning beating before them, and the town bell ringing a sad knell at the same time. Before committing the body to the ground they thought it advisable to feel its pulse, and when finding some remains of life, they returned back to a bonfire already prepared, placed the effigy before it in a large arm-chair, and spent the remainder of the evening in rejoicing on finding out that liberty had still an existence in the colonies.

Dr. William Houston was appointed the stamp master of this province, and how was he treated by the people of N. C.? On Saturday the 16th of Nov. he went to Wilmington and had just gotten there when three or four hundred people, with drums beating and colors flying gathered together, at the house where the stamp officer was staying. The crowd insisted upon knowing whether he intended to execute his said office or not. He replied, "I shall be very sorry to execute any office disagreeable to the people of the province." But they, not satisfied with such a declaration, carried him into the court house, where he was compelled to sign a written resignation, stating that he would have nothing to do with any more of the stamped paper, either directly or indirectly, until it was agreeable to the inhabitants of the province. Furthermore declaring that this was signed by his own free will and accord.

As soon as the stamp distributor had complied with their desire, they placed him in an arm chair, carried him first around the court house, giving three huzzas at every corner, and then proceeded with him around one of the squares of the town. When they reached the house in which he was staying, they sat him down at the door, and gave three loud cheers. After escorting him into the house, where was prepared the best liquors to be had, they all began drinking in great form, with three yells at the conclusion of each toast. That evening a bonfire was made and no person appeared in the streets without having Liberty in large capital letters on his hat.

Not only at Wilmington was the hatred for Houston so plainly shown, for at Newbern his effigy was burned, and also at Cross Creek it was hanged by the side of a man who had murdered his wife, nor was he even spared by the people of Duplin, his own county.

Immediately after forcing Houston to do as they wished, they went to see Mr. A. Stewart, the printer of the N. C. Gazette. When the act was passed, Mr. Stewart was sick with fever, and had not printed the Gazette for sometime. When asked, if he would continue to print the paper, he replied, "I have no stamped paper, and as a late act of Parliament forbids the printing on any other, I cannot." He was then told positively that, if he did not, he might expect the same treatment as the stamp men, and they demanded a positive answer. Mr. Stewart then said rather than run the hazard of his life he would comply with their request, but took the whole for a witness that he was compelled to do so. This he proved too, for on the margin of the next Gazette was the following: "This is the place to affix the stamp [Just above a ghastly skull and bones.—Editor]."

On Monday, the 18th of Nov., about fifty of the gentlemen of Brunswick, New Hanover, and Bladen counties, dined by invitation with Governor Tryon, who urged upon them the necessity of permitting the circulation of the stamps. He said it would be a pleasure to him to exert his influence and interest in England to promote the prosperity of North Carolina but that he thought the stamp act would be a great help to the colony for carrying on commerce, besides it would look like they were trying to sever the dependence on the mother country to oppose, and that if they would only submit to it, he himself would pay the duty on any instruments executed on stamped paper, on which he should have any fee.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 14, 1904.

Have you signed a petition for the anti-saloon election?

The anti-saloon forces have acted with great fairness. How about the other side?

It is understood that the State's prison will in a few days make contracts for all the convict labor they can spare.

St. Louis is in luck. That city will have the big exposition and the democratic national convention all in this year.

The democratic national committee met in Washington on the 12th and decided to hold the next national convention in St. Louis on Wednesday, July 6.

Those who want to obstruct an expression of sentiment at the ballot box on the whiskey question must be very much afraid of a show of hands.

It is announced that William J. Bryan will make a lecture tour through North Carolina at an early date. Wonder if he will draw like he did when campaigning a few years ago.

The Wake Forest college has more students in attendance than it has ever had before. The Baptists of the state are to be congratulated as well as the authorities of the college.

The discovery of a wild, but well developed case of smallpox in the department of the auditor of freight receipts, in the general office building of the Atlantic Coast Line at Wilmington when upwards of 500 clerks are employed, is causing some uneasiness among the people of that city.

Congressman Driggs can now tell how it feels to be in jail. He was sentenced to imprisonment for one day and to pay a fine of $10,000. He ponied up the cash and took his place in a cell. Now if the fraud investigations are pushed far enough there are some high officials who will get longer terms—unless they miss their deserts.

The wings of the democratic party are getting together. Now with a few tail feathers as a rudder, a proper head to direct the flight, there's a chance of the old bird roosting in the white house in the next contest.—Raleigh Times.

And with all the other component parts of the bird it might be well to bear in mind that feet for good running are also necessary adjuncts. The old bird can't stay in the air all the time, but will have to do some of his work on the ground.

This is a topsy turvy world. One man is struggling for justice and another is fleeing from it. One man is saving to build a house and another is trying to sell his for less than it cost. One man is spending all the money he makes in taking a girl to an entertainment and sending her flowers in hopes, eventually, to make her his wife, while his neighbor is spending the gold he has to get a divorce. One man escapes all the diseases man is heir to and gets killed on the railroad. Another goes without getting hurt, and dies with the whooping cough. Such is life.—Durham Sun.

A Chicago clerk who stole $12,000 from his employers at the rate of $100 a day, gave as his excuse that he "spent the money living like a white man" and that "a white man can not live on $9 a week." Like all excuses for stealing, this is a poor one. If there are any comparative degrees in excuses for stealing, this is about the poorest one that could possibly be offered. For it is an incontestable fact that the color of a man's skin has nothing to do with the necessary cost of his living. It is equally incontestable that no man who spends $100 a day is living like a white man, particularly if he steals this money.

Mr. C. M. Bernard's charge that the republican party in North Carolina, of which he is a member of prominence is making no headway, is correct, and there is little reason to doubt the truth of the further allegation that the purpose is to keep "as small and unimportant as possible" in order that the old timers may hold the federal jobs and not have to share them with recruits tempted to desert their old allegiance by hope of office. However, what would be the use of trying in the south to win friends to a party whose leader in the white house stands for social equality between the whites and blacks? Had Mr. McKinley lived and Mr. Roosevelt never become president, there was a probability of the Solid South being broken.—Two City Sentinel.

THE MILK IN THE COCONUT.

It is remembered that a few days ago C. M. Bernard got in the papers and delivered himself of a blow out against ex-Senator Pritchard and republican State Chairman Rollins. He intimated that the latter was not working in the interest of his party, was not fit to be chairman of the state committee and ought to be turned out. Chairman Rollins was interviewed by an Asheville correspondent, and Bernard gets a pretty good showing up. Chairman Rollins says:

"Everybody knows Claude Bernard, and knows that he is mad and kicking because he was not reappointed United States attorney for the Eastern district of North Carolina. You know some people cannot bear to be prized loose from the government pay-roll. In this connection I might say that I received two letters from Mr. Bernard, one dated May 14, which I answered on May 20, and the other dated July 21, which I answered on the 30th of that month. I have Mr. Bernard's letters in my office and copies of my replies thereto. There is nothing in my letters which would in any way reflect discredit upon me or the republican party, and if Mr. Bernard thinks the letters would be interesting reading he has my full permission and authority to publish the same.

"Who ever heard about Mr. Bernard complaining about the management of the republican party until after he lost his job as United States attorney? I remember very well when he was one of the most ardent friends and admirers of the former state chairman, Senator Pritchard, but just as soon as Col. Skinner was appointed United States attorney for the eastern district of North Carolina, Mr. Bernard became very bitter towards Senator Pritchard's management of our party. Of course, the people of the state are not blind, and they can understand the cause of Mr. Bernard's soreness."

Congratulations

Mr. John H. Cullom, Editor of the Garland, Texas, News, has written a letter of congratulations to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as follows: Sixteen years ago when our first child was a baby he was subject to croupy spells and we would be very uneasy about him. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in 1887, and finding it such a reliable remedy for colds and croup we have never been without it in the house since that time. We have five children and have given it to all of them with good results. One good feature of this remedy is that it is not disagreeable to take and our babies really like it. Another is that it is not dangerous, and there is no risk from giving an overdose. I congratulate you upon the success of your remedy." For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, and R. L. Davis & Bros., Farmville.

CURED OF PILES AFTER 40 YEARS.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, O., had the piles for 40 years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, laceration, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package—all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. Sold by Jno. L. Wooten.

Any actress can paint, but only a few can draw—a very large crowd.

A GOOD NAME.

From personal experience I testify that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are unequalled as a liver pill. They are rightly named because they give strength and energy and do their work with ease.—W. T. Easton, Boerne, Tex. Thousands of people are using these tiny little pills in preference to all others, because they are so pleasant and effectual. They cure biliousness, torpid liver jaundice, sick headache, constipation, etc. They do not purge and weaken, but cleanse and strengthen. Sold by Jno. L. Wooten.

Two heads are better than one—but not on the same pin.

Found a Cure For Indigestion

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for Indigestion, and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. I am 51 years of age and have suffered great deal from indigestion. I can eat almost anything I want now.—George W. Emory, Rock Mills, Ala. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville and R. L. Davis & Bros., Farmville.

The wounded heart heals, but the scar remains forever.

A SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even when but slightly disordered or over-loaded. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and enables the stomach and digestive organs to transform all food into rich, red blood. Sold by John L. Wooten.

COLORS OF THE EARTH.

How They Affect the Light That Our Planet Gives to the Moon.

The wonderful difference between the same landscape in winter and in summer is a phenomenon familiar to all dwellers in the temperate zones. The two great elements of change are the presence of snow in winter and of leaves and grass in summer. If we could look at our globe from the moon the variation in its aspect due to seasonal changes would perhaps be even more striking than it appears to those upon its surface.

In fact, we sometimes lose sight of the very important part which vegetation plays in giving color to what might be called the countenance of the planet.

It is not the highest forms of plants that always produce the greatest effect in this way. Some of the most striking scenes upon the earth owe their characteristic features to mosses and lichens. The famous "crimson cliffs" of Greenland, which extend for miles northward from Cape York, derive their splendid color from the growth of red lichen which covers their faces. The cliffs rise between 1,700 and 2,000 feet straight from the water's edge, and, being composed of gray granite, their aspect would be entirely different from what it is but for the presence of the lichen.

Coming to less magnificent but not less beautiful scenes, the rocky pass called the Golden Gate in the Yellowstone National park owes its rich color and its name to the yellow lichen covering its lofty walls, and the indescribable hues of the great hot spring terrace arise mainly from the presence of minute plants flourishing in the water that overflows them.

Considered as a whole, the vegetation of a planet may give it a characteristic aspect as viewed from space. Many have thought that the red color of Mars may be due to the existence of red instead of green vegetation there.

That its broad expanses of forest and prairie land cause the earth to reflect a considerable quantity of green light to its neighbors is indicated by the fact that at the time of the new moon a greenish tint has been detected overspreading that part of the lunar surface which is then illuminated only by light from the earth.

The Duke's Dinner.

A well known Scottish M. P. of humble parentage went to Chatsworth on a political visit. The Duke of Devonshire asked him to lunch, and there is no doubt the M. P. fully appreciated the privilege of touching toes with the duke under his grace's own table.

But at home that night in the privacy of his wife's boudoir the honorable member interpolated gulps of smoky indignation with words against the presumption of the nobility.

"Wull, Donald, an' whatever be aillin' ye?" she asked.

"Jessie, what would ye give a duke like Devonshire to eat if he'd visit us?"

"Why, geese and turkeys!" she replied.

"Wull, the day's lunch at Chatsworth was naething but minced lamb on toast!"

Too Vigorous.

John L. Sullivan was one day asked why he never had taken to giving boxing lessons. He replied:

"Well, son, I did try that once. A husky boy was my first and last pupil. He took one lesson from me and went home afterward a little the worse for wear. When he turned up for the next lesson he said:

"Mr. Sullivan, it was my idea to learn enough pugilism from you to be able to lick a certain young man that I dislike. But I've changed my mind now. If it's all the same to you I'll send this young man down here to take the rest of my lessons for me."

"I," the pugilist concluded, "was a little too rough to teach boxing."

A Clever Dunce.

An English rural schoolmaster was greatly annoyed one day by not getting satisfactory answers to the questions he put to one of his schoolboys. At last he called the dunce to the front and, handing him twopence, said:

"Away you go and buy some brains."

To the schoolmaster's surprise, the boy quickly turned and said, "And have I to tell the man they are for you?"—London Globe.

Her Friendly Service.

Nell—You and Jack Sterling seem to be quite chummy these days.

Belle—Yes; Jack's a good fellow. He's going to marry May Simpson in a month or so.

Nell—I knew they were engaged, but I thought she was growing cold.

Belle—Oh, she's warming up now. I've been giving her the impression lately that I wanted him.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Railroad Automobile Cars.

The Great Western railway of England has decided to run automobile cars on some of its branches. This course has been necessitated by the competition of parallel trolley cars. The automobiles used are to be steam driven and will make stops between regular stations at all level crossings and at points where footpaths give access to the line. In this way it is hoped to successfully compete with the trolley roads. There is hardly much doubt if the service becomes very popular that an electric system will be substituted, as it is a much better system for that type of work.—Collier's Weekly.

Joe Battle Identified.

Raleigh, N. C. January 13—
Yesterday morning Mrs. Paschal Long, of Edgecombe county, came here and identified Joe Battle, the negro who criminally assaulted her at her home in Edgecombe county the first Saturday in August, 1903. She was accompanied by her husband and W. O.
Bullock, deputy sheriff of Edgecombe county.

At first Mrs. Long was not very positive in her identification of Battle, who was lined up with two other negroes, but finally she stated positively that Battle was the man, although she said he looked a little lighter and a little thinner, but he was the same size, she said and had the same ugly eyes.

Mr. Bullock says that the people of Edgecombe are still angry, and that if the negro is not sentenced to hang, they will lynch him.

It will be remembered that Battle was spirited away to Raleigh in order to prevent a probable lynching at the time of the crime.

Shot His Brother for Burglar.

Oxford, N. C. Jan. 13.—A very distressing accident occurred near Culbreth, eight miles from Oxford in the home of Mr. Stephen Jones, a prominent farmer of Granville.

Two sons of Mr. Jones usually slept in an office about forty yards from the main dwelling. About ten o'clock Sunday night Lewis, the younger boy, aged fifteen, went to the office alone and was half asleep on the bed when he was startled by someone rattling the blinds and shaking the door knob. The elder brother Edward was in fun trying to make Lewis think a burglar was attempting to enter.

Lewis seized the gun and opening the door fired the load striking the door facing and glancing, wounded Edward fatally in the abdomen. From this wound he died Monday night. Dr. T. Booth, Dr. B. K. Hays and Dr. Meadows were in attendance. Edward Jones was a very bright and promising young man nearly twenty-one years of age.
