Killed by a Fast Train.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 29.—William M. Williams, aged sixty, of Morganton, was run down and instantly killed this morning near the city limits by the Southern's Palm Limited. The train was four hours late and was running at high speed in an effort to make up the lost time. Williams, who was singing as he walked, stepped upon the track directly in front of the train.

Murdered in the Road.

Dunn, N. C. 29.—W. J. Lee was found dead today in the road between Smithfield and his home near here. His body is cut and gashed in several places. Clarence Glover accompanied him to Smithfield yesterday, where both became intoxicated before leaving together late in the afternoon. Upon being strongly suspected Glover has been apprehended and in default of bail is now in jail at Smithfield.

From Mount Airy to Roanoke.

Mount Airy, N. C., Jan. 30.—An electric road from Mt. Airy, N. C., to Roanoke, Va., seems assured. It will be about eighty-five miles long. From Mt. Airy it will go across the Blue Ridge mountains, near Fancy Gap, and from there by way of Hillsville and Laurelfork, Va., crossing Buffalo ridge, about four miles east of Buffalo mountain; thence through Floyd court house, from there following Little River, near the Bent Mountain road, crossing Bent mountain and leading direct to Roanoke. At Mt. Airy the line would connect with the Southern Railway, and at Roanoke with the Norfolk and Western, making a direct line to both Northern and Southern markets.

This road will open up a fine farming country, mining district and one of the best oak timber belts in the United States.

A Horror at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va. Jan. 30.—When George J. Shields, a well known young business man reached his home in the heart of the city at the luncheon hour today, he found his three year-old daughter Mildred lying in a pool of blood on the reception hall floor, with two ugly wounds on the head. Following bloodstains from the dining room to an upstairs chamber he found his wife lying in pools of blood on a clothes closet floor, with her throat cut from ear to ear and her head horribly hacked. Mrs. Shields managed to gasp:

"A large black negro man came through the kitchen and attacked me in the dining room."

Besides this there is no clue to the criminal. Mrs. Shields had been outraged, after which her assailant dealt her several blows on the head with a hatchet, fracturing the skull, dragged her upstairs, where he cut her throat with a razor and threw her into the closet, fastening the door on the outside. The little girl was struck to hush her cries. The dining room floor was covered in blood and showed there had been a terrible struggle. The doctors entertain but slight hopes for the recovery of either the mother or child.

The Wilhelm Killing Case

Monroe, N. C., Jan. 30.—The body of J. E. Wilhelm, who was killed last Wednesday, will be buried here tomorrow. The funeral has been delayed awaiting the arrival of his brother from Texas.

Eubanks will be given a preliminary hearing before Squire M. L. Flow, next Tuesday. The defense will be represented by Redwine and Stack, Adams, Jerome, Armfield and Stewart, while the prosecution will be conducted by Stevens and Sikes.

Both Eubanks and Wilhelm are from prominent families, and much interest is being taken in the trial.

Died.

The youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Randolph died Saturday at their home 5 miles from town. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, Rev. T. H. King conducting the service.

Killed Coasting.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 30.—Master David H. Starbuck, seven-year-old son and only child of Judge Henry B. Starbuck, was fatally injured today. While coasting down Bank street in Salem he ran into a passing street car on Main street. He was dragged for a short distance. Later he was removed to the hospital and after an examination the attending physicians announced that the boy was injured internally and he could not live. He died at 5:15 this evening.

Got in the Wrong House.

Eugene Wilson, a young son of Mr. George B. Wilson, of Dover, who recently came to the city to take a position in the A. & N. C. office, and who is not very familiar with the town, had rather an unusual experience Thursday night that it is a wonder did not result seriously for him. The house where he boards and the one next to it are exactly alike and on his going home to go to bed, he got in the wrong one which happened to be unlocked and finding a lamp about where he expected to, he took it up and went to his (he thought) room. When he got into the room he saw a man in the bed and being of inquisitive turn of mind, pulled the cover off to see who it was. This waked the man, who on seeing some stranger in the room piled out of the bed and made for the intruder. After the mutual surprise had subsided, explanations straightened things out and each went to his respective bed.—Kinston Free Press.

MONDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 1, 1904.

The failure of A. B. Baxter & Co. cotton brokers of New York, that occurred Saturday, put the market in brief disorder. They had a number of branch offices in North Carolina, and many people who were dealing with them lost money. It is best to keep clear of the bucket shops.

The United States Express Company is doing the correct thing by making an effort to stop some of the train robbing which is one of the greatest curses of the country, particularly in the west. They are requiring all the employees including the clerks, to become efficient in pistol practice.

The shutting down of many cotton mills and curtailing of others, because of the high price of cotton, is inflicting a hardship on thousands of operatives. It is a bad time of year to be thrown out of employment. It doubtless means that cotton has got so high the mills cannot manufacture it without a corresponding advance in the price of their product.

The Financial Age says that the high price of cotton in the South has had a very good effect upon Southern securities. It says that securities that formerly floated at 5 and 6 per cent. only at par are now desired at lower rate or at a premium. It also adds that while Southern bonds are desired in the business centres "the South is more than ever able to finance its own requirements."—News and Observer.

The Durham Sun has discovered some people who would like to build a wall around the town and keep everybody out but themselves. Give them a job on the union depot, if they want to build anything.—Greenville REFLECTOR.

That would never do in the world. They would so construct it that it would be difficult for the trains even to get in or out. As cold water throwers they would make splendid hands. Perhaps Greenville would be benefitted by getting them as she seems to have some difficulty in getting cold, for the REFLECTOR says:

This is a good time for Greenville to get interested in an ice factory.

They will make the ice without the factory.—Durham Sun.

It is all right about the depot and we'll let it go at that. But as to the other, Greenville does not need any of that kind, even to help cut ice.

Less Tobacco and More Cotton.

From various localities throughout this section covered by our correspondents come reports that farmers will plant less tobacco and more cotton. We rejoice in this as being good news, for we believe it will make our people more prosperous, provided always that they raise their supplies so far as possible.

Tobacco is now bringing a fairly good price. But that fact should not entice the farmer to plant at all heavily. The trust may have put it up in order to encourage production or the demands of the trust and of the independents may have legitimately caused a rise in the price of leaf. The farmer for all practical purposes, does not care who puts prices up or who depresses them. So long as he knows that prices are subject to this sort of manipulation, he would do well to look askance at the crops. Especially should he do so when he has other money crops at hand that are beyond such complete control by any man or set of men.

Go light on tobacco for a year or so and it may help the demand for the weed.—Kinston Free Press.

Better Houses for Farm Tenants.

All over the country is heard the complaint of the scarcity of farm labor. Upon this, we base our prediction that cotton will remain for some time at a price that will make its cultivation profitable.

Our system of farming has undergone a great change during recent years and the large plantations worked with hired labor can no longer be found in this part of the state.

It is quite noticeable that the farmers who have the best houses for renters to live in have the best class of tenants to work their land, making the farm more profitable. In slavery times the negroes, as a rule, had good, comfortable houses to live in, but for years after the war but little attention was paid to the houses and the colored people, a large number of them, seemed to be satisfied with any kind of a hut to live in, and many are still quite happy and contented with like conditions; but as we said before, the most desirable tenants, both white and colored, demand good houses to live in and the farmer who provides them receives a large income from his farm and is not troubled every year to secure labor to work the farm.—Roanoke Chowan Times.

Cotton and Tobacco.

"The farmer who has tobacco would rather see higher prices than to hear the promise of advance," says the Greenville REFLECTOR. The high price of cotton this year all the more emphasizes the crime of the tobacco trust in taking the tobacco crop at a song. If the cotton crop could be controlled by a trust, as the tobacco crop, is, the cotton farmers would be as much in the low grounds as the tobacco farmers are.

The tendency, since the inflow of gold from Alaska, has been for everything to go up in price. Cotton had hardly felt that upward tendency until this year. A small portion of the increase may be attributed to the general upward tendency in prices, but it is chiefly due to the increased demand and the smaller supply.

The tobacco crop this year is short—probably proportionately shorter than the cotton crop. The law of supply and demand, if it works with tobacco as with cotton, would give tobacco farmers a higher price. What prevents higher tobacco? The greed of the trust, which controls the tobacco crop, is alone responsible for the starvation prices being paid for tobacco. Simply that and nothing else.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Not Gould.

Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 30.—In response to a telegram that Frank J. Gould had been arrested at Spencer yesterday afternoon, Officer Needly went up on No. 97 to get him, but when he laid eyes on him he came back empty handed. Gould is getting to be as bad as Green McAdoo.

The people up that way no doubt thought Gould was a bad, very bad man, for when the shades of evening drew nigh there were three Greensboro policemen on hand after his scalp, each going by different trains, but of course each man did not know the others had gone.

Congratulations

Mr John H. Callom, Editor of the Garland, Texas, News, has written a letter of congratulations to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as follows: Sixteen years ago when our first child was a baby he was subject to croupy spells and we would be very uneasy about him. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in 1887, and finding it such a reliable remedy for colds and croup we have never been without it in the house since that time. We have five children and have given it to all of them with good results. One good feature of this remedy is that it is not disagreeable to take and our babies really like it. Another is that it is not dangerous, and there is no risk from giving an overdose. I congratulate you upon the success of your remedy." For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville, and R. L. Davis & Bros., Farmville.

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for Indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even when but slightly disordered or over-loaded. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and enables the stomach and digestive organs to transform all food into rich, red blood. Sold by John L. Wooten.

A GOOD NAME.

They cure biliousness, torpid liver jaundice, sick headache, constipation, etc. They do not purge and weaken, but cleanse and strengthen. Sold by Jno. L. Wooten.

BREAKING THE HOODOO

[Copyright, 1893, by Charles B. Lewis.]
When the Thirteenth was brigaded with us, everybody spoke in praise of its rank and file. No better material could have been found in America. A couple of weeks, however, showed the colonel to be an egotist and a drunkard, and few of the company or regimental officers seemed anxious to give him credit for anything outside.

One day the regiment came out to relieve the Fourth on outpost duty. At mid-afternoon a hundred Confederate cavalry, divided into squads of twenty-five, attacked four full companies of the Thirteenth at about the same moment. One discharge of their carbines, followed by a grand yell, did the business in each instance. The same 100 cavalry then fell upon the reserve of 600 men and routed them at a dash. One thousand men were beaten, routed and disgraced by 100.

The colonel called his officers together and said they must give the men double drill and that in the next fight they must shoot down any man who tried to make a bolt for it. And the captains got their respective companies out on the parade ground and looked savage and swelled out their chests and shouted:

"You are a laughing stock in this brigade. You have had two or three chances to win glory, but you have run away like beaten curs. In our next fight I will shoot the man who even turns pale."

And yet every private in every company remembered that when he ran away he followed his three officers and was not able to overtake them. A month later, at 9 o'clock one summer morning, our brigade swung into battle line on the left center. It stretched across a cotton field, with its right and left connecting in the woods with other brigades. The fight began far above us. That meant waiting, and it is the waiting that makes cowards of brave men.

Down the lines of the Fourth, Seventh and Eighth went the company officers to brace up the men who were not cowards, but yet losing their nerve in the waiting, but over in the Thirteenth it was different. The officers were at the regulation distance in rear of the lines, and the men had nobody to brace them up. To talk to each other only made matters worse.

We were quite prepared for what happened—knew that it would happen. Of a sudden the enemy opened fire on our front with artillery, and as the first shell exploded in the ranks of the Thirteenth the whole 1,000 men broke back like a flock of frightened sheep. A second shell completed the business, and there was a stampede which carried them a mile to the rear. The gap was closed up, and the battle went on, but the Thirteenth could not be rallied again that day. Three days later the major general said to the officers and men on parade:

"I know the history of the Thirteenth since its first skirmish. You are a disgrace to your state, to the army and to yourselves. I shall recommend that the regiment be wiped out of existence."

On the morning that the order of disbandment arrived from Washington the Thirteenth was in charge of a senior captain, and some of the companies were in charge of orderly sergeants. A Confederate column, which had cut loose and marched by night through the fields and woods, suddenly burst out of the woods upon the scattered camps along the river. The surprise was complete, and without a check the enemy came sweeping down the stream. The Thirteenth turned out, but there were no officers to give them orders. They were cowards and had always run away. A few had already started on this occasion, when there came the sound of hoof beats from the west, and a woman rode into camp. She was hardly above twenty years old, fair haired and handsome and probably the wife of some Union officer from the camps above. Every man thrilled as she pulled up her horse and cried out:

"Men, they are making a stand up there by the ford, and if you'll join them the enemy can be checked and driven back."

"We'll go—we'll go! Fall in—fall in!" shouted the men in chorus, after an instant's silence, and five minutes later every man had his musket and cartridge box and companies were being formed up the road crowded with white faced fugitives, and yet never a man of the Thirteenth fell out. There was no officer to lead them, but the woman rode ahead and turned now and then to smile and beckon them on. A round shot plowed up the dirt near by, but she gave no heed. A shell burst against a tree a few yards away and filled the air with splinters, but she did not turn her head. The bullets came thicker and thicker, but she held her way until a line of blue suddenly came into view and then waved her hand and said:

"Right down there, comrades, is where they need you, and after today no man will call the Thirteenth a regiment of cowards!"

"Hip—hip—hurrah!" and a swinging of caps and a dash forward. The blue fighting line was strengthened not a moment too soon. The enemy hurled shell and grape—he poured volley after volley—he charged again and again, but the line stood firm and cheered as it stood. It was a fight of an hour before re-enforcements came up. Behind the log breastworks were a few hundred living men, their eyes still aflame and their faces black with powder stain, and on the right and left and behind them more dead and wounded than the whole brigade had yet lost. Not a coward had died—not a coward had lived on. Led by a woman, all had become heroes.

M. QUAD.

Told the Truth.
A shopkeeper in Sheffield had stuck up a notice in glaring colors and very large letters: "Selling off! Must close on Saturday!"

On Friday a friend asked: "What! Are you selling off again?"
"Certainly. All the shopkeepers are selling off, ain't they?"
"Of course they are. But you say, 'Must close on Saturday.'"
"Certainly I must. You would not have me keep open on Sunday, would you?"—London Globe.

A Useful Young Lady.
"You are late this afternoon," said the music teacher to his elaborately powdered and highly decorated young lady pupil.

"Yes," replied the damsel, swishing down on the music stool. "Me was so busy in the kitchen that I had to wait nearly half an hour for her to sew up a tear in one of my gloves."

Professor Shaler's "Stunt."
Dean Shaler's book of plays, "Elizabeth of England," was written because in a hot repartee with Professor Barrett Wendell one day the latter told Dean Shaler that scientific men had no literary sense and knew nothing but science.

Professor Shaler's back was up, with the result that in a short time there appeared, privately published by Houghton & Mifflin, five five-act plays called "Elizabeth of England," by Nathaniel Shaler, professor of geology at Harvard university.—Boston Advertiser.

His Ambition.
"Young man," he asked, "what is your ambition in life?"

"To get rich, sir," replied the young man, lighting a fresh cigar.

"Not a very high aim. But while you are trying to get rich aren't you spending a good deal of money?"

"Oh, I don't mind the expense, sir. I'm willing to get rich regardless of cost."
