LETTER TO W. J. COWELL

Greenville, N. C.

Dear Sir: You know what paint is for, how it does it, how it fails, what paint does it, and what paint don't. It's your business to know; of course you know Devoe.

There are some details, which of course, you can't be expected to know. For instance the next best paints are only three quarters as good. That's strange; very strange. There are a dozen of them perhaps; you don't know them so accurately as that; you don't know them all by name. No matter; one is enough; the one you have real occasion to know is Devoe.

The queer of it is that the others leave the whole business to us so, we make paint as good as we can; others make it as good as they have to. Queer, but we don't complain.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

P. S. H. L. Carr sells our Paint.

Like a Letter From Home

J. E. Langley, of Richmond, a former Pitt county boy who has attained great success in his career, is sending a check to THE REFLECTOR says he would not be without the paper for many times the cost of it, as every copy is like a letter from home.

Jail at Snow Hill Damaged by Fire.

Widening the Avenue.

The town is now at work widening Dickerson avenue. The work is about completed from the railroad to Pitt street, and the northern side of the avenue for that distance is much improved.

THE WEATHER

Rain tonight, colder in interior. Friday fair, colder.

Inland Waterway Survey.

Washington, March 8.—Senator Simmons and Representatives Small called on the chief of engineers of the War Department today in the interest of the survey of the inland waterway.

They had a very satisfactory interview indeed, the chief promised to detail thoroughly competent men for the work and to have the work thoroughly done. The former survey was not well done.

Senator and Mrs. Overman will take dinner with the president and Mrs. Roosevelt tomorrow evening.

Representative Small has the appointment of a midshipman and three alternates to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Applicants should communicate with Mr. Small. His appointees will be examined the third Tuesday in April and again on the third Tuesday in June.—Raleigh News and Observer.

"Old Maids" At Winterville.

The "Old Maids convention" will meet in the chapel at Winterville High School at 7:30 Friday night, March 10th.

The president of the convention requests that all the members be present early, as this is one of the most important meetings of the year.

Prof. Pinkerton, a man of national reputation, has promised to be present with his new machine the "Transform(her)" and perform some of his wonderful experiments.

It is earnestly requested by the president, Miss Maria Lovejoy, that all members will come attired in the latest style to meet their distinguished visitor. This meeting is under the direction of the Philoallean Literary Society and the public is cordially invited. Let everybody come and enjoy an hour's fun.

Preacher Goes to Prison.

Knoxville, Tenn., March 7.—Rev. Benjamin W. Ashley, a minister of the Christian church, residing near Newport, Tenn., was given a sentence of fifteen months in the penitentiary in the Federal court today for violating the pension laws. In investigating his case a pension examiner discovered that he was a bigamist. After Ashley had been placed on the pension rolls, a North Carolina woman claiming to be his wife, made application for a division of the pension. Ashley swore she was not his legal wife, but that his wife was a Tennessee woman. Investigation proved that Ashley married his first wife in 1865 and had never obtained a divorce but had abandoned her thirty years ago, marrying a second time on coming to Tennessee to reside. He pleaded guilty of perjury and may be prosecuted for bigamy when he has served his Federal sentence.

Resolution to Return Tar Heel Flag Captured by New Jersey Soldiers.

Trenton, N. J., March 7. In the House today Mr. Coyne, introduced a resolution authorizing the governor to return a Confederate flag to the governor of North Carolina, captured by the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers at the battle of Newbern. The flag was presented to the Beaufort plow boys by the ladies of Beaufort, N. C. The reason for this resolution is the fact that New Jersey has appropriated $5,000 to erect a suitable monument at Newbern in honor of the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers.

THE RIGHT MAN IN CHARGE.

Col. H. E. Dosch the commissioner general and director of exhibits of the Lewis and Clark centennial to be held in Portland, Oregon, who was the first man to suggest and advocate the holding of this centennial, walked from St. Louis, Mo., to Oregon in the early forties and has lived there ever since and has been a prominent factor in developing that country.

Col. Dosch is the most experienced man in exposition affairs in this country. His connection with such enterprises covers a period of several decades. He has represented his state at all of the leading expositions in this country and abroad, commencing with the cotton states centennial at New Orleans, and including the Trans-Mississippi, Columbian, Pan-American, Charleston, Osaka, Japan, and the Louisiana Purchase.

He is a close student of exposition detail and has written several interesting and instructive papers along these lines. For his conspicuous work at Osaka, Japan, the Emperor of that country conferred the decoration of the Sacred Treasure upon him. It is a distinction of unusual significance, because an honor is only conferred upon those who have rendered some signal and meritorious military or state service to the Mikado's government. Hence, it is that the Lewis and Clark centennial as well as the country at large are to be congratulated upon securing the efficient and experienced services of such a capable director for such an important work. The many new and novel innovations he has originated as above indicated has caused him to be the recipient of numerous felicitations from exhibitors in this country and Europe, who appreciate the advantages his plans in the arrangement of exhibits offer.

Cal. Dosch, was born in Mainz, Germany, was educated at that place, and came to this country when a young man and settled in St. Louis. At the outbreak of the Civil war he joined the fifth Missouri cavalry and served until 1863, when he was forced to resign his commission because of ill health. The Pacific coast attracted him, and he located there where he became successfully engaged in stock raising, mining and wholesale manufacturing. Several years since he retired from active business and has devoted his entire subsequent time to exposition work. He is the personification of energy and possesses a great capacity for hard work. During his term as commissioner general from his state to the World's fair he has made a host of friends among his colleagues and exhibitors, and the people of the Pacific owe him a large debt of gratitude for it has been through his personal efforts and untiring work that so much has been accomplished for their great centennial.

Train Stopped By Prayer.

As this is a time when "revivals," in progress or predicted, are receiving much attention of various kinds and in various quarters, the following anecdote, for the truth of which the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer must be responsible, has at least the merit of timeliness. The story may we say "hero"?—of the tale is the Rev. Mr. P. S. Elson, a Baptist revivalist of note in the Observer's State. Mr. Elson went—recently, as we understand it—to the railway ticket office at Danville and called for a ticket to Franklin Junction. "The agent politely informed him that all but the fast train had departed and that it would be impossible for that train to stop there. Mr. Elson told him that he was assisting in a revival and had an appointment for 3 o'clock that afternoon at Franklin Junction. His persuasive powers were of no avail with the ticket agent, but when No. 36 pulled out of Danville it contained the Rev. Mr. Elson as a passenger, who, when the train was leaving the city, fell upon his knees and began to pray. As soon as he completed his prayer he arose and peeped out of the window, to find that the train had come to a standstill just opposite the place at which he had an appointment. It was learned that the train was stopped on account of a hot box. That reference at the end to the hot box is extremely modern. It could hardly have appeared in any mediaeval account of a similar miracle, and it opens the way to an endless—and quite useless—discussion of the doctrine of coincidences in time and place. To some the story will seem simply silly, to others it will be curious, either in itself because of a suspected or hoped "something in it" or from what it reveals as to the Rev. Mr. Elson and his like while to yet a third class it will serve as clear proof of the efficacy of prayer. Thus do honest opinions differ in the interpretation of observed facts.—New York Times.

Some gentlemen who heard Mr. Elson preach a sermon at the close of the Bethel Hill High school some years ago will remember that he told this incident to illustrate some point in discourse. And really nobody seemed to be impressed with the forcefulness nor the truthfulness of the statement. We took it as a sort of license tale. However, this beginning of miracles by steam was in Virginia and not in North Carolina. Neither is Mr. Elson a Tar Heel.—Raleigh Times.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will digest any quantity of all the wholesome food you want to eat while your stomach takes rest—recuperates and grows strong. ### War.

According to statistics compiled by The London Daily Mail, the total losses of Russia and Japan for the first year of the war show 240,000, of whom 40,000 were killed or drowned at sea, irrespective of those who died from disease or privation or were taken prisoners. The figures for the Manchurian campaign are given as 57,250 Japanese and 111,000 Russians killed and wounded the prisoners being estimated at 600 and 3,433, respectively. In the Port Arthur operations 55,900 Japanese and 11,400 Russians were killed or wounded and 32,000 Russians captured. In addition to this, 1,799 Japanese and 2,527 Russians were lost at sea. Of superior officers, the Russians have lost eight generals (including Count Keller and Gen. Kondrachenko) and one admiral, while eight generals and four admirals surrendered at Port Arthur. So far as is known, the Japanese have lost only two generals. In regard to material, the Russians have lost 820 guns, 7 battleships, 13 cruisers and a quantity of other vessels, of a total value of £16,500,000, while the Japanese have lost 15 guns, 1 battleship, 4 protected cruisers and two coast defense ships. Finally, the total cost of the war is estimated at £100,000,000, of which £107,000,000 falls to Russia.—Charlotte Chronicle.

A HOLE IN THE GROUND.

Can We Build It or Must We Say That We Dig It?

"Can we 'build' a hole in the ground?" asked a man who takes an interest in the words we use and the changes which have taken place in our language. "I think not. Yet we speak of 'building' a canal, and most persons understand thoroughly what we mean. The word 'build' has undergone many changes, and it now means many things. I said just now we could not 'build' a hole in the ground. I was thinking of the purer meaning of the word build when I said that. Of course we can 'build' a hole in the ground. Often when we dig we 'build.' We 'build' graves. I suppose it would not be wholly wrong, in view of the latter meaning of the word 'build,' to speak of 'building' a well or a ditch or any other thing which requires digging and labor of a constructive sort. 'Build' apparently comes from the Anglo-Saxon 'bold,' meaning a house, a word of Scandinavian origin and formed by adding 'd' to the Icelandic word 'bol,' which means a house or a farm. Skeat declares the word is really Scandinavian. The middle English—that is, the English from the thirteenth to the fifteenth centuries inclusive, for the word 'build' was 'bulden,' and late Anglo-Saxon gave it as 'byldan.' 'To build' was a more literal meaning of 'bulden' and 'byldan.' The word 'bol' is found in the old Swedish, meaning a house, a dwelling, while in Danish 'bol' means a small farm. The word 'bo' appears in old Swedish, meaning to live, abide, dwell. At any rate, the word 'build' has broken from its old moorings, and since we understand what is meant by the expression 'build a canal,' which is in its physical aspect merely digging a ditch or a hole in the ground, there can be no serious objection to the use of the word 'build' in this connection. Words must change as men and conditions change, and after all these changes in the meaning of words form one of the surest signs of the progress we make." — New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The London Globe relates that a lady from the country was visiting Westminster Abbey recently, with the particular object of seeing the tomb of King Edward II. Patient search failed to discover it, and at last she asked the vergor, or an attendant of some sort, to direct her to it. The explanation of her failure was instantly forthcoming. "I'm sorry, madam," he said, "but we haven't got Edward II. here, as we only have the odd numbers."

A Slander.

The principal of the school was talking with him about his boy. "By the way, Mr. Wipedunks," he said, "I have made a discovery about Jerry. He's ambidextrous." "I don't see how that can be," replied Mr. Wipedunks, with rising indignation. "He hasn't never been exposed to it. Besides, he was vaccinated last year, we bathe him regular every week and his mother always makes him wear a little bag of assafiditty tied around his neck. Some of the other boys has been lyin' on him." — Chicago Tribune.

Cheerful and Cheering.

Not long ago a stock of crockery was sold at auction, and Mrs. Wilson attended the sale. When she returned, her face was radiant with joy.

"You must join the Cremation society," were the first words she said to her husband.

"What on earth for?" exclaimed Mr. Wilson.

"Why," replied his loving spouse, "I've bought such a lovely vase to hold your ashes. You can't think how it will set off the mantelpiece!"

His Part.

"Oh, yes," remarked Ketchley in a self-satisfied way, "Lulu and I will start out in married life under very favorable circumstances. Her mother gives us a neat little home, her father furnishes it, and her Uncle Delong has given a carriage and pair. Besides, Lulu has a snug income in her own name."

"What part do you furnish?"

"Well, principally the name—principally the name."

Place and Palace.

"Quite a neat little place, that one with the green trimmings. Who lives there?"

"That's Brinker's house. He had a rich uncle who willed him everything."

"Oh! And whose is that magnificent marble palace over there?"

"That belongs to Blackstun, the lawyer who settled up the estate." — Chicago Record-Herald.

Origin of the Barber's Pole.

In years long gone by it was usual among barbers to combine surgery with their tonsorial accomplishments. The well-known red and white pole which is still displayed outside the shops of the minor wielders of the brush and razor is supposed to represent the "bleeding staff." It was the custom of village practitioners to give a staff to their patients to grasp while in bed. The stripes were formed by the tape which was wound round the staff when not in use.

GOT THE THIEF.

Ruse by Which a Backwoods Parson Did the Business.

"The police have what they call the 'sweating' process, a means of forcing confessions and admissions from stubborn moral delinquents," said an old timer, "and some of these methods are ingenious, some of them cruel, while others are positively barbarous and have been frowned upon by the courts, as is evidenced in the doctrine which declares that forced confessions are of little or no value as evidence. I say this by way of prelude to a little story of a long time ago which will show that there are more ways than one of forcing a man to 'own up' to wrongdoing. As you probably know, the ax was at one time the most valuable implement around the place. It was in the time I have in mind, the time when southeastern Arkansas was a wilderness and when the earlier settlers first began to cast their lot in that rich and now prosperous part of the world. The ax meant much in those days. So when some fellow pilfered some other fellow's ax the question was of large moment for miles around.

"A man thus circumstanced and of the time complained that his ax had been stolen. There happened to be a preacher in the section who was looked upon as having extraordinary, almost supernatural powers, and whenever anything of this kind happened complaint was made to him. The theft of the ax was reported to the preacher. 'I'll find it for you,' he said to the distressed man of the woods.

"On a certain day when he had nearly every man within a radius of fifty miles around him he lined them up in a row and stepped back about thirty feet, just far enough to allow him a good eye sweep of the line. In a few words he related the case of the man who had lost the ax, dwelt on the importance of the ax, declaring it not only to be the industrial capital of the man who lost it, but the chief weapon with which he defended his home. 'Now, my friends, one of you men got that ax, and I know it,' he said. 'I have a rock in my hand,' he continued, 'and while I do not care to hurt any living human being, I am going to hit the man who got that ax.' And as he said this he swung a long bony arm over his head with violence and brought it around with force. Only one man dodged in the line of forty, and he was the guilty man. In a short while the ax was returned to its rightful owner, and the backwoods preacher was more popular than ever. Which little happening shows that there are refined and unrefined methods of 'sweating' men and making them 'own up' to their misdeeds."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Abrupt Translation.

The small boy had been irritating his father with many vexatious questions about a psalm he was studying for Sunday school next day.

"Father, what does selah mean?" was the latest.

"Shut up!" said paterfamilias.

The boy said nothing, but in Sunday school the psalm was under discussion.

"Who knows what the word selah means?" asked the young superintendent.

The small boy's hands went up, and he was halfway out of his seat. No one else raised a hand.

"Well?" said the superintendent.

"Shut up!" said the small boy. And seeing the look on the teacher's face added: "It is. I asked papa and he said 'shut up!'"

FOR

SPRING & SUMMER

In selecting material, choose something that will harmonize with your make-up. Big checks don't look well on stout men and stripes should not be worn by men of a tall, slim build. Be careful, also as to color. Pale complexioned men should be careful of drabs, or a material with a touch of green in them. Browns are better. Blue looks well on most people, but men with reddish hair should not select a shad that is too bright. A little care in this direction goes a long way in improving a man's looks.
