New Spring Goods

ARRIVING DAILY.

There is one thing that we do not claim in our business to do and that is to sell goods cheaper than they can be bought—neither do we want to create the impression that our store is full of shop worn, out of style goods nor by filling our store with show bills and sign boards will we try to impress false ideas in your mind that we are going out of business, but we do wish it understood that we are receiving daily shipments of the newest things in and kindred materials so desirable with the women folk of Greenville and Pitt county, and we do hope that you will at least favor us with a visit to see these many new things.

JUST AS WELL CHANGE.

If Trains Cannot Run Present Schedule, Make One They Can Run.

If THE REFLECTOR was asked to name the greatest inconvenience of the Atlantic Coast Line to the people of this section, we would not hesitate to say it is the miserable schedule.

The passenger train is due to reach here at 5:47 p. m., but it is about as certain not to come on time as it is to come at all, nor can it be told with any degree of certainty when it will come.

It is exceptionally rare that the train is not an hour or more late, and such a thing as a train coming on schedule time belongs to the past.

Before the present schedule went into effect the train was due to arrive at 6:52 p. m. Then there was connection with the train from Norfolk so that the trip from Greenville to Norfolk and return could be made in a day. The people down this way, for the sake of getting their mail an hour sooner in the evening, and also having an evening outlet by way of Kinston and Goldsboro, were willing that the connection at Hobgood with the train from Norfolk be broken. But as it now is, the train comes in just as late as it did on the old schedule, we do not get mails any sooner, and the outlet by way of Kinston is as uncertain as the weather, and people going down the road never know when they can get anywhere.

If this condition is to continue, we do not see why it will not be just as well to move the schedule back and return to the Norfolk connection, as the train here is nearly always late enough for it if the waiting was on the other side of Hobgood instead of at Parmele.

Really we had rather see the schedule at 8 o'clock and know the train would come on time, than for it to be 5:47 and always be from one to two hours late.

THE MEETING.

A Great Day—Christians Praying

The meeting in the Baptist church continues to grow in interest. Mr. Jenkins preached a strong sermon Thursday night using as his text Amos 4:12 "Prepare to meet thy God." Several reasons were given why we should prepare to meet God. Cruelty of sin; and the Devil as a task master was emphasized. Also how the sinner should prepare to meet God.

The service this morning was of great interest and power to God's people. Many things were said that will linger in the hearts of the people and continue to help and inspire.

Tonight at 7:30 Mr. Jenkins will speak especially to the unsaved. His sincere heart is full of love for the lost and his earnestness is manifest as he pleads for a surrender of their hearts to God.

Let all Christian people come praying that God will bless Greenville tonight.

Died.

Mr. Frank Johnson, of Rocky Mount, died at his home there Wednesday evening. The remains were brought to his old home in this county, near Grifton, for interment Thursday. Mr. Johnson was a brother of Mrs. C. D. Bountree, of this town, and her many friends sympathize with her in her sorrow.

Lieut. Lyman A. Cotten, who has for some time been an instructor in the naval academy at Annapolis, was recently assigned to the cruiser Philadelphia.

J. J. Turnage, the Five Points grocer, has purchased a controlling interest in the Savage livery stables.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Castle Hall,
Tar River Lodge, No. 93 K. of P.
March 16, 1905.

Tar River Lodge No. 93 K. of P., again laments the death and loss of one of its valued and esteemed members. Again the portals of our Castle Hall have been visited by an inscrutable Providence and a vacant chair is left. Not only a worthy member and brother has been taken away at the command of the Supreme Chancellor of Heaven's immortality—a most exemplary citizen, a true friend to all, has been called hence to bask in the vernal spring-tide of God's eternity. "Requiescat in Pace."

Therefore be it resolved by the officers and members of Tar River Lodge No. 93 K. of P. that we deeply and sorrowfully mourn the loss of our beloved Brother, Past Chancellor, James Burton Cherry, who departed this life March 13th, 1905, just as the sun went down at six o'clock, after a long and useful life of benefactions. A fitting type of true Pythian excellence—and his life and death is like Osias's music "Sweet, though mournful to the soul." We will ever cherish his memory in our hearts as one who was loved and respected by all.

That we will set apart a page in the records of our beloved order sacred to his cherished memory: That we tender his sorrowing wife and family our sincerest sympathy and love in this the saddest of all afflictions, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family; That the Castle Hall be draped in mourning, and the usual badge be worn in his memory.

ISAAC A. SUGG,
Geo. S. PRICHARD } Committee.
F. C. HARDING.

GARBAGE ORDINANCE

People Requested to Observe it More Closely.

Owing to a general failure on the part of citizens of the town to observe section seven, chapter twelve of the ordinances of the town of Greenville, which is as follows:

Section 7. All garbage accumulation within the limits of the town shall be placed in a convenient place for removal by the town carts on Monday and Thursday of each week, and at no other time. It shall be the duty of each housekeeper, agent, tenant or other person who shall reside or do business in the town to have placed, on either of said days, in boxes, barrels, crates or other vessels, on the street, in convenient places, so as not to obstruct any of the gutters, all garbage, trash, waste paper, and other refuse of every kind, except liquid substance and fetid matter, and the same shall be removed by the town carts. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall be fined five dollars for each offense.

The police officers will be instructed to pay particular attention to this matter that the above ordinance may be duly complied with. This ordinance was passed by the aldermen for the purpose of improving the sanitary conditions of the town, also that the back lots and streets might be clear of waste paper and other unsightly rubbish which fills the gutters and prevents a better drainage of the streets.

F. M. Wooten, Mayor.

Free Will Baptist Meeting

The services now being held at the Free Will Baptist church is growing in interest each night, large congregations. Some have already united. Rev. S. B. Stephens, the evangelist is doing the preaching. His subject tonight will be "Anatomy," or the structure of the human body from a Bible text explaining the several parts of the body. All are welcome.

AYDEN ITEMS.

AYDEN, N. C., March 17, 1905.

In the death of James B. Cherry Pitt county loses a most valued and useful citizen. In no section is his death more keenly felt than in Contentnea township. Everybody knew Mr. Cherry and honored him. In the intercourse and business relationship of life he wronged no man. Kind, affable and in an unusual degree, extremely gentle, he made an imprint upon the minds of all with whom he was brought in contact that was not easily forgotten. Honest, none will deny; charitable, ask the poor and needy, who halted at his door; a friend, the vast concourse who attended the last sad rites in his honor fully attest. Indeed our people realize they have sustained a serious and irreparable loss. The memory of James Burton Cherry will live long with this people, and the recollection of his inestimable worth will be an incentive to move and prompt an earnest desire to emulate his virtues and practice his precepts. To his bereaved family and loved ones our hearts go out in sympathy and we earnestly hope the Great One who doeth all things well will prove their solace and comfort in this their sorest need.

Mrs. R. R. Cotten Tells the Mother's Congress of the Children of the South.

Washington, March 15.—The principal feature of today's session of the Congress of Mothers was a paper by Mrs. Anna E. Murray, of Washington, relative to the kindergarten instruction of negro children. She expressed the conviction that great benefit would result to the negro race in the United States by the adoption of kindergarten methods.

There were a number of addresses at the night session, notably those of Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador, and Herr Robert E. Scheller, the second secretary of the German embassy. Mrs. Robert R. Cotten talked of the children of the South. She spoke of her efforts in trying to secure remedial legislation for factory children and showed that whatever is to be gained in that direction must come gradually.

R. F. D. WON DECISION.

Bat Roost, Ark., Academy Decide Hon. L. F. Livingston, of Georgia, is Father of the Free Rural Mail Delivery.

(By J. M. HINES)

Who has been the greatest friend of education of the country people?

This was the subject chosen by the Bat Roost debating society of Bat Roost male academy in Arkansas. The subject was vigorously debated on both sides.

One of the boys took the position that Andrew Carnegie was entitled to this distinction. Another spoke in favor of Peter Cooper. Another declared that Noah Webster was by far the greatest, as he made it possible for every poor country boy and girl to learn how to spell correctly, and thereby laid the foundation for future education.

The debate ran well into the night. The Shanghai roosters in a neighboring barn-yard had announced the approach of midnight when not more than half the speakers had aired their views on this interesting topic. It remained for the long, lean, lank, cadaverous red-headed boy from Crow creek to close. He opened his remarks with the usual apology of not being able to compete with the high bred fellow from Cow creek who was born with a silver, gold-lined spoon ready to pour down his throat the soothing syrup at the first attack of infantile colic, this being what met his baby blue eyes when he first saw the sun peeping over the top of Peacock mountain in the Ozarks.

But, said the plucky, warm-haired student from Bat Roost, I am going to dip down deep into the soup bowl of horse sense and hand out with the spoon of good judgment some frozen facts, based on practical results, as object lessons to prove that my position is backed by the benefits of the country folks have received from free rural mail delivery. The greatest friend the country people have ever had is the man who gave us free rural mail delivery. He stands as far above the men named as benefactors to education of the country people as the planet Jupiter does above this low land of sorrow.

The children of the poor country man today receive their letters and papers by the same hands that the city dudes and belles do. The United States government delivers the mails at the door of the humble shack of the squatter as well as at the mansion of the rich planter. We country folks used to have to hitch up the old gray mare or fork the old blind mule and travel over rough roads through rain, sleet or snow five or ten miles to get the weekly paper, or a letter from the preacher to let us know when he would be along to preach at the nearest school house or church, that our mummies might have the chickens ready, or dad and the boys hunt up the fattest pig for the big meeting.

Now it is different. The mail comes every day and Uncle Sam pays the freight. So you see we keep educated up to the times. If our relatives or a distant friend happened to have an approaching wedding, sometimes it was over before the news of the happy event reached us. Now we are educated up to the very date by our daily mail. Often times a friend has died and been buried before the sad news reached us. Now the rural delivery educates us to that fact almost to the very hour.

Our mothers, wives and sisters can keep daily posted on the market price of eggs, poultry and butter. They are educated up to the market value, otherwise they would lose on their sales. The prices of all farm crops are daily laid before the farmer, giving him a choice of the various markets, and he is kept educated by the daily mail, whereas if he had to stop a plow and a field hand to go for the mail he might often miss a rising market before he could get his paper or letter.

The young speaker said, I know a man who made $30,000 by being posted on prices. He had worked hard all of his days and saved his earnings. He lived ten miles from a postoffice and only went there once a week. After the rural mail was established he subscribed for a daily paper, as he said for his children to read. He looked over its columns one night and saw that a party of capitalists were to leave St. Louis on a certain day for Arkansas to invest in mineral lands. He invited them to call at his place. He never expected to hear from them, but sure enough they accepted his invitation to look at his property, and they were so well pleased with it that they paid him a round sum for it. He said if he could find the man who was the author of the free rural mail he would send him a suitable reward for his good luck.

I have taken much trouble to find out the first man whose fertile brain brought out this great convenience and educator for the country folk. It seems upon facts not to be disputed that Congressman Leonidas F. Livingston, of the fifth Georgia district, was the first person to advance this subject. It was nearly thirty years ago that he addressed a meeting of farmers in his state. In the course of his speech he told his hearers that before the close of the century the farmers and their children would enjoy the same benefits of the mail carrier service as the city people did and that they would get their mails at their doors.

When the speech was finished a member of congress who heard it went to Livingston and told him if he did not stop his foolish talk his friends would send him to the insane asylum. "Ah, no," said Livingston "they will send me to congress to help get this mail service I have been telling them about." Sure enough he was sent to congress, got the bill through, and then got one of the first free delivery routes that was established in the South for his district.

Why, sir, said the eloquent young debater from Bat Roost, there should be a monument to the memory of this great Georgian as high as the snow capped peak of Mount Moriah on the Ozark range, and on the top of it should be the figure of a farmer holding in one hand a sprig of old field pine typical of life, and in the other letters, newspapers and a spelling book, with the inscription in letters so large they could be read a mile without glasses; "This monument is erected by the farmers and country people of the rural districts of the United States to the memory of Hon. Leonidas F. Livingston, a member of congress from the state of Georgia, as a recognition of his valuable service in congress in behalf of the free rural mail delivery system in the United States. He was the father and first promoter of this great educational service for the country people."

When the young man closed his remarks were applauded with deafening sounds and the committee sitting as judges lost on time in rendering a verdict in his favor. Thus closed the exercises of Bat Roost debating society.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates on experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Cleburne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some soured meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Cholera, Colera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one small bottle cured the three of us." For sale at Wooten's Drug Store.

A spring tonic that makes rich, red blood. Brings strength, health and happiness to the whole family. Nothing equals Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea as a spring tonic. 35 cents. Wooten's Drug Store.

What Pleases one Displeases Another.

A newspaper man may not get rich, but he gets a good deal of experience, which, if he is wise, he charges upon the profit side of the ledger. When he is young in the business it makes him feel very unhappy to be criticised. He is nearly as "touchous" as an office holder, and when a mad subscriber orders his paper stopped he feels like going to bed. But as he gets older, he doesn't mind it, and learns to feel as if he is not doing much if he doesn't get a few rounds from somebody occasionally. And, then, it shows what the people are feeling and thinking, keeps him in closer touch with his constituency and makes his paper closer akin to the soil in which it flourishes. No editor should feel bad over a little criticism especially if it is in a friendly manner and has no real venom. He learns to "give and take," and likes it. "I see lots of things I don't like," said Mr. W. L. Parker, of New Salem, as he forked his dollar for another year.

"That's it," replied the captain of the pen, "we make a paper for lots of folks, and what you don't like will please somebody else. If we had to make a paper to please only one man we'd have to charge him at least a thousand dollars a year, but making it for a good many we deliver the goods for $1.00 a year. This is so cheap that one man can afford to overlook the few things he don't like."—Monroe Journal.

A Dinner Invitation.

After a hearty meal a dose of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will prevent an attack of indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and a guaranteed cure for indigestion, dyspepsia, gas on the stomach, sour rising, bad breath and all stomach troubles. N. Watkins, Lesbus, Ky., says: "I can testify to the efficacy of Kodol in the cure of Stomach Trouble. I was afflicted with Stomach Trouble for fifteen years and have taken six bottles of your Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which entirely cured me. The six bottles were worth $1,000 to me." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will digest any quantity of all the wholesome food you want to eat while your stomach takes rest—recuperates and grows strong. This wonderful preparation is justly entitled to all of its many remarkable cures. Sold by J. L. Wooten's Drug Store.

Odd as it seems, there is one State in the United States in which only a woman has been governor. Huh? The married state.—Wilmington Star.

Sour Stomach

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich, sour stomach is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too freely of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let five hours elapse between meals, and when you feel a fullness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the sour stomach may be avoided. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville.

Wanted—Ladies and gentlemen in this and adjoining territories to represent and advertise the wholesale and educational departments of an old established house of solid financial standing. Salary $3.50 per day, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary. Position permanent. NEW YORK, N. Y., March 7, 1905.

Mr. C. T. Munford,
Greenville, N. C.,

Dear Mr. Munford:—

Your communication of the 4th is before us at present. Low prices and holding back the cotton crop from market has place hundreds of Solid Southern Merchants in just your position. The only course we can advise, is to throw your entire stock on the market at prices so low you can dispose of the stock quickly and take the sacrifice best you can. Holding together thousands of dollars of idle merchandise means final ruin to any merchant. Advertise diligently give your costumers the best of values. Thereby protecting both you and your costumers' interest. With best wishes for your success. We remain,

Respectfully yours,

WOOD BROTHERS.

ZETTE

Upon the posters which hung on the outside of the carriage she was styled "Mlle. Antonia, Somnambule Extralucide."

Her mother called her Zette—her real name was Suzanne.

She was a pretty girl, not very large, with fair complexion and long black hair that she let float about her during her consultations, though ordinarily she wore it in a loose coil upon the nape of a neck that was perfect.

Never having done much work, her hands were delicate and well shaped. She was enough of a coquette to wish to keep them so. She had a finely modeled form, and to have seen her simply dressed in some quiet color, with the gait of a wise little workwoman, one would never have suspected her strange calling.

Her mother, Mme. Fluory, was as little like others of her class as her daughter. About her there was nothing in common with the shrews who frequent fairs in red dresses and soiled skirts.

Along the route persons stared in amazement at this queer coach all covered with garlands of flowers.

There was some one who was all devotion to Zette and her mother.

It was a young gymnast of two and twenty in a large traveling circus that had very nearly the same itinerary as Mme. Fluory. His name was Jacques, but on the playbills they spelled it Jack. He was exceedingly handsome and of no common type. There was fire in his eyes and much intelligence in his smile. There was, too, much tenderness in this same smile, especially when he spoke to Zette. His love for this pretty brunette—so unlike any other woman he had seen about him in his wandering life—was very sincere.

Near her he felt himself quite another man to what he was in the circus. There was such an atmosphere of honesty surrounding Zette that his own manners, when with her, were altogether different from what they had been, and he was astonished at how well they became him.

Then, too, he had dreamed of being loved by this sweet girl and of never being separated from her. Their positions accorded admirably. His salary was good, and some day perhaps he might enter one of the great circuses of Lyons or Paris. It would be charming to find so sweet a little wife awaiting his coming after his work was done.

He had often spoken to Zette of these plans. He loved her so dearly that it could not be possible she did not love him at least a little.

Zette always listened silently, visibly touched by what she heard, and he thought each time she would say "Yes," but when he had finished by asking, with such pleading in his eyes, "Will you be my wife, Zette?" she replied very gravely, "No."

Then Jacques would be astonished. Why not? Could it be that she did not believe him when he said he loved her; that she had no confidence in him; that she did not love him?

"Yes, I love you," Zette answered sweetly, "but I do not wish to marry you."

And she would never say why.

One day, however, Mme. Fluory blamed her for refusing the hand of this brave lad.

"Listen, mother," she said. "I adore Jacques, and I believe I shall always remain single because I do not wish to marry him. Do you remember the day when we went together to the circus? I saw—as we entered how all the women who were there turned their lorgnettes toward him, and afterward they smiled and talked about him and tried to attract his attention by applauding him. I ought perhaps to have been proud to think that this man whom they all wanted loved me and that I had only to say the word to be his wife. Ah, well, in my heart there was nothing but jealousy. I wanted to tear the lorgnettes away from these women. From what I suffered that evening I understood how much more I might suffer if we were married. No, that cannot be. He is too handsome. See? Suppose some day, when he had grown tired of me, one of these women should take him from me. I would die surely. You know now, mother, why I cannot say yes."

But notwithstanding this obstinate refusal, which he could not explain, Jacques came every day. He no longer mentioned the subject to Zette, understanding that he was contending against a fixed resolve, except once when he said to her:

"You will not have me, Zette, and I do not wish any other woman. Some day, though, you may change your mind, and then you need only hold out your hand and say to me, 'Let us be married,' and it will make me happy."

So after thus simply settling the affair Jacques was like a brother in the house. It was he who in the springtime planted the seeds in the boxes upon the little balcony; it was he who twined the tendrils about the wires, and it was he who at all seasons furnished the gilded porcelain vases that held the flowers.

These flowers were a great luxury to Zette.

This state of things did not long continue, however. The young girl was now twenty and Jacques twenty-six. One evening he presented his friends with tickets to the circus. It was the last day of a long continued fair, and Zette and her mother had nothing to do. So they decked themselves in their best and went early.

Mme. Fluory was much amused with the horses, the rope dancers, the clowns, the trained dogs. Zette thought only of Jacques, whose name on the programme occupied a line to itself and whose apparatus was hanging up at the top of the high tent. The latter consisted of bars, with copper balls that shone, a maze of trapezes, ropes and pulleys, and the young girl, a little frightened, inquired if it all was secure.

At last the first part of the performance was over and, keeping time to a slow waltz, Jacques appeared. He was as beautiful as a god in his silk tights, that displayed to advantage his superbly modeled form, and, for the rest, his costume consisted of a black satin caecoon, spangled with gold.

After having responded by a bow to the applause of the crowd and by a smile to Zette's smile, he darted up a rope to his trapeze.

The preliminaries were gone through with amid prolonged bravos, for the handsome gymnast was a favorite, and it was truly a pleasure to see him act—the supple body so pliant, yet so marvelously exact in its movements.

Then there came silence—even the orchestra was still.

It was to be the hit of the evening and a new feat that was to give an added glory to the circus. He was to leap from one trapeze to another, with his face and head covered, then suddenly drop from his giddy height upon a net stretched below him. The two trapezes were swinging with a regular movement. Jacques, standing on a little board, his head enveloped in a black velvet bag, put forth his hand blindly. The crowd held its breath. The man was going to jump—he had jumped!

A piercing cry rent the air.

Missing the second trapeze, which had been badly regulated, Jacques fell to the net, but it proved too frail to support his weight, and, striking upon the seats, he rolled to the ground, where he lay motionless.

With a cry of horror Zette sprang to her feet, rigid and pale, her eyes fixed upon the spot where the men were now carrying away the apparently lifeless body of her friend.

Then, suddenly seizing her mother's arm, "Come," she said in a hollow voice.

Breaking through the crowd the two women reached the stables, but were refused admission. For a long while they remained at the entrance, listening to what was said around them, but no one knew anything. Finally Mme. Fluory saw a clown whom she recognized as one of Jacques' friends. He was just coming out of the refreshment room when she called him.

"The net broke the force of the fall," said the man, whose face looked troubled, even under the paint. "The doctor says he will be lame for life and that this ends for him his profession as a gymnast. Poor fellow! But he has something laid up for a rainy day."

Mme. Fluory looked at Zette. She was very pale, and her eyes were fixed upon the man as he spoke as though trying to find if he lied. At last she said, "Let us go."

And, thanking the clown by a gesture, she left the circus.

The two women did not speak as they traversed the grounds of the fair, and they were still silent as they ascended their own little stairway. But when Mme. Fluory had lighted the candle she saw Zette sitting beside the bed, with a strange smile on her lips. She felt frightened for her and went to her.

"Of what are you thinking, little daughter?" she asked, trying to reassure herself.

Then Zette laid her head upon her mother's shoulder, with a child-like gesture.

"I think—that now I can marry Jacques," she told her.—From the French.

Edith's Guess.

Little Edith belongs to a family where the boys go to college and the girls to female seminaries. She keeps careful track of all the doings at both places. She often hears words that are too big for her. It being "field day" for the class in geology, she was asked what the girls were going for. "Oh," said she, "I s'pose they're after theological specimens!"

BROWN STAMPS

Have Come to Greenville.

The best store in town offers them to you on your cash purchases. Every dime you spend there will do extra service henceforth—service that will please and benefit you.

Since you must spend money spend it so that you get full returns. And unless each ten cents in cash put out brings a BROWN STAMP in, you are not getting full value for your money.

Brown Stamps are like compound interest. They accumulate without effort on your part, and the splendid premiums they bring will leave many a dollar free for pleasure or for saving. Just such things as you would otherwise have to buy are offered for Brown Stamps and it takes but 500 stamps to give you your free choice of whatever you can best use or most need.

WE GIVE YOU $1.00 WORTH, 10 STAMPS, FREE with each new book. Unless you already have one, call at our store and get it and the $1.00 worth of free stamps. That dollar worth rolls up like a snow ball down hill, and presto! almost before you know it you have $50.00 worth a book full. Just keep the ball rolling every time you spend cash; spend it where Brown Stamps are given; and ALWAYS ASK FOR BROWN STAMPS.

This store wants your trade—your steady trade—your Cash Trade. It offers low prices, splendid service and Brown Stamps in exchange. You cannot afford to accept less. Therefore you should deal here.

END OF CENTURY BOOK CLUB.

Reported for Reflector.]

The End of the Century Club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. R. W. King, Tuesday afternoon, March 7th. A large number of the club members and invited guests were present.

The elegant home was beautifully decorated with LaFrance roses.

The hostess assisted by Mrs. Joseph G. Moye and Miss Annabel Moore received in the hall where oyster cocktail was served. From the hall the guests were ushered into the lovely parlor where Mrs. Charles O'H. Laughinghouse and Mrs. M. H. Quinerly presided at the fountain of "mint water."

At the appointed hour all assembled in the library and the club meeting was called to order by Mrs. L. C. Arthur, vice president, the president, Mrs. Cotten being absent. Mrs. Arthur presided with the dignity and grace of one long accustomed to such duties. The usual routine of business was transacted after which the hostess gave an interesting and amusing question game, the answers making witty play on the names of those present. The prize a beautiful bouquet of LaFrance roses was awarded to Mrs. Ficklen and Mrs. Quinerly. This they presented to Miss Moye, of Wilson.

Dainty refreshments were served by Misses Mattie Moye and Amine King and Lucile Cobb. In the icees the club colors, red and white were carried out, the cream being served in American beauty roses. Coffee was served by Misses Glenn Forbes and Jodie Brown.

The next meeting of the club will be on Tuesday March 21st, with Mrs. E. A. Moye, Jr.

PAPOOSE POPCORN

A New Seed Discovery for FORAGE, POULTRY, POPPING

A subscriber to the Southern Agriculturist secured the original seed from an old Indian in Northwest Texas. After experimenting with it seven years he wrote that paper: "With good ground and care it will make from 50 to 100 bushels to the acre, and planted thick and cut stalk and all it will make more feed and better feed than anything I ever saw. The old Indian said poultry fed on it would never have the cholera. I have not lost a fowl with cholera since I have been raising it. It also pops beautifully." This article brought hundreds of requests for seed, and now only a few bushels are left. Send 10c for a 3 months' trial subscription to Southern Agriculturist, 39 C. P. Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and you will get 100 seed by return mail, also details of $50 prize seed-growing contest.
