It was an inspiring sermon and helpful to every hearer.

It is said several cases of attempted robbery have recently occurred around town. Suspicious characters are occasionally seen, and it is well enough for our people to be careful to keep doors and windows fastened at night.

AYDEN ITEMS.

AYDEN, N. C., April 28, 1905.

Wednesday morning upon arrival of the train a young man, Leslie West by name, got off here. A short while afterward a phone message from a Mr. Aldridge at Kinston, was received by chief of police, J. T. Smith, requesting the immediate arrest of West. He is charged with collecting money for Mr. Aldridge, who is in the market business, Policeman Smith had no difficulty in locating his man and upon being searched he had the money and a check which we are informed was all that he collected with the exception of railroad fare from Grifton here and twenty-five cents which he spent for having two pair shoes shined. The young man was taken back to Kinston on the evening train after being confined in the guard house here during the day. He expressed sorrow for his conduct.

We are informed that Holton, Speir & Co., of Ridge Spring, were on last Wednesday running 16 Cox cotton planters on their various farms in Greene and Pitt counties. They have at the same time reduced their cotton acreage from last year. This is a large firm and their farming interests are immense. All capital good men, too.

A meeting has been called for tonight for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various town offices to be voted on next Monday.

Mrs. Jane Turnage, of Ormondsville, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. Edwards.

The receipts from the Junior Builders entertainment amounted to $8.00.

The first brick were laid on the second brick block yesterday. There will be five stores in this block.

The different brick yards here are now as busy as busy can be. They remind one of bee hives, everything is so alive. With large orders at home as well as from abroad they have all they can do. Their brick is of the very best and demand ready sale.

There are not less than 20 buildings now in course of erection in Ayden and more in contemplation.

Ralph Johnson and Sid Moore were in Winterville Tuesday afternoon. There seems to be unusual attraction in our sister town for several young men of Ayden.

We are not surprised for we too sometimes have a hankering in that direction.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Mattie McLawhorn to Mr. William Britton Alexander, Wednesday evening, May third, 1905 at seven-thirty o'clock at residence of bride on Main street, Ayden, N. C. At home after May 8th.

W. E. Hooks has added fire with his other line of insurance.

A force of hands from the Ayden Milling and Mfg. Co., are out in the country improving the home of Mr. Joyner Wingate. This company is doing a large business as their work and the demand for it fully attest.

The Neuse Baptist Union meeting will begin at this place tonight and continue through Sunday and Sunday night. A large attendance is expected and our Baptist friends are making ample preparation.

Don't Trouble the Carriers.

There has been some complaint of larger boys interfering with THE REFLECTOR carriers while making their rounds in the evening with the papers. The papers the carriers have are private property and no one has the right to take the papers away from the boys or to interfere with the boys in delivering papers to the subscribers. We hope there will not be any more complaints.

They'll make you look like a new man and our price will make you feel like one.

ARRIVING DAILY.

There is one thing that we do not claim in our business to do and that is to sell goods cheaper than they can be bought—neither do we want to create the impression that our store is full of shop worn, out of style goods nor by filling our store with show bills and sign boards will we try to impress false ideas in your mind that we are going out of business, but we do wish it understood that we are receiving daily shipments of the newest things in and kindred materials so desirable with the women folk of Greenville and Pitt county, and we do hope that you will at least favor us with a visit to see these many new things.

FRIDAY, APR. 28, 1905.

Flour should get cheaper now that wheat has taken such a tumble.

Here is the way the Wall street fellows themselves view the situation: Theodore Price, of New York, at a cotton manufacturers convention in Boston, said that the agreement in the South "not to sell cotton below a specified price is an effort to create one of the most oppressive trusts with which the world's progress is ever threatened." That statement comes with poor grace from Mr. Price. If the farmers want to hold their cotton rather than accept the ruinous price offered for it by Price and his crowd, they have the right to do so. Price says, however, that this movement of the farmers is a failure, "as is evidenced by the quantity of cotton being shipped daily at 7 cents."

Closing of Useful Life.

Mrs. Martha J. Grimes wife of T. C. Grimes and daughter of the late Staton Whichard, of Edgecombe county, near Bethel, passed to her final reward Tuesday, April 18th, 1905. She leaves behind her to mourn their loss a husband, three daughters and one son, three sisters and one brother a host of neighbors and friends.

Mrs. Grimes was a good neighbor, kind friend, loving mother and devoted wife.

She remained on the stage of action fifty-five years, faithful to the home and to her friends, may her spirit on the other shore ever be a guiding star to noble living and consecrated service, by the ties she wove around our hearts with words of cheer and deeds of kindness.

The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. M. T. Lawrence, of Hamilton, N. C.

Happenings in this State during the past few weeks show that we have a different way of dealing with those who rob banks from the inside and with those who rob them from the outside.—Durham Herald.

Yes. Two men who were only suspected of being robbers were shot by a posse near Wadesboro. The posse's suspicions proved correct and these robbers will get all that is coming to them. The mistake they made was in doing business from the outside. If they would get positions on the inside of banks and postoffices and do their robbing like gentlemen, not like common toughs, they would not be shot like common thieves. In fact the chances would be in their favor to escape punishment entirely.—Statesville Landmark.

While a negro charged with "the usual offense" has been acquitted in Mississippi, in spite of the testimony of a man of his own race, who purported to be an eye-witness, a negro in Ohio was only saved from a mob of lynchers by a deputy sheriff, who rushed him off in an automobile. Lawlessness is not sectional, and the color line is at least as conspicuous in the North as in the South.—Ex.

A court up North has decided that a married man is the head of his house. The decision will be all he will have to show for his authority.—Wilmington Star.

Won a Name of Fame.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills, have been made famous by their certain yet harmless and gentle action upon the bowels and liver. They have no equal for biliousness, constipation, etc. They do not weaken the stomach, gripe, or make you feel sick. Once used always preferred. They strengthen. Sold by J. L. Wooten's Drug Store.

DR. R. S. MARTIN.

Dr. Martin, who with his talented family will hold a series of meetings in the Christian church, beginning next Monday night, is a man whose natural abilities have been developed by unusual educational advantages coupled with wide and varied experience. In the Christian Standard he gives the following graphic account of his career:

I had several splendid spiritual instructors early in my youth, such as the late Frances E. Willard, from whose lips I learned the alphabet in her first school at Harlem, Ill. Dwight L. Moody was also my personal friend and the first spiritual instructor in the old North Market Mission and Farwell Hall Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, and, still, his own great church and mine were almost door to door three years, during which time we exchanged pulpits, with profit to all. I also came in contact with and was taught more perfectly the way by many eminent teachers and preachers of the truth while I was three years a student of the Chicago University; for four years in Chautauqua courses of study, for years a medical student in various colleges, four years a teacher in the public schools, and four full years in ministerial and theological studies, during and since which time I have been twenty years a minister, evangelist, lecturer and author, speaking, praying, preaching, writing, lecturing or dedicating churches and other public buildings in nearly every State and Territory of the Union. I conducted and preached each Lord's Day in a six month's series of religious congresses continuing during the period of the Chicago World's Fair, and was afterward appointed by Mr. McKinley, personally, as envoy to Cuba, and three times reported to him personally at Chicago, Washington and Canton. In 1893 I originated the Red Cross church union movement, with its duplex emblem of flag and cross. I have written and published twelve volumes. Have married, buried and baptized hundreds, immersing eighty-seven at one time in a union meeting held in Indiana, and in many other ways I have long loved and advocated Christian ideas and so sought to aid in answering our Lord's intercessory prayer "that they may all be one as we are one."

The last six years of my life have been spent as "Red Cross evangelist," in which work I had the constant attendance and aid of a devoted wife, a Christian son and three daughters, all musicians, singers and Christian workers, singing, preaching, lecturing to thousands, many of whom have heeded the words of Christ and confessed him before men. Several of these are now ministers, missionaries or ministers' wives and teachers. More and more we have learned to love and preach Christian union on our recent travels and studies of church work in Cuba, Canada and America.

This is because it gets a rest—recuperates and gradually grows so strong and healthy that it troubles you no more. E. L. The showers of rain that came yesterday made farmers smile as they are beginning to set tobacco.

The union meeting of the F. W. Baptist church and of the 2nd union district will begin tomorrow and continue until Sunday at St. Delight.

The little town of Dunn is among the most progressive in the state. It has been a prohibition town for several years. This, of course, accounts for its prosperity and good morals. However, like other towns it has some people in it, who think more of strong drink than morality, christianity or civilization. This element saw the saloon could not be reopened in its old form so they wished to establish a dispensary there. In their effort they tried to bribe the good loyal citizens by offering the town $8000. But in their recent election Dunn said no. I am glad this town is able to educate her sons and daughters without making her citizens saloon keepers. Away with the compromise! "A prudent man foreseeth the evil thereof and hideth himself." Hurrah for Dunn.

A Tried and True Friend.

One Minute Cough Cure contains not an atom of any harmful drug, and it has been curing Coughs, Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough so long that it has proven itself to be a tried and true friend to the many who use it. Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., says: "Coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. After trying a number of remedies to no avail, One Minute Cough Cure entirely cured me." Sold by J. L. Wooten.

Germany has excluded the United States from the privileges of her reciprocity treaties with seven European nations. It is announced from Washington that if Germany adheres to this course Congress will pass retaliatory measures and a tariff war will be inevitable.

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

The Family Tree

Captain Craik was the proudest man in America. He had served creditably in the war of 1812, as his father had in the Revolution and his grandfather had in the "Old French war"—all captains who had never received a scratch or once encountered the vulgar smell of gunpowder.

Family pride was the captain's specialty. How far back he could trace his kindred nobody exactly knew, but it was popularly believed he could, if so minded, produce satisfactory proof that the Craiks had cruised through the flood in their own private yacht.

The captain hated the new and worshipped the old. When he went about it was in an ancient family gig drawn by an old horse of approved extraction, now a mere pedegree in harness, but in whose spavins and windgalls the captain took almost as much pride as he did in the family gout.

Captain Craik was rich, moreover. Time and the natural rise of property had made him so. He would have scorned the acquisition of wealth by any less respectable mode. Trade he looked upon as plebeian and vulgar. Speculation was upstartish, and as for petroleum—fugh!

His daughter and only child he had left to die unforgiven and almost in want for having married a man without a grandfather. The poor girl had besought his forgiveness while her husband lived, but ceased to do so after his death, seeming to look upon such an act as a sort of treason to his memory. Her infant son, however, soon left motherless as well as fatherless, was taken into favor at last for the sake of the blood that was in him, and thus it came that Willard Spence was brought up in his grandfather's house in a way befitting the heir apparent to the handsomest fortune within fifty miles.

Captain Craik would have greatly preferred that his grandson, after finishing at college, should have sat down in gentlemanly idleness and quietly awaited his turn at the family succession. But Willard Spence had other views. He was far from sharing his grandfather's notions on the value of ancestry, and though too discreet to openly laugh at them he felt he was more than likely to run counter to them some day, as his poor mother had done, when his own time to marry came. It was for this reason partly and partly because he had an ambition to be something in his own right that Willard prevailed upon his grandfather to enter him as a student in the office of Mr. Stiles, the leading lawyer of the county.

It was with some reluctance that the old gentleman yielded. He entertained a not very exalted opinion of the bar. But then it was a stepping stone to the bench, and though the family could boast of three successive captains there had never been a chief justice in it. It was this consideration that determined the captain.

If John Stiles was the drier of lawyers, his daughter Mary was the prettiest and most fascinating of girls, and Willard Spence was not the man to be slow in finding it out. It would be the old story over to recount the steps of their falling in love and how deeply they fell in.

Willard ventured to hint to his grandfather one day, not at the state of his feelings, but what a nice, intelligent young lady Miss Stiles was. The old gentleman caught like gunpowder. He had no excuse for putting a summary end to his grandson's legal studies and packing him off on a foreign tour, for the young man had said nothing to justify a suspicion of his being in love. But the captain scented danger afar and proceeded to preach such a homily on the sin of marrying into families without lineage and put such a dis-inheriting look on that Willard was fain to drop the subject.

If the reader has ever read Blackstone he will remember, and if he hasn't we will tell him, that in the second book there is a folding leaf called a "Table of Descents," where the author illustrates the mode of computing kindred by a tabular view of the ancestors and collateral relatives for ten or a dozen generations of a certain fictitious John Stiles. The names are enclosed in little circles, with lines uniting those supposed to have intermarried, whose names are further united by other lines to those of their offspring.

"I have it!" was Willard Spence's exclamation as his eye fell on this leaf lying loose in the volume he was reading one day.

That evening it was accidentally dropped in his grandfather's way. "What's this?" asked the old gentleman, picking it up and putting on his specs. "A paper I found in one of Mr. Harry Skinner, Harry Skinner, Jr. H. W. Whedbee. SKINNER & WHEDBEE, LAWYERS, Rooms 3 and 4 Masonic Temple Building. We hereby announce that we have associated with us, in the practice of the Law, Mr. Harry Skinner, Jr. The firm name will continue as heretofore—SKINNER & WHEDBEE, Lawyers. January 2nd, 1905. HARRY SKINNER, H. W. WHEDBEE.

Stiles' books," was the innocent reply.

"Humph! A copy of the Stiles' family tree, and—stop, let me see—running back, as I live, through more generations than I supposed any man in the state could count but myself! Who'd have thought that dried-up old lawyer had so much blood in him?"

"Not I certainly," acquiesced Willard. "And see, here's the name of Baker. My maternal great-grandmother's maiden name was Baker. By Jove, I shouldn't wonder if we found ourselves related yet!"

"Miss Stiles—is she very handsome?" inquired the old gentleman. "Passably," answered the young hypocrite. "Then it occurred to the captain to lecture his grandson on the impropriety of not having returned the paper to Mr. Stiles at once. The young man defended himself with a fib, which the reader may pardon if he likes. He said the paper had dropped out of a book he brought home to read, and of course he would hand it to Mr. Stiles the first thing in the morning.

Next day Willard was sitting in Mr. Stiles' office fumbling over a lawbook and thinking of Mary when his grandfather's gig drove up. Willard wished in his heart it had broken down by the way. The thing he most dreaded was the two old gentlemen getting together and coming to explanations at present.

"Is Mr. Stiles in?" inquired the captain. "Yes, sir," answered the office boy, ushering the visitor into the back office before Willard had time to tell the lie he had framed or tip the boy the wink.

"Good morning, Mr. Stiles," said the captain blandly. "Good morning, captain," returned the lawyer a little stiffly. "Pray be seated."

The captain excused the stiffness. A man with a dozen generations at his back had a right to be stiff. "I came to speak to you on a matter of importance," said the captain, taking the proffered seat.

The lawyer's face brightened at the prospect of securing a valuable client. "My maternal great-grandmother," the captain proceeded, "was a Baker, and your grandfather?"

"Was a shoemaker," the other was on the point of interrupting, for he knew the captain's hobby and had little patience with it. But before the word was spoken, which would doubtless have led to the explanation Willard so much feared, a cry of alarm broke off the conversation. The two gentlemen reached the front door in time to see the captain's horse and gig dashing down the street at a pace that astonished all beholders. For the first time in twenty years old Roan's blood was up, and as he tore along in a gait compounded of equal parts of canter and stringhalt it was hard to tell which rattled most, the dry bones of the horse or the rickety old gig. The question of which would go to pieces first was speedily settled by one of the hubs striking a post, which in an instant reduced the vehicle to its original elements and brought old Roan up standing, his composure completely restored, the crackers having ceased to pop.

"Who on earth did it?" roared the captain. Willard didn't know unless it was a sandy haired boy he had just seen dodge round the corner, with a face too dirty to be recognized. What with the excitement and the gathering up of the fragments and the arrangements necessary to get the captain and old Roan home, the object of the former's visit was for the time forgotten. Before he found an opportunity to renew it, a severe attack of gout laid him up for the season. Meanwhile Willard pressed his suit. Mr. Stiles gave his consent. Mary's had already been obtained, and the "family tree" had settled all scruples with the captain, whose only regret was at not being able to attend the wedding. Whether he ever found out the true state of the case is more than we can tell. If he did, he said nothing, for Mary's loving granddaughtery ways soon completely won his proud old heart, and when little great-grandchildren began to prattle about his knees it wouldn't have made much difference what he found out.

An Odd Compliment.
An Irishman was in the company of a widow to whom he was paying his addresses, when on giving a shudder she made use of the common expression that some one was walking over her grave. Pat, anxious for every opportunity of showing his affection for the lady of his choice, exclaimed: "By the powers, ma'am, but I wish I was the happy man."
