GRIFTON GRADED SCHOOL.

End of the First Year's Work.

About one year ago the people at Grifton determined they would improve their educational advantages. They secured a consolidation of enough territory to give them children sufficient to have a large school. They built a splendid house and employed and put in charge of the school Miss Olivia Cox, principal, and Misses Bertha Waldrop and Mary Edwards, assistants. They made no mistake in the selection of their teachers. The school, though only one year old, has taken its place at once as one of the best schools of the county. The closing exercises of this first session took place Wednesday and at night. In the morning at 11 o'clock Hon. B. R. Lacy, State treasurer, delivered the address. His subject was "Money". For nearly one hour this distinguished, practical, business man, in clear and strong manner showed the money value of education and training. There was a large audience present and every body was delighted both with Mr. Lacy as a man and with his splendid speech. His coming will prove a benediction to Grifton.

At night the exercises were by the pupils and a splendid and elegantly arranged program was presented. For more than two hours a great concourse of people sat delighted at what they were seeing and hearing. Every pupil did his or her part well showing both talent and training. Some of the pieces were exceptionally well rendered. Both teachers and pupils are to be congratulated upon the night's exercises.

At the close of the exercises Prof. W. H. Ragsdale made some announcements as to the action of board of trustees at a meeting held in the afternoon. He stated that every one of the teachers of the past session had been unanimously reelected which announcement was received with applause. He also stated that the trustees would add another teacher to the faculty in the person of some splendid man. Prof. Ragsdale also urged the people to stand for and by their school, telling them that this day was just a foretaste of what was in the future for them should they thus act. The people are aroused and united here and Grifton has a future before it both materially and educationally.

THE REVIVAL MEETINGS

Large Attendance and Much Interest.

Notwithstanding the threatening weather last night a large crowd again assembled at the Christian church to hear Dr. Martin.

The subject was a striking one, "The one great certainty of life," and the text on which he based his discourse was one which gave strong emphasis to his forceful theme.

Words fail to adequately convey the brilliant and masterly effort of this prince of evangelists, as he unfolded in argument and exhortation the divine warning, and punctuated with soul-stirring anecdotes the invincible logic which proved the utter impossibility of evading punishment for sin, or escaping its penalty save through faith in and obedience to the Son of God.

"Be sure your sin will find you out," is the one great certainty of life, either now or later in life or at the judgment bar of Almighty God.

A good congregation was in attendance at the afternoon service in spite of the rain, and the interest continues unabated.

Services will be held every afternoon at 3:30 and 8:00.

Miss Nancy is free, but will no doubt remember that she has been to court.

Chicago, like St. Petersburg, has her hands full attending to the troubles at home.

Getting warm enough for heavy underwear to scratch, but the cold cold spell in May has not got behind us yet.

Jim Jeffers has announced his intention of quitting the ring and the stage and going to work. That is good news.

When John D. Rockefeller dies his Sunday school teaching son will inherit most of his money and then the missionary societies can accept it all without qualms—Durham Sun.

That depends very much on whether young John gives them a chance to accept it.

Public School Gardening.

A comparatively new and interesting extension of the work is its introduction into public schools, where it was a prominent success from the start. Already the day of experiment is past,—nature-study and gardening are becoming important factors in educational circles, and an effort is being made to bring them within reach of every child. Boys and girls are becoming more and more interested in this attractive work, which takes them out of themselves, out of doors, and into closer and more sympathetic relations with one another. The purpose, primarily, is to teach children how to plant and grow flowers and vegetables by permitting them to do the actual work, so that they may have such practical knowledge of farming as to be able to make a living from it should the need and opportunity come. In addition, they get instruction and exercise which help them morally, mentally, and physically. Each child is given its own garden—about nine by twelve feet—on the conditions that the holder must work faithfully and must not trespass upon others. It is an inspiring sight to see these little ones cultivating the ground that it may bring forth a beautiful flower or a useful vegetable, and, above all, to realize that they are privileged to breathe fresh air and to look up to nature's God through long hours of glorious and health-giving sunshine. The hope is indulged that this cultivation of the soil by the children will instill into their hearts such a love of outdoor life that many will turn their feet countryward and seek a living upon farms rather than remain in the city to find employment in the already overcrowded offices, shops, and factories.—From "Farming Vacant City Lots," by Allan Sutherland, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for May.

Nearly Half Million Immigrants in Six Months.

During the six months ended March 31, there were 459,716 immigrants landed in the United States from all countries. This is an increase over the same period for 1903 of 35 per cent.

There were debarked from all countries during the six months referred to in 1905 a total of 4,825, an increase over the same period in 1903 of 18 per cent.

The immigrants from Russia for the six months ending March 31, 1905, numbered 88,832, an increase over the same period in 1903 of 76 per cent. This increase in the figures of Russian immigration is due largely to the Japanese war, as has been heretofore noticed in the immigration reports printed.—Washington Dispatch.

The Census Bureau has issued the final report on the cotton crop grown in 1904, showing a total production of 13,584,457 bales of 500 pounds. The crop exceeds that of 1903 by 3,491,896 bales, or 35 per cent. The largest crop produced in the United States prior to 1904 was that of 1898, which amounted to 11,235,000 bales, or 16 per cent, less than the crop of 1904. The average crop for the five year period ending with 1903 was 9,992,047 bales, or 26 per cent, less than the crop of 1904. If the crop of 1904 was in any measure due to the high prices paid for the preceding crop, it would seem that it would be comparatively easy to curtail this year's crop on account of the low prices. There is apparently no lack of artificial elasticity in the production of the staple, as shown by the census figures.—Charlotte Observer.

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison, Kan., Globe: "Joe Tack, a well known engineer, running on the Pacific between Wichita and Klowa, lately appeared in a big one, with a picture, and when he was in the office today, we asked him about it. He says terrific pains in his stomach, and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures all stomach troubles. Just as surely as the sun shines your stomach can be brought back to its originally pure condition and life sweetened by this lasting and truly the greatest digestant known. Sold by Jno L. Wooten.

Children Ought to Go Barefooted.

People are getting so fashionable that it will not do to let a little tot of a girl go barefooted except around home or in the back lot. They are sent to school diked out in shoes and stockings, and when they get sick and puny, as they often do, parents wonder why their children are not more robust and healthy. Style and pride has much to do with it. Turn them out barefoot to school until frost comes; boys and girls should practice it until they are at least ten years old, but if a girl of this age should be seen on the streets without shoes, some people would faint. Yet a bare foot on God's ground is most conducive to health.—Greensboro Record.

Bilious Bill was getting bloated, and his tongue was much coated. Patent "tonics" wouldn't cure him. Companies would not insure him. All his friends were badly frightened. But their spirits soon were lightened. For Bill said—and they believed him, EARLY RISER pill relieved him. The famous little pills "Early Risers" cure Constipation, Sick Headache, Billiousness, etc., by their tonic effect on the liver. They never gripe or sicken but impart early rising energy. Good for children or adults. Sold by Jno L. Wooten.

The Crop Reporter for April, of the United States department of agriculture, contains a tabulated statement showing by countries the wheat production of the world for the last five years. The amounts are given in bushels. For 1900 the total amount was 2,649,620,000 and for 1904 it was 3,162,404,000. These latter figures were surpassed in the previous year, when reached 3,230,533,000. Of the world's supply the United States produced 522,230,000 in 1900; 748,460,000 in 1901; 670,963,000 in 1902; 637,822,000 in 1903, and 552,400,000 in 1904.

The Parker Company of Melrose, Pitt county, with postoffice at Greenville, was chartered yesterday in the secretary of state's office to conduct a public gin, saw mill, cotton seed mill, manufacture and deal in fertilizers and conduct a wholesale and retail general merchandise business. The total authorized capital stock is $10,000, of which $4,000 is subscribed by G. A. Stancill, of Hill, R. H. Parker, C. L. Parker and T. E. Parker, of Greenville.—Raleigh Post.

The newspapers mention the noteworthy fact that three brothers named Watts are Mayors of cities in Indian Territory. Charles G. Watts holds office in Wagoner, John W. in Sallisaw and Thomas C. in Muldrow. We presume that the Indians out there kick as hard against the Watts law in those towns as some folks kick against North Carolina's Watts law.—Wilmington Star.

The price of a pretty face is $1.00—three packages of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Brings red lips, bright eyes and lovely color. 35 cents. Tea or Tablets. Wooten's Drug Store.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates on experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Cleburne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I wanted for, but that this medicine was so much better: he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one small bottle cured the three of us." For sale at Wooten's Drug Store.

Sour Stomach

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich, sour stomach is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too freely of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let five hours elapse between meals, and when you feel a fullness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the sour stomach may be avoided. For sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville.

Cured of Lame After 15 Years of Suffering

"I had been troubled with lame back for fifteen years and I found a complete recovery in the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says John G. Bisher, Gilliam, Ind. This liniment is also without an equal for sprains and bruises. It is for sale by Wooten's Drug Store, Greenville.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder. If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grow weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders. I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pain I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. Mrs. J. W. COOLBAUGH, Milo Center, N. Y.

GIVE ME A TRIAL.

A ROMANCE of WORK

The sun hung like a copper disk in an indigo sky. Heat danced, whirled and eddied a few feet above the alkali dust in the trail. Over the great patches of sagebrush the air hung like the breath of the dead. Not even the wing of a bird set it in motion.

A young woman sat in the doorway with folded hands and dejected shoulders. She was apparently as lifeless as her surroundings.

There had been a time when the sight of these withered plants cooked by the sun would have made her cry—not now, though. Janet Dinscombe wondered vaguely if she were losing her senses. She remembered hearing centuries ago—it was less than a year—that men lost their minds when they were alone for months in the desert. She had laughed at the thought of that when Roger Dinscombe had told her of his love before he came to work out a living on a sheep ranch. She would not delay the marriage. "I am to be a helpmeet, not a hindrance," she said, and urged him to take her with him. "I will keep house for you. We will be together. What more can we ask?" she said pleadingly. With a pretty flushed cheek up against his, Roger Dinscombe had not the courage to deny Janet Moore's demand. Her home was not very pleasant, he argued to himself in justification. And Janet had her own way.

The first two months the young wife went singing about the little cabin, happy enough. Then her step grew less lively, and hours of unhappiness followed. Roger loved her. Of course she knew that. But he did not tell her so very often now. Then, too, he was busy all day, and she had long forenoons and afternoons when there was nothing to do. Her house was neat as a pin. She even had read all the advertisements in the few papers which chance brought her. Her nearest neighbor lived five miles away. When Roger came home, he was too tired to talk much. There was a late supper and an early breakfast—and then silence and desolation.

One day Janet realized she was losing her love for her husband. That was when she had planted the garden. A few sickly plants grew there, which she kept alive by carrying water from a muddy little stream. When July came, this dried up. And now her plants were dead. She felt choked as she looked at them, but the tears did not come to her eyes.

Roger Dinscombe noticed the shadow which had settled upon his wife's face. Blaming himself, he grew irritable and moody. Instead of love making him tender it forced him to be distant. Often now husband and wife avoided looking into each other's eyes. That very morning he had spoken to Janet sharply as he went away. The words fell back on his own heart like a lash. "What a brute I am!" he muttered, and half turned to come back. But the set look on Janet's face came up before him, and he spurred on the pony he was riding.

"Am I going mad?" Janet repeated to herself until the sun had crept to where she sat. "I won't go mad. I am a girl of common sense. I used to hate the work at home of cooking for a houseful of stepbrothers and sisters, mending and darning, with constant whining and fretting from a stepmother who was as strong as I am. Now work would be the most blessed boon on earth. What shall I do?" The little sitting room and kitchen were spotless. She could not do anything there.

"I'll put my trunk in order," she thought. Not a ribbon was out of place. She took up a bundle of patches idly. "Why not make a quilt?" The idea pleased her as she looked over the patches. That bit of lilac print was her first "grown-up gown" and this blue and white checked calico was the dress she had on the first time she met Roger. She remembered now that she had a bunch of wild crab apple blossoms in her belt when she ran into Mrs. Dinscombe on an errand and was told, "Janet, this is my son Roger, who has just come home from the west."

The young Mrs. Dinscombe's face softened as she seemed to live it over again and to see honest blue eyes looking at her, saying, "I approve of you." Piece after piece was unfolded. This white mull was her wedding dress. Smoothing and getting it with fingers which would get jerky, Janet sat for a long time. Then the tears came—tears which seemed to melt the iron band around her heart. When she remembered where she was, it was almost supper time, and she jumped up with a little start. "Poor Roger!"

she murmured. "What must you think of me?" She cooked the best that her kitchen afforded and in a half ashamed way slipped into the blue and white checked dress which she had kept. It was a little out of style; but, then, fashions do not cut much of a figure in a Utah desert. "I wonder if he will notice?" she said to herself. She hoped he would, and yet the thought frightened her. Roger stopped a moment as he came up to the door and saw her with a look on her face that sent the blood to his heart with a thud. He paled a little, and then, gathering her up in his arms, carried her to the rocking chair, dropped to the floor and buried his face in her lap, sobbing as if his heart would break. "Roger! Roger!" was all she could say. Finally he grew calm, and then he said: "I couldn't stand it any longer, and I made up my mind to send you away—where you would be happy, and then to come home and see you looking just as you did the first moment I ever saw you—and I've loved you ever since—more than I could endure."

"Well, I'm not going, Roger," said his little wife in an assumed practical manner, "to do anything but get your supper." Which she did when she could get out of his arms. Later in the evening they talked it over. Janet got the patches, and they planned what design she should use. "I think I would like to make it look like the leaf of a sagebrush if you will draw one for me, Roger," she said thoughtfully. Roger was only too happy, but it took two or three evening consultations before he could design a pattern that suited. Evening after evening the work was brought out for inspection. Roger must see how she had fitted the pieces together, look at the stitches, hear the history of each tiny bit of new cloth, and when praise had been given and suggestions made there was always time left for the husband and wife to talk quietly and happily together. When the quilt was pieced, came the quilting, at which Roger tried to help with his great, awkward fingers. At last it was complete. It was beautiful in their eyes, because they saw reconciliation and happiness stitched into it. "Four thousand eight hundred and twenty-two pieces, would you believe it, Roger?" said Janet. "Let us take it to the fair when you go in with the sheep. I am sure it will get first premium."

Going to the territorial fair was their fall outing. They would do their trading and lay in their winter supplies. Roger fixed up the herder's wagon as cozily as possible. There were the cook stove, the bed, the water cask and bucket, a looking glass and washbasin and chair for Janet. It took four days to reach Salt Lake City, and then Janet had the satisfaction of seeing her quilt with the inscription, "Four thousand eight hundred and twenty-two pieces," hanging on a line in the woman's department of the great red brick building where the annual exposition is held. It had a red ticket the last day.

Two young women, tourists who had stopped in the city of the saints and who had been attracted by the people attending the fair, stopped in front of the quilt and read the inscription, "Four thousand eight hundred and twenty-two pieces." "What do you think of that for woman's work, Julia?" said the tall girl to her companion. "Think! I think the woman was a fool who would spend her time making a thing like that. She'd better be doing nothing at all." "What do you know about it?" said a white faced little woman, with blazing eyes. "I made that quilt, and I did it to keep from going mad. What do you know about nothing to do?" Her anger had burned out by this time, and she began to stammer. Then something in the girls' faces encouraged her to go on. "Would you like to hear the story?" She told it simply enough, but it touched her listeners and made them their friends as they realized for once in their lives what it would be to do without work, daily papers, magazines, theaters, music or church. They must have her show them the wagon in which she traveled. Then they must go inside and have her tell them more about her life as a sheep herder's wife.

"What will you do now?" asked the tall young woman as they were about to part. "You cannot piece quilts all the time." "I shall find plenty to do. There will be sewing and planning this winter," Janet Dinscombe answered as a flush crept over her cheek, "and next summer, please God, I shall not be alone."

That night the sheep herder's wife was very happy as she fell asleep in the wagon, with one hand touching a package of books which had come "with the love of two girls from the east," and the other resting on a bundle of soft material which she would fashion into tiny garments against the coming of a little child.—Nevada Victoria Davis in New York Press.

Queen Quality

It Sets the Style.

What do we mean when we say that the styles of most of the shoes for women originate with the "Queen Quality" Shoe?

Simply this. The "Queen Quality" is, and always has been a leader. It gets up its own original patterns at great expense, and has established a reputation for the style and beauty of its creations.

OTHER MAKERS ARE CONTENT TO AWAIT THEIR APPEARANCE, and then copy them as closely as possible.

But "Queen Quality" "sets the style"—don't forget that!

And one other point—"Queen Quality" offers twice as many styles for your consideration as any other shoe.

You cannot suggest a need which is not fitted with a "Queen Quality" shoe specially designed for it.

Does not this realize the ideal of a strictly custom shoe? And such a shoe for $3.00. Think of it! Oxfords $2.50.

Tans in all shape are here.
