This fills the last vacant office room in the building, and the Masons are to be congratulated that the temple did temple which they went to so much expense to build is now filled with good tenants.
The building is an ornament to the town and ought to prove profitable to the fraternity.

FANCY SALE A SUCCESS.

Two Young Ladies Give An Exhibition.
The fancy sale Tuesday evening by the ladies of the Baptist church in the Perkins opera house proved quite a success, both financially and from point of amusement. The fish pond afforded abundant merriment, especially to the little people, the only objection being that the pond was fished dry all too soon.
The refreshment tables were well patronized, everything to eat being readily sold.
The fancy goods department was very attractive with the many beautiful articles on display. These sold well and added quite a nice sum to the receipts.
The most amusing feature of the evening, which came without previous announcement, was the impromptu backward dive taken by two young ladies in the lemonade well. Fortunately for their dresses the well was dry.

HANRAHAN ITEMS

HANRAHAN, N. C., Sept. 5, 1905.
Hurrah for Hanrahan! Did you know there was such a place? Mrs. Nora Hart and children, of Kinston, spent few days last week at W. L. McLawhorn's.
Mrs. Jacob McLawhorn has been visiting her father, who is quite ill.
Farmers in this vicinity say the sweet potato crop is fine, simply grand.
Mrs. Willie Alexander, of Ayden, visited at this place last week.
Eddie Lang, of this section and Miss Mary Linda Smith, of Gum Swamp, are to be married Wednesday evening. We don't know much about it, but guess it will be a pretty happy occasion.
People are constantly passing with tobacco, regardless of the price if it has fallen.
Louis Mumford died at his home Sunday, about four miles from here. His suffering was indeed great. We believe he is better off.
Miss Eliza H. Brooks has accepted Hanrahan school for the ensuing year.
His sweet to know the good old summer time will be back bye and bye.
The Misses Smith and Miss Hardy of Gum Swamp, visited at W. L. McLawhorn's the latter part of last week.
Mrs. Lon Ormond has returned to Ayden, accompanied by Miss Lena Smith and Mrs. Biggs Cannon who will visit her a day or two.
Mrs. Collins and daughter, Miss Ophelia, had company from Griton Sunday afternoon.
Mrs. Mariza Lang has gotten well of fever and is able to be out. Amos Lang happened to the market to break his finger a few days ago.
Dr. Perkins is out on his farm again.
Would you love to hear from Hanrahan again? [Yes—EL.]

Original Observations.

It requires good eye sight to see a friend in need.
Killing time is a sure way of spelling character.
The only sure thing about a life is that it will never die.
If nature never makes a mistake she certainly plays some great jokes.
Many people mistake their dreams about heaven for deeds to lots up there.
Don't expect a man to forget if he does you a good turn, because he won't.
Few men realize what a splendid impression they could make by keeping their mouths shut.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

GREENVILLE DISCRIMINATED AGAINST

The REFLECTOR has often wondered why Greenville and her business interests should be treated worse than other towns, or in other words why the Atlantic Coast Line should be more niggardly towards its patrons than other railroads are. Take the Atlantic & North Carolina for instance: That road is already operating double daily passenger trains between Morehead City and Goldsboro, and the Kinston Free Press says another train will be put on at an early day. The purpose of this additional train is to make such connections at Goldsboro as will enable people along the A. & N. C. to go to Norfolk and return the same day.

Just think of that—people from Morehead City, New Bern and Kinston being able to go to Norfolk and return the same day, a distance twice as far as from Greenville to Norfolk, while our people cannot get to any point of importance and return the same day.

This additional train on the A. & N. C. will give that road three passenger trains each way a day, while the branch of the A. C. L. from Kinston to Weldon, about the same number of miles in length, has only one passenger train each way a day. The people of Greenville and other towns along this road have long been asking for another train—one leaving Weldon for Kinston in the morning and return in the afternoon—but so far their petitions have been denied. It is not to say the patronage of the road will not justify the additional train, for it is well known that this portion of the Atlantic Coast Line is about the best paying branch of its length on the whole system.

We can only think this failure of the A. C. L. to put another daily train on this road is due to a lack of interest in its patrons and a want of appreciation of the large business this section gives the road. As for Greenville, there is not a more important town in Eastern North Carolina, and the large business interests here deserve better treatment on the part of the railroad officials. Our transportation facilities are inadequate and should be improved.

This is one of the things that Greenville ought to have a board of trade to be looking after.

Mayor Woodward is not the first man who could not stand water.

All the other centers of sensation will please keep quiet until Durham gets through.

Yes, we said something else would happen. The Dukes have the top o' column head lines now.

This idea of assaulting the judge if you cannot get the jury packed to suit you, is a new one in North Carolina. It should be nipped in the bud.

The Supreme court of the state ought to keep hands off the McCown appeal and let him serve out his sentence. Such an assault as he made upon Judge Ward should not be tolerated. Whether the court was actually in session or not at the time of the assault should not shorten the sentence one minute or reduce the fine one penny.

Wonder why many men persist in carrying good sums of money around in their trousers when banks are so convenient. The state papers have recently mentioned several incidents where sleeping rooms have been entered by burglars and pants pockets robbed of large sums.

Here is an adjustment that beats litigation full handed. The Tarboro Southerner tells that the heirs of the late Judge Howard, six in number, selected three persons to apportion the estate valued at about a quarter of a million dollars. The persons selected accepted the charge and set about to make the division. They went over the many parcels of real estate, placing them together in six equal allotments as far as possible, and then asked the heirs to draw for them. This was done, and it is said that each one of the heirs was perfectly satisfied with the allotment received.

What is the matter with the Dukes' matrimonial alliances? It has not been long since the papers were full of Brodie Duke and his trouble with his wife. Only last winter there was the announcement of the fashionable wedding of J. B. Duke to a Mrs. McCredy, and in just ten months after that brilliant event comes the announcement that he is suing for divorce from his wife on the ground of her infidelity while he was absent in Europe. The press reports say that Mrs. Duke figured in a divorce suit by her former husband from similar causes. These romantic marriages for which the Dukes display a fancy do not seem to pan out well, and, verily, the richest people in this world are by no means the happiest. J. B. Duke is president of the tobacco trust.

As You Go Along.

Be helpful, be sociable, be unselfish, be generous, be a good listener, never worry or whine, study the art of pleasing, be frank, open and truthful, always be ready to lend a hand, be kind and polite to everybody, be self confident, but not conceited, never monopolize the conversation, take a genuine interest in other people, always look on the bright side of things, take pains to remember names and faces, never criticize or say unkind things of others, look for the good in others, not for their faults, cultivate health and thus radiate strength and courage, forgive and forget injuries, but never forget benefits, rejoice as genuinely in another's success as in your own, always be considerate of the rights and feelings of others, have a good time, but never let fun degenerate into license, learn to control yourself under the most trying circumstances, have a kind word and a cheery, encouraging smile for every one, be respectful to women, and chivalrous in your attitude toward them, meet trouble like a man, and cheerfully endure what you can't cure, believe in the brotherhood of man, and recognize no class distinctions.—Success.

How Trade is in New York.

It is inspiring these days, to walk up and down Broadway, through the shopping districts and in and out of the great wholesale centers. Buyers, buyers, buyers! Shoppers, shoppers! Sight sees! Never in all her history has New York swarmed with outside merchants and tradefolk as now. Seventeen hundred and fifty out-of-town buyers have registered at the Merchants' Association within the past week, and hundreds of them register at our hotels every day. With their wives or other "women folks" counted, there are no doubt four thousand of them in town this morning. Last year was considered an exceptionally good one, but the number of out-of-town merchants now here is fully 25 per cent greater than twelve months ago. It is estimated that they buy on an average average $10,000 worth of goods apiece. Figure it out—and then cease to wonder why New York is prosperous and rich and great—New York Commercial.

SHREWD SCHEMES.

Those Devised by Shoplifters Keep Detectives Guessing.

To detect the female shoplifter used to be the easiest thing in the world. Nowadays her wiles call out the lynx eyed vigilance of lady detectives, says London Answers. They are in all our big drapery and furnishing emporiums—and they have a busy time.

The shoplifter, bear in mind, is not, as a rule, the homeless creature in rags. She is a fashionable butterfly, who flutters about the most expensive stalls. She has a condescending smile, a patronizing air and the majestic grace of a newly presented debutante. And she sweeps along—choosing crowds—wearing a bag skirt and a belt of fish hooks.

This fish hook device is ingenious. The shoplifter wears them level with the knee underneath her loose and flowing skirts. They are spaced just far enough apart to keep them from becoming entangled. To the inner side of the underskirt a wide band of oiled silk is sewn. This, with similar bands around the knees, saves both the thief and her skirts from being hooked and permits the hooks themselves to hang free.

The thief who wears these fish hooks wears also two little spurlike projections at the back of the French heels of her shoes. With these she picks up handkerchiefs, blouses, silk and other materials of a like nature and raises them beneath her skirts to the other hooks. All this can be done by an expert in the most unsuspecting manner possible, even beneath the eyes of the detective, without giving that individual the slightest intimation of what is being done.

Another thief uses a large hook and heavy sinker, these being suspended beneath the skirts and capable of being raised or lowered by means of a small reel carried inside the shoplifter's pocket. The thief knocks the article to be stolen off the counter as if by accident and stands over it. With one hand she calmly proceeds to lower the hook until it touches the floor and catches the blouse or piece of silk there. Then up comes the hook with the stolen goods, and the shoplifter walks quietly away.

A Defect In the Hands.

A good story is told of an English lawyer who, having succeeded in making a litigant of every farmer in his county, having grown rich at their expense and thus established a valid claim to their consideration, consented to sit for his portrait, which was to adorn the courtroom of the county town. The picture was duly painted by a London artist, and previously to being hung was submitted to a private view. "Most uncommonlike, to be sure," was the general verdict. But one old chap, regarding the canvas critically, dissented from the prevailing opinion as follows: "That be somewhat like his face, but it ain't the man. This man has got his hand in his own pocket, you see. Now, I have knowed him for five and thirty years, and all that time he's had his hand in somebody else's pocket. This chap ain't him."

Her Shrewd Comment.

For Herbert Spencer the minds of lunatics had an odd fascination. Mr. Spencer was a frequent visitor to a number of asylums, and he recounts some unconscious witticism of a lunatic.

Sometimes he would tell of the criticism a lunatic woman made on a sermon that was preached in her asylum. The criticism was brief, but it was telling.

"To think," said the woman, pointing toward the clergyman—"to think of him out and me in."

Bright Man.

"There wouldn't be so many amateur hunters lost in the woods," said Jenkins, "if they'd only carry pocket compasses."

"Why?" asked Dumley. "What good is a compass?"

"You can't get lost when you have one. The needle always points to the north, and"

"But suppose you want to go to the east, south or west?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Sarcastic Soldier.

General Fitz-Hugh Lee had a large fund of wartime anecdotes. He used to tell this one: On account of the shifting of officers to replace losses a young Irish captain was given command of a raw troop of volunteers who were under fire for the first time. Their baptism must have unnerved the recruits, for they never budged at the command to charge. A second command likewise being disobeyed, to their leader's stupefaction, he rode along the line glaring reproachfully at his men and demanded sarcastically: "What ails you fellows, anyway? D'ye want to live forever?"

Why He Preferred to Die.

In the year 1500 a preacher of the name of William Dorrington threw himself from the parapet of the Church of St. Sepulcher, in London. He left a note which gave as his reason for committing the act that he wanted to go to the theater that night, but did not have the money wherewith to purchase the ticket of admission.

WINNING HIS NAME.

An Indian Boy's Battle With a Wolf In Old Newfoundland.

With the following somewhat gory scene Theodore Roberts opens his story of old Newfoundland, "Brothers of Peril." "The boy struck again with his flint knife, and again the great wolf tore at his shoulder. The eyes of the boy were fierce as those of the beast. Neither wavered. Neither showed any signs of pain. The dark spruces stood above them, with the first shadows of night in their branches, and the western sky was stained red where the sun had been. Twice the wolf dropped his antagonist's shoulder in a vain attempt to grip the throat. The boy, pressed to the ground, flung himself about like a dog and repeatedly drove his clumsy weapon into the wolf's shaggy side. At last the fight ended. The great timber wolf lay stretched dead in awful passiveness. His fangs gleamed like ivory between his scarlet jaws and black lips. A shimmer of white menaced the quiet wilderness from the recesses of the half shut eyelids. "For a moment the boy lay still, with the fingers of his left hand buried in the wolf's mane and his right hand a blot of red against the wolf's side. Presently, staggering on bent legs, he went down to the river and washed his mangled arm and shoulder in the cool water. The shock of it cleared his brain and steadied his eyes. He waded into the current to his middle, stooped to the racing surface and drank unstintingly. Strength flooded back to blood and muscle and the slender limbs regained their lightness.

"By this time a few pale stars gleamed on the paler background of the eastern sky. A long finger streak of red, low down on the hillslope, still lightened the west. The boy saw nothing of the changing beauty of the sky. He returned to the dead wolf and set about skinning it with his rude blade. He worked with skill and speed. Soon head and pelt were clear off the red carcass, and, collecting his arrows and bow, he flung the prize across his shoulder and started along a faint trail through the spruces.

"After walking rapidly for nearly an hour the boy came out on a small meadow bright with fires. Nineteen or twenty conical wigwams made of birch poles, bark and caribou hides stood about the meadow. Two women who were broiling meat at the fire looked from the shaggy, blood stained pelt to the stalwart stripling. They cried to him softly in tones of love and admiration. "Now give me my man name," demanded the boy.

"A stalwart man, the chief of the village, strode from the dark interior of the nearest wigwam. His eyes gleamed at the sight of his boy's torn arm and the white teeth of the wolf. 'Wolf Slayer!' he cried. He turned to the women. 'Wolf Slayer,' he repeated. 'Let this be his man name—Wolf Slayer.'"

Bluestockings, Beware!

Woman after woman lined up at the glove counter and got waited on, but the call of the woman with the book under her arm was still unheeded.

"Why is it," she wailed to a passing acquaintance, "that I can't get anybody to sell me a pair of gloves?"

"It is that book that does all the mischief," said the acquaintance. "You will never get waited on properly so long as you go shopping with a book tucked under your arm. It gives you a studious look, and shop girls abhor a bluestocking of any description. They claim that a woman with literary tendencies buys in small quantities, at low prices. Therefore it doesn't pay to give their time to her until all the smart customers have been waited on."—New York Press.

Satisfactory Reason.

"I've just been making my will. I have bequeathed everything I possess to my wife."

"Then you did it in about ten words?"

"Not at all. The lawyer who drew it up for me used four sheets of paper."

"What did he charge you?"

"Five dollars."

"Then he's an honest lawyer. He wanted to make the service worth the fee."—Chicago Tribune.

As the Romans Did.

"Paw," asked the inquisitive kid, "when you were in Rome that time did you do as the Romans do?"

"I suppose so, my son."

"Well, then, all I've got to say, paw," chuckled the lad, who evidently had before his mind's eye the wrong set of pictures, "is that you must have looked mighty funny going around in broad daylight wearing nothing much but a long tailed shirt and a Roman nose."—New York Tribune.

The Diminutive.

Bertie—Pa, a little stream is a streamlet, isn't it?

Pa—Yes, Bertie.

Bertie—Well, pa, is a cutlet a little cut and a hamlet a little ham and a gimlet a little gim and a pamphlet a little pamph?

Pa—Oh, go away, Bertie! I want a little quiet.

Bertie—Well, why didn't you say you wanted a quietlet?

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)
(Save the Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)
