WINTERVILLE NOTES

Interesting Items from Our Hustling Neighbor.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Jan. 3rd.

J. F. Harrington went to Greenville Tuesday on business.

Prof. F. C. Nye, one of the teachers of the Winterville High school, attended the union meeting at LaGrange last Saturday and returned home Sunday.

Several new students have entered the Winterville High school for the spring term.

R. H. Huosucker, the prosperous buggy builder of Winterville, returned home Tuesday morning from Colorado and Seven Springs. He is always hustling for his business.

Misses Dora Cox and Ethel Carroll, after spending the Christmas holidays with their parents, returned to Raleigh Tuesday morning where they will take up their work again in the Baptist University for women. They are excellent students and we predict for them much success.

The A. G. Cox Mfg. Co. is doing so much shipping these days that they had to employ a shipping clerk, and they were successful in employing J. R. Carroll. John is one of our best young men, and stands out for what is right on all moral questions. We congratulate the A. G. Cox Mfg. Co. on having such a young man as he is. He is a former student of the Winterville High school, and he is wished much success in his new work.

We are glad to welcome all the old students of the Winterville High school back again after they have spent the holidays with their friends, and still gladder to welcome the new ones that are arriving daily.

John Nichols, of Kinston, spent Sunday in town with his mother.

C. J. Jackson and F. F. Cox, after spending the holidays with their parents, returned this morning to Wake Forest. They are former students of the W. H. S., and we predict for them much success.

Repainting the depot added much to the looks of it, but not near so much as the A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., are adding to it by literally covering the platform with the Cox cotton planters. They only shipped about 400 this week.

Meeting of Cotton Association.

There will be a meeting of the Pitt County Cotton Association in the court house in Greenville at 11 30 o'clock Saturday, Jan'y. 6, 1906. It is earnestly hoped that all who are interested in advancing the price of cotton will attend this meeting, as matters of importance will be discussed.

R. R. COTTEN, President,
Pitt County Cotton Association.

Changes at Bakery.

The Bakery heretofore operated by J. A. Ricks & Bro., in connection with their grocery store, will hereafter be run by J. M. Reuss. Mr. Reuss has had many years experience in this line, and in addition to the bakery he will carry a stock of fruits and confections in one of the stores in the Jarvis building.

ALL OVER THE STATE

Happenings of Interest in North Carolina.

J. J. Britt, of Asheville, has been commissioned as United States district attorney for the western district of North Carolina.

W. R. Davis, a young man in the employ of the Southern railway at Spencer, lost both legs by being run over by an engine. He died later.

C. B. Lyda, a country merchant near Hendersonville, died of wounds inflicted by his cousin, George Lyda. The two men had a quarrel over the sum of thirty cents.

Rev. J. J. Rum, a member of the North Carolina conference, died at Wilson Tuesday. He was taken sick while attending the conference in Wilson the last week in November.

Chunks of Wisdom.

The press in and out of the State have made favorable comments on Judge Justice's declaration to a Wake county jury that "education is less important than common sense as a qualification for jurymen, the respect for God and women fitted any man for service, that carrying concealed weapons was a sin and that right thinking folks had much more respect for men who fought out their difficulties with their fists than carrying around pistols ready to take the life of a fellow man."

The Norfolk Landmark, commenting on these homely and sensible declarations by Judge Justice, says: "There are some original and strongminded men among the judiciary of the Old North State," and of his utterances says: "These are chunks of wisdom."—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Feeders of Criminal Dockets.

It's mighty sorry parents that will let their children have their own way at home, but of all the fool parents in this world the ones who "take up" for their disobedient children when they are punished at school stand at the head of the list. They are the most faithful feeders of the criminal court dockets of any other class of people on this earth. If they do that way because they don't know any better they are to be pitied, but if they know better, then the responsibility rests more heavily upon them and they will be held to account in the day of judgment.—Marshville Home.

For Four More Years.

Col. Harry Skinner, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina received a handsome New Year's remembrance yesterday. It was his new commission as District Attorney and is for four years from the first of February, 1906. Col. Skinner was re-appointed to the position by President Roosevelt before endorsements were forwarded, the Senate affirming the appointment, and the commission coming to him yesterday.—Raleigh News and Observer.

PERSONAL MENTION

Of Those Going and Coming.

M. R. Lang, of Norfolk, is in town.

Dr. William Fountain went to Tarboro today.

Joe Smith returned to school at Durham today.

C. L. Wilkinson, went to Tarboro this morning.

D. C. James returned to school at Baltimore today.

Miss Fannie Bagwell returned to school at Oxford today.

Miss Bernice Hornaday returned to school at Littleton today.

G. S. Prichard returned Tuesday evening from Goldsboro.

Miss Maude Barnhill, of Bethel, is visiting Miss Julia Harris.

John Ivy Smith returned to school at Wake Forest today.

Ned Laughinghouse returned to school at Chapel Hill today.

J. L. Fleming went to Grifton Tuesday evening and returned this morning.

Mrs. W. A. Bowen and little son returned Tuesday evening from Plymouth.

Misses Nell and Lottie Skinner returned Tuesday evening from a visit to Tarboro.

Elgor Buck has returned from Stokes and will make his headquarters here again.

Prof. and Mrs. C. L. Hornaday, of Durham, who spent the holidays here, left this morning.

Real Estate Business.

B. W. Moseley, who has for some years been a cotton buyer here, will also engage in the real estate business. He has had valuable experience in this line and knows how to handle real estate to advantage, also to collect rents and secure tenants for vacant property. An active business of this kind will be helpful to the town.

Another Good Performance.

The Winter Stock Company appeared before a good house last night in Dora Thorne.—The company gave an exceedingly good performance especially Miss Dorothy Wallace in the title role. Miss Wallace is one of the best actresses that has appeared in Greenville, and will always be welcome here. The specialties were all good particularly Baby Hope who more than repeated her former success.

Owing to the fact that the play announced for tonight had been done here by picture machines the management have changed it to De Wolf Hoppers successful comedy "Three Wives to One Husband."

THE WEATHER

Rain to-night, colder on the Southern coast. Thursday fair and colder.

Today's weather was a disagreeable kind.

I have just received from Baltimore a beautiful line of high grade silverware suitable for bridal presents. It can be seen at my home. Mrs. J. B. Cherry. 13th

POT OF GOLD DUG UP.

Tradition Points to Captain Kidd.

Chester, Pa., Jan. 2.—While engaged in digging out an old foundation in one of the Crozer textile mills in Upland, Captain C. C. Sawyer discovered an iron pot, which was partly filled with old coins of silver and gold.

He has been unable to determine in what country the coins were made, or their denomination, but believes he has discovered much wealth.

Tradition says that Captain Kidd, the famous pirate, sailed up Chester creek, and old residents of Upland say that for many years there was afloat a rumor that he buried his treasure near the place where the mill now stands.

By the finding of the pot of money interest is again revived in the Captain Kidd stories.

Decision in Greensboro Water-works Case

Washington, D. C. Jan. 2.—The Supreme court of the United States affirmed today the decision of the Supreme court of North Carolina involving the payment of damages to B. J. Fisher, A. M. Scales, Helen G. Brown and others by the water company for failure to supply water resulting in the loss of hotel and other property several years ago.

The main question was whether these judgments of citizens of Greensboro, took precedence over mortgages given on the Greensboro water works property. A second mortgage was afterwards executed. This later was foreclosed, and the title to the property passed to a new corporation, subject to the lien of the first mortgage.

The court today held that the judgment creditors in Greensboro are entitled to priority of claim. The opinion of the court was written by Justice Brewer. Three justices, White, Peckham and McKenna, dissented.

The decree of the circuit court is affirmed with costs and the case remanded to the circuit court of the Western district.

White and Black Together.

Raleigh Jan. 2.—White and black prisoners are confined in the same room and sleep in the same apartment, and in some instances are chained together in twenty of the convict camps of North Carolina.

This fact was disclosed by the annual report of the State Board of Charities, which was adopted at a session held today, and will be submitted to Governor Glenn. The report takes a wide range and reviews all the state charitable and penal institutions and contains many recommendations as to legislation and other matters for the governor's consideration.

The postoffice has got the blues again, but the price of box rent will relieve it.

TALL SALLY.

Santa Claus' Messenger to the Little Children of the South.

For some time before Christmas little children in the south await the advent of "Tall Sally" with eagerness second only to that of Santa Claus himself, for "Tall Sally" is Santa Claus' messenger, and whatever gifts little boys and girls wish they have only to write and give to "Tall Sally," and if Santa Claus can bring them he surely will.

She is as much a tradition of the season as the old saint himself, and you could no more shake a southerner's belief in her than you could in Santa Claus. She gets her name from the fact that she is superhumanly tall—so high, in fact, that sometimes she cannot get into the house, but stays out on the grounds, where she does not need to bend her head except to hear the questions of her little friends. No one ever hears "Tall Sally" speak, for the children have it that her voice is so homely that, though you know how kind she is, it would frighten you to hear her, and she always wears a sunbonnet and a thick veil that you may not see how plain she is.

There is never a previous announcement of her arrival—that is, not often, though sometimes a mother will tell her little ones that "Tall Sally" is coming that afternoon, and all the children of the neighborhood gather to see her, so she holds a reception. They all thrust quaintly and sometimes painfully written notes at her, containing a list of their Christmas wishes, and to their questions she either shakes her head or nods it. "Tall Sally" is likely to appear any day after Thanksgiving, and she is of course a grown friend of the children. With the aid of poles she rigs up an extension for height and puts on a false face. The job is not always an easy one, for great care must be taken that sharp young eyes do not detect the disguise, but there is always some one who will do it.—New York Telegram.

He Used the Word.

A prospective Boston bridegroom, who meant to be master in his own house, called on the Unitarian clergyman who was to tie the knot the following day. "I have heard," he said, "that you omit the word 'obey' from the marriage service. Will you kindly insert it tomorrow?" The minister obligingly promised to do so. "Wilt thou, Lucy, promise to love, honor and obey?" was promptly answered by the bride without demur. The same question was put to the groom, who hesitated, stammered and gulped, but answered as had his bride, "I will," probably not wishing to create a scene. Later he reproached the minister. "But you asked me to use the word 'obey,'" said the clergyman, with a twinkle in his eyes. "How was I to know that you wanted it for the lady only? You should have been more explicit."

A Brave Response.

The politician was addressing his constituents in a frenzied speech. Several of his assertions were, reduced to cold thought, diametrically opposed to one another, but each eloquent proposition was received with wild response. Judge Dolan, one of the auditors, turned to his neighbor and said:

"This reminds me of the Irish leader who was cheering his men on to battle.

"Min," he says, 'we are on the verge of battle, an' I want to ask ye before ye start, Will yez fight or will yez run?'

"We will," says they.
"Which will ye do?" says he.
"We will not," says they.
"Aha! Thank ye, me min!" says he. "I thought ye would."

It Wore Well.

A handwriting expert said of a manuscript error to a reporter: "Such an error is ludicrous. A man of intelligence could never have made it. It reminds me of an error that occurred at a church meeting in my native town. They were discussing at this meeting the best time for the consecration of a new plot that had been added to the church cemetery. There was a long argument. Some wanted the addition consecrated at once; others thought it would be best to wait till the next year. Finally an old man rose and said firmly:

"I shall vote for immediate consecration. I have had my back yard done with it, and it wears grand."

SLEEP LEGENDS.

Myths of Early Civilization That Are Mysteries Still.

The mythical sleep legends of early civilization are mysteries that have never been explained. Every country and every nation on the globe has or had some myth concerning an enchanted sleeper or sleepers. The Roman legend of the "seven sleepers" is perhaps the best known, but its origin can be traced back to the early days of semi-historical Egypt. In the early Egyptian version of the myth Osiris, the lord of the earth, was outwitted by Typhon, who finally induced the "lord" to enter a chest, the lid of which was then nailed down. Hot pitch was next poured into all the cracks so as to exclude both air and water and then thrown into the sea. As soon as Isis, the wife of Osiris, heard of this she dispatched men in all directions in search of the chest and its precious burden. They, after many months, found it on the coast of Babylos. It was taken to Egypt and opened, whereupon Osiris leaped out alive, having been miraculously preserved during the while in a blissful slumber.

The Roman legend referred to in the opening dates from 439 A. D. and is too well known to warrant its reproduction here.

In the Grecian version the sleeper is Endymion, who slept in a grotto for more than 100 years and then awoke bright and youthful, as though awakening from a nap of but a few hours' duration.

In the Japanese version a young fisherman visits the goddess of the sea and returns to earth after a stay of what was to him but three days. At home he found everything changed and the graves of his parents hundreds of years old. On leaving the palace of the sea goddess she had presented him with a casket. After visiting his parents' graves he opened the lid of the gift, and from it there arose a mist which instantly whitened his hair and reduced his flesh and bones to dust.

In Wales the sleeper was Taffy ap Sion, in Denmark he was Ogier the Dane, and in Scandinavia proper he was Siegfried, "he of the enchanted sleeper." Cortes found a similar tradition among the early Mexicans, who believed that their "pale faced god," Quetzalcoatl, had gone east for a season of deep sleep.

Useless Forebodings.

"What a vast proportion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning the future—either our own or that of our dear ones! Present joys, present blessings slip by, and we miss half their sweet flavor, and all for want of faith in him who provides for the tiniest insect in the sunbeam. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our children teach us—we who are so mutable, so faulty, so irritable, so unjust, and he who is watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving? Why cannot we, slipping our hand into his each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, crooked or straight, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, peace and home?"—Phillips Brooks.

Hoist With His Own Petard.

Mr. Hardhitter's claim to a seat on the local council rested chiefly on what he called "the gross incompetence and criminal extravagance" of the present body. Individually and collectively Hardhitter ruthlessly exposed their failings, but Hardhitter didn't win the seat! Worse, infinitely worse—one of his oldest friends deserted and voted for the other side at the last moment.

"How was it, John?" asked the disappointed candidate more in sorrow than in anger. "Why did you vote against me?"

"Because," responded John, "I think a deal too much about ye to send ye among sich a dishonest set o' rascals as ye've proved them other fellers to be."—London Mail.

A Gentle Knock.

"Come into this store with me a minute," said Deepley. "I want to buy you a good cigar."

"Oh, see here," protested Cheepley, "don't get the idea that you have to do that just because I gave you a cigar yesterday. Besides, I don't smoke."

"I know. I just want you to keep this good one in your pocket until the next time you feel like giving me a cigar."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Disciple of Cleanliness.

A teacher in one of the public schools was endeavoring to inculcate in her pupils a proper regard for the virtues of cleanliness. After her instructive little talk she asked the children to give their own views on the subject, whereat a student of eight raised his hand.

"Well, George?"

And George thereupon uttered this wise comment:

"I think we ought to take a good scrub every Saturday night 'cause, you know, we're all full of little holes, an' they might get plugged up."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Wide Awake Citizen.

The man who has never heard of the civil war and who exists only in the comic prints had a prototype in France. It is related that Napoleon I. a year after becoming emperor determined to find out whether there was any one in the world who had never heard of him. Within a fortnight the police of Paris had discovered a woodchopper of Montmartre, within Paris, who had never heard of the revolution nor of the death of Louis XVI. nor of Emperor Napoleon!

Willing to Chance It.

At Frank's house they had quince jam for supper, but Frankie had been ill, so his mother said to him: "Frank, you cannot have any jam. It will make you sick, and then you might die." Frank took this like a little man until he saw his mother help herself to jam the second time; then he pushed his plate slowly toward the forbidden dish and said with deliberation: "Well, if you are going to die I might as well die too. Gimme some of it."

CHINESE POLITENESS.

It is a Large Part of the Very Life of the People.

If there be one thing more than another upon which the Chinese pride themselves it is upon their politeness. In spite of the three or four inches which he lacks to make his height equal to that of the average American, a Chinese official in full costume carries himself with great dignity and self possession and makes an imposing figure. In this respect he owes much to his long dress, but more to the patient study of correct carriage. There is not a single awkward movement as the Chinese gentleman bows his visitor into the house or supplies him from his own hand with a cup of tea, which is indispensable to an interview. Not until his guest is seated will the Chinese host venture to take up his position on the right hand of the former, and if in the course of an excited conversation he should raise himself, however slightly, from his position it is the duty of the other to do the same. No Chinese gentleman will sit while his equal stands. Occasionally, where it is not intended to be over respectful to a visitor, a servant will bring in a cup of tea—a cup in each hand. Then, standing before his master and the guest, he will cross his arms, serving the guest, who is to the right, with his left hand, his master with the right. The object of this is to expose the palm—in Chinese the heart—of either hand to each recipient of the tea. It is a token of fidelity and respect.

This tea is not intended for drinking and is called "guest tea." It has a higher mission than to allay thirst. Unfortunate is the man who tosses his off before ten words have been exchanged. The oriental will stamp him as a barbarian. The mission of the tea is to be used by either party as a signal that the interview is at an end. A guest no sooner raises the cup to his lips than the voices of a dozen shout to his coolies to bring his chair. So, too, when the master of the house is prevented longer acting as host he raises the cup to his lips as if to drink the tea, and immediately the guest's chair is called for.

Strangers meeting in China may freely ask one another their names, provinces and their business prospects. It is always considered a compliment to an old Chinaman to ask him his age, but the middle aged do not as a rule care for the question, and their answers can rarely be depended upon. It is also good form in China to ask the number and sex of a man's children; also if his father and mother are still alive. His wife, however, must not be mentioned, even in the most indirect manner. Friends meeting, either or both in sedan chairs, stop their bearers at once and get out with all possible expedition. The same rule applies to acquaintances meeting on horseback.—New York Herald.

A Witty Compliment.

At the first performance of Dumas' "Etranger" everybody appeared to be so preoccupied and wore such a serious countenance that Marshal Canrobert, who happened to be present, remarked it and inquired the reason. Mme. Brohan, it is recorded, answered:

"We are on the eve of a great battle, and I suppose fear affects us, as you see."

"Fear?" the marshal said, looking around with a puzzled air.

Mme. Brohan immediately summoned an attendant and briefly said, "Picard, a dictionary for the marshal."

A neater or wittier compliment in fewer words it would be impossible to produce.

Old Greek Dog Names.

Would the reader like a list of Greek hound names? Xenophon will furnish him with a catalogue of forty-seven, most of which flow naturally into an English equivalent—active, bustling, raving, reveler, cheerful, and the like. "Give your hounds short names," he says, "that it may be easy to call them." Accordingly the names which he leaves to us are without exception dissyllabic, for the Greek ear was not alive to the merits of the dactyl in hound nomenclature, and we look in vain for such a name as Aggelos. But we find, at all events, Hebe in his list, a name which after 2,000 years still does duty in English kennels.—Macmillan's Magazine.

ORIGINATORS AND IMITATORS.

Said an observing man to THE REFLECTOR "I will tell one thing the matter with Greenville, the town has too few originators and too many imitators." He went on to explain "I mean by originators, of which there are to few, men who bring new ideas and start enterprises that will be helpful to themselves and helpful to the community. The imitators, of which there are too many, are those who never think out anything themselves, but wait until somebody else has started and enterprise and then rush into the something, creating such opposition and competition as to destroy what profit there might be in that particular enterprise. To give an illustration: If a man should start a coal yard that made some show of success, it would be but a short while before there would be several more coal yards. And with any other enterprises that might be mentioned it is the same way."

This declaration put us to thinking, as it ought to every one who is interested in the welfare of the town. Looking at experiences of the past, there is really more truth than fancy in what the gentleman said. This is not written in any spirit of complaint at any one in particular, for every person has the right to engage in whatever business he pleases, but the purpose is to call attention to an existing condition that does not tend to promote development. There should be more of the spirit of helping each other and less of the spirit of working against each other. Every enterprise that is established should have the encouragement and support of all other business interests and not be choked by opposition. As the gentleman suggests, let us have "more originators and fewer imitators."

It is noticed that new year's day passed with only McClellan mayor of New York.

A lot has been purchased for that purpose, it begins to look like Raleigh may really get that auditorium.

By actual count President Roosevelt shook hands with 9,352 people at the White House new year reception. Must have been tired when he got through.

For sunburn, tetter and all skin and scalp diseases, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has no equal. It is a certain cure for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles. It will draw the fire out of a burn and heal without leaving a scar. Boils, old sores, carbuncles, etc., are quickly cured by the use of the genuine DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Accept no substitute as they are often dangerous and undependable. Sold by John L. Wooten, druggist.

BARONS OF KINGSALE.

How They Got the Right to Remain Covered Before Royalty.

When the king of England rides through the streets on a state occasion his approach is generally heralded by the loyal citizens along the route baring their heads. Though this is mostly a spontaneous act of courtesy, it is also something that a monarch can legally claim as a right. The barons of Kingsale have long been exempt, however, having the privilege of remaining covered in the king's presence.

They had this dubious distinction as a reward for an old time service. Seven centuries ago Philip of France summoned that cheerful hero, King John, to mortal combat. John thought he would rather not, but offered De Courey, Lord Kingsale, freedom from the dungeon in which he lay if he would take in hand the commission.

De Courey, spoiling for a fight, agreed, and John and Philip sat together to see somebody's head cracked. The French champion cried off on seeing the size of the Englishman, whereupon the untried conqueror playfully stuck his helmet upon a post of oak and drove his sword through it and so deep into the wood that none save himself could withdraw it.

He had purchased his freedom, and his reward he heard from his magnanimous sovereign's lips: "Thou art a pleasant companion, and heaven keep thee in good beavers. Never unveil thy bonnet again before king or subject."

The Kingsales used to keep covered before their sovereigns until George III., jealous of his subject's privilege, complained, "The gentleman has a right to keep covered before me, but even King John could give him no right to be covered before ladies."

William III. was much averse to removing his hat, even in church. He was Dutch, and Dutchmen wore their hats in church. So would he. Besides the Jews, the chosen ones, sat in their synagogues hatted, and they ought to know what was what. For the liturgy he might slip off his mighty beaver, but the parson had no sooner mounted to the pulpit than up upon the kingly head the hat went again and there remained until the end of the service.—London Standard.

When Are We Strongest?

The lifting power of a youth of seventeen years is 280 pounds. In his twentieth year this increases to 320 pounds. In the thirtieth and thirty-first year it reaches its height, 365 pounds. At the end of the thirty-first year the strength begins to decline, very slowly at first. By the fortieth year it has decreased eight pounds, and this diminution continues at a slightly increasing rate until the fiftieth year is reached, when the figure is 330 pounds. After this period the strength fails more and more rapidly until the weakness of old age is reached. It is not possible to give statistics of the decline of strength after the fiftieth year, as it varies to a large extent in different individuals.—Chicago Journal.

A Valuable Possum.

When he was asked about the price of a big, fat possum he was hawking around the old Georgia ducky said:

"He's with $1 a day, suh." Then he explained his meaning as follows:

"You see, boss, I wuz five days locatin' whar he lived at, en w'en I finally koted up wid him 'hit wuz Sunday, en de preacher seen me, en I wuz turned out de church, so I figgers de value er my time at a dollar a day—not ter mention de loss er my church standin' by de possum causin' me ter fall fum grace."—Atlanta Constitution.

Don't Be Afraid to Smile.

We do not smile enough. I am sure of it. Of course we smile in greeting and we laugh at jokes, but that is not virtue, only a matter of course. The time to smile is in our intercourse with the family, every day, all the time, almost every time we speak. If you do it you will find this remarkable thing, that it makes you seek the eye of the person to whom you speak, and that is the sweet way to keep alive a current of sympathy. Don't reserve your smiles for the select few. Cast them over the world like beams of sunshine to make it happier.—Exchange.

THE FASTNET LIGHT.

Visitors Have to Be Swung Ashore by Means of a Jib.

The first glimpse of Great Britain that the American tourist gets on his European tour is that of the Fastnet lighthouse.

It stands on a rugged and solitary rock, situated nine miles south of Crookhaven, at the extreme southwest corner of Ireland, and is perhaps more storm beaten than any other around our coast. The rock is eighty feet in height, and the lighthouse towers another seventy feet above, yet in winter gales the Atlantic billows literally bombard the massive structure and have even smashed in a portion of the lantern at the summit of the erection, the seas frequently sweeping over the rock with tremendous force. Some dozen or so years ago the stormy weather then prevailing prevented all communication with the rock for many weeks, so that the store of food was consumed, with the exception of some flour. At last a schooner managed to approach sufficiently near to enable a small quantity of food to be dragged through the sea by the hungry men, and fortunately the next day the sea moderated, and the stores were once more fully replenished.

Except in very calm weather the Fastnet is surrounded by a fringe of foam, and the only means of landing is by the aid of a "jib" fifty-eight feet in length, so placed on the rock that in moderate weather its end reaches outside the surf. When a visitor wishes to land (an unusual occurrence) he is rowed in a small boat as near as the waves permit, and the light keepers throw out a small buoy attached to a rope, which is secured by the man in the boat. The jib is then swung out, and the visitor, placing one foot in the loop and catching a tight hold of the rope, is hoisted about forty feet vertically, and then the jib, being pivoted at its foot, swings him horizontally about 100 feet on to a safe landing.—London Telegraph.

The Bill Was Paid.

McRad and his wife were going over their business ledger one evening, contemplating the overdue accounts which its pages revealed and reluctantly acknowledging that many of them would have to be written off as bad.

"What'll ye dae about this ane?" said McRad mournfully. "Here's twa pund aucht shillin's for a coat and vest been owin' by Elder Doolittle since Martinmas last. I'm fearin' we'll no get the money."

"Weel, I'm no sae sure," replied his wife. "Leave me to try onyhoo."

Accordingly the next Sabbath morning when the collection was taken up Mrs. McRad dropped the elder's "little bill," neatly folded up, into the plate, and before the week was over the amount was paid.

"Kirsty, woman," said McRad joyfully, "marriage may be a lottery, but I'm thinkin' I've drawn a prize."—Pearson's Weekly.

No Remedy to Fit the Case.

"I will never forget my first experience in hospital work," said a hospital surgeon. "There was a green nurse in the detention ward, and we had a very violent case in there—a man in the worst stage of delirium tremens. I was awakened in the middle of the night by the head nurse, who requested me to come at once to the patient. When I got there I found him raving and very violent, with the new nurse scared out of her wits. I said: 'Why did you let him go so far? I left you some medicine to give him as soon as he got delirious.' 'Yes, doctor,' she replied, 'but you told me to give that to him if he saw any more snakes, and th' time he was seeing blue dogs with pink tails.'—San Francisco Chronicle.

Named Them.

A story comes from Milton, N. H., of an old clergyman named Goodwin. He was a tall, broad shouldered man and was said to have the largest hands of any man for miles around. One noon a young man named Allen was taking dinner at the elder's home. It was the elder's custom to ask a blessing at the table, and Allen had evidently not been used to this sort of thing, for instead of waiting he began to eat. The elder raised his hand with a restraining gesture and said: "Pause, young man."

"Paws!" was the reply. "I should think they was paws."

CINDER IN THE EYE.

What You Must and Must Not Do When This Happens.

By cinder we mean any minute particle of whatever nature which lodges in the eye, where it causes much pain and distress.

In most cases when a foreign body gets into the eye it creates a little discomfort for a time, but is soon washed away by the tears without doing any harm. Sometimes, especially when the particle has sharp corners to it, as is often the case with the fine cinders from a locomotive which burns soft coal, the conjunctiva is cut and the body becomes firmly lodged in it, and all nature's simple efforts to remove it are ineffectual. Man then tries to come to nature's assistance and often makes bad very much worse.

The sufferer winks the eye, rubs it with his finger, perhaps inserts an eyestone and does whatever else he can think of to drive the particle deeper into the conjunctiva and excite inflammation. This inflammation causes swelling of the conjunctiva immediately surrounding the offending particle, with the result that the foreign body becomes firmly imbedded and can be removed only by the little needle or knife of the oculist, or else it loosens itself by exciting an ulceration of the cornea, and this ulceration, when healed, leaves behind it a minute white scar. Lucky is the man if this scar is at one side and not directly in front of the pupil.

One who gets a cinder in the eye must first of all exercise self control. He must not rub the eye. He may take a glass of clean water, throw in a pinch of salt, then put the head down so that the eye is in the water and wink several times rapidly. If this does no good the particle can sometimes be dislodged by taking hold of the lashes and drawing the upper lid down over the lower and letting it slide back into place.

If the speck can be seen on looking into the mirror it may often be removed by the tip of a cone made by folding the handkerchief several times. Sometimes a friend can see the speck by looking into the eye with a magnifying glass and can remove it by gently touching it with the handkerchief cone.

This is all any one should attempt, and if these gentle efforts fail to dislodge the cinder no time should be lost in seeking the help of a physician, who may take it away before inflammation or ulceration comes to complicate the accident.—Youth's Companion.

Couldn't Smell Anything Wrong.

James Whitcomb Riley, in company with the gentleman who used to manage his lecture tours, was once examining a hall in a town in Ohio where it was proposed Mr. Riley should give a reading. The two men had as their guide a colored janitor who was quite talkative. Mr. Riley observed that the janitor made use of long words of whose meaning he was ignorant. So the poet determined to have a little fun with him. All at once Mr. Riley began to sniff the atmosphere critically. "It seems to me, Jim," he said sternly, "that the acoustics in this place are pretty bad."

"Why, boss," said the janitor reproachfully, "yo' shore must be mistaken. I don't smell anything."—Success Magazine.

Original Alarm Clocks.

Mr. Rockhill in his "Diary of a Journey Through Mongolia and Tibet" mentions a curiously ingenious device employed by Mongolian letter carriers.

These carriers make very long journeys on foot and within a time which allows them only the briefest intervals for an occasional nap. To insure themselves against oversleeping, therefore, they tie a piece of joss stick to one of their thumbs, light it and lie down to rest. When the stick burns down to the flesh the pain awakens them, and they resume their journey.

Illustrating a Phrase.

Wife—What is meant, John, by the phrase "carrying coals to Newcastle?"

Husband—It is a metaphor, my dear, showing the doing of something that is unnecessary.

Wife—I don't exactly understand. Give me an illustration—a familiar one.

Husband—Well, if I were to bring you home a book entitled "How to Talk," that would be carrying coals to Newcastle!

One of Toole's Jokes.

One of the practical jokes of J. L. Toole, the famous English comedian, is described in the recollections of the daughter of James Hain Friswell. He and his brother actor, Lionel Brough, dressed in ragged clothes, as they appear in "Dearer Than Life," were passing through one of the most aristocratic London squares on their way to a photographer's to be taken in costume.

Toole knocked at the door of a large house and asked the astonished footman whether his master was at home.

"No, he's not!" said the man, about to bang the door.

"Tell him that his brothers, the porter and the pauper, called, and we'll come back later in the afternoon."

Shakespeare and English.

There is an old, a very old, tale told of a venerable lady who, after seeing the play of "Hamlet" for the first time, said, "It is a very good play as plays go, but it is made up of quotations." This good dame, although she was probably unaware of it, was acknowledging, in a round-about way perhaps, the indebtedness of the English language to our national bard. Phrases, sentences and sometimes whole lines from his writings have been crystallized, as it were, into colloquial English, and there are probably more quotations drawn from the works of Shakespeare than from those of any other author, ancient or modern.—Chambers' Journal.
