A BUSY DAY.

Carolyn Wells in March St. Nicholas.

My papa has a little sign,
Printed in black and gray;
It's only just a single line;
"This Is My Busy Day!"

And sometimes when I creep to look,
He's writing with a pen;
Or quietly reading in a book—
He calls that busy then!

Why, when I'm busy I just race
Downstairs; then, like as not,
I fly back to the other place
For something I forgot!

Then I sit down the banisters,
And from the porch I spring
(Perhaps I tumble in the burs)
Then go and take a swing.

And then I race Jack Smith to town,
Or climb the garden wall;
And though I'm sure to tumble down,
Nobody minds a fall.

But if I sit still in a chair,
It wouldn't be my way
To say, with such important air;
"This Is My Busy Day!"

TRINITY GLEE CLUB.

Excellent Entertainment Delights Appreciative Audience.

The Trinity Glee Club and Orchestra of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., rendered their entertainment in the opera house Wednesday night to a large and appreciative audience. Every man on the program was in an excellent state of preparation, and much credit is due Manager Pugh and Directors Overton and Jones for the surpassing manner in which every man does his part.

The music by the club and orchestra was exceptionally pleasing and entrancing, while the quartettes, medleys and impersonations were delightful and captivating. The large audience showed their high appreciation by encoring through the entire program, and many were the expressions of praise and commendation for the Trinity boys when the entertainment was over.

The program follows:

1. The New Medley Glee Club Overton.
2. March—"Watch Hill," Orchestra Kenneth.
3. Hush, Yo' Honey, Hush, Quartette Parks.
4. Intermezzo Orchestra Roberts.
5. How Uncle Mose Counts, J. Leon Williams, Reading.
6. Arkansas Traveler, J. B. McPhail, Jr., Banjo Solo.
7. Poor Ned, Glee Club, Koerner.
8. March—"Feather Queen," Mabel McKinley, Farrand.
9. Viola Solo, Brindisi Valse Alard.
10. Uncle Ned, Kimbrough Jones, Jr., Foster.
11. Waltz—"The Story Teller," Orchestra, Farrand.
12. The Dog and the Lobster, J. Leon Williams, Reading.
13. Dr. Peters, P. P. P., Glee Club Jones.
14. Yankee Grit, Orchestra, Holzmann.

Immediately after the entertainment the entire club was conducted to the spacious rooms of the Carolina Club, where they with many non members of our town were received in a courteous manner, and extended the many conveniences of this organization. Many ladies were present, adding charms and grace to the already pleasant occasion, and the midnight hour was reached only too soon.

The Trinity boys left this morning for Washington, where they will present their program tonight. We greatly regret that they could not be with us longer, and the happy remembrance of their stay with us will long be fresh in our minds.

"Not Like Other Girls."

Count Leo Tolstoi, whose famous works have thousands of admirers in America and who is best remembered for his "Resurrection" and the sensation that it created throughout the world, has consented to a dramatization of his greatest work "Not Like Other Girls" for American production, and Mr Frederick Schwartz, the noted author, after a personal visit to Moscow to Tolstoi, has made, after months of preparation, the necessary arrangements for its production, and so far, the success of "Not Like Other Girls" has far exceeded the expectations of those concerned.

The production is the most talked of event in theatrical circles and three companies are now organized to tour the United States and Canada, the popularity already achieved makes it the one dramatic success of the year. Our theatre goers will have an opportunity to witness this great play at the Masonic opera house, Tuesday March 13th.

MILL MEN WANT HIGH PRICED COTTON

Some remarkable conditions exist in the cotton market at present. One is that the cotton mill men want high price cotton. One would think they would want the price as low as possible, but such is not the case at present. Pres. Harvie Jordan gives the reason why the manufacturers want high prices, and he says many mill men have made the statement to him. They have sold for some time ahead most of the products of their mills at prices based on high cotton. If prices for the raw material should drop in the near future—before these contracts are filled—the purchasers would be likely to refuse to receive the goods at figures agreed upon.

It is said that the mill men could still make money at the prices for which they have sold their goods for future delivery if they had to pay several cents a pound more than present prices for the raw cotton.—Wilmington Messenger.

A Reversal.

"I once attended some legal proceedings in Nevada," says a Philadelphia lawyer, "which were unconventional, to say the least. The judge presiding made up what he lacked in legal lore by a certain entertaining joviality. The case before him was windy and long drawn out, and it was plainly to be seen that he was tired and uninterested. To one of his decisions counsel for the defendant promptly took exception, and his honor nodded carelessly and settled down in his ample chair. For a moment or two he quietly dropped off to sleep, his chair tilted back against the wall. Suddenly he fell over backward, and, scrambling to his dignity and his seat, he sought to cloak his mishap by exclaiming abruptly and irrelevantly, 'No, counselor, I must adhere to my decision of a moment ago.'"

"Counsel for the defense arose and with a serious bow, said, 'Ah, but your honor has just reversed himself most conclusively.'"

Strength of the Ant.

If a man had the strength of the ant he could lift 500 times his own weight. Thus if the standard weight of man were 150 pounds he could lift without undue exertion 750,000 pounds. Think how such a condition would affect the labor problem or how it would express itself in prowess of peace and war beyond the wildest dreams! And if an ordinary man was so strong how marvelously more able would be a Sadow of that race of Samsons!

ART AND AN ALDERMAN.

A Criticism That Took Sculptor French's Breath Away.

A story is told of an Allegheny alderman named McElroy who won a place in the hall of fame by reason of a criticism that for the moment rendered Daniel C. French, the sculptor, speechless.

When Andrew Carnegie announced that he would present a statue of Colonel William B. Anderson, the first ironmaster of Pittsburg, to the city of Allegheny Daniel C. French was given the commission.

The statue was duly finished, and a committee of aldermen came to New York to inspect and decide whether it was satisfactory, Mr. Carnegie's stipulation being that the finished work of art be subject to the approval of the city council. It is an extraordinarily beautiful work, representing a brawny blacksmith seated on his anvil with a great maul resting on one knee and a book on the other. Mr. French's idea was to symbolize the workman who used both brawn and brain. The blacksmith was resting between the heats of his forge and employed the interval reading.

Five members of the company were unanimous in praise, one moving at once that the statue be accepted in behalf of the city.

Then the critical Mr. McElroy jumped to his feet and said: "There is one point I want cleared. I notice this blacksmith has no shirt on. I never saw a blacksmith in my life who did not wear a shirt. If he didn't wear a shirt the sparks would fly and burn him when he strikes the hot iron."

The sculptor was speechless. This was a class of criticism to which he had no reply ready.

But another member of the committee saved the day—and the statue—to posterity. He explained that the blacksmith had probably removed the shirt to cool off while reading.

The sculptor breathed again. He permitted the committee to believe that was his purpose in showing the wonderful physical development of the man of brain and muscle.

The statue was then accepted, and the shirtless Anderson now occupies his pedestal in the Haymarket square, Allegheny. — New York

An Easy Way.

A Swede and an Irishman were out walking together when a storm came up. The rain fell violently. They took refuge under a tree. The tree for about fifteen minutes made a good refuge; then it began to leak. The cold raindrops began to fall down the Irishman's neck, and he began to complain. "Oh, never mind," said the Swede; "there are plenty of trees. As soon as this one is wet through we'll go under another."

WATCH US

Now dashes the GREENVILLE REFLECTOR into the searchlight's radiant glare and avers that certain workmen on a certain hill dug up a gold watch, that the said watch was in the clay two feet underground, and that accompanying evidences indicated that the watch had been in hiding there for fifty years or more. That much is all right if it's in THE REFLECTOR, but when our truly esteemed contemporary declares that the watch was in perfect condition and went to work as soon as wound, it staggers us. Our faculties of belief run down and stop, because they are insufficiently elastic. The public should show no quarter to one who would relate with calm, open face a full jeweled yarn like this which deserves to be wound up with the most romantic snake and fish stories. But we believe THE REFLECTOR is stem winder enough to set itself right at the correct time. If the story is not second hand, we offer Brother Whichard our hand the minute he grasps the key to the situation. Watch you say to it?—Gastonia Gazette.

Our good Brother Marshall may think he has pinned us down, and stands ready to chain and consign us to the ring of crystalized yarn spinners, but the case is too open-faced to be shut up so easily. THE REFLECTOR has the main spring of truth to draw upon (read its motto) and with such a balance wheel is not afraid its movement along the dial will be far enough behind time to be picked up by a slow hand or caught run down. Like the watch we don't strike, and indeed there is no need to, for a good regulator of public opinion like the Gazette will see that it was not keeping time and hasten to apologize for even creating the suspicion in the mind of its constituents that the watch scoop of THE REFLECTOR was a yarn of the snake and fish story class. No, sir, there was no yarn in that watch case, but it was gold, genuine and jeweled.

Now to be serious, the finding of the watch and its condition was indeed remarkable, and how it came to its hiding place is as much a mystery as ever. The only statement made in THE REFLECTOR at the time not based entirely on fact was that the watch had probably been in its hiding place fifty years or more. Of course this was only a supposition based on the circumstances, the watch being imbedded in the clay two feet beneath the surface and there being no signs to indicate that there had been any recent digging of the earth near where it was found. Another thing to indicate that it had been lost for many years was a name and date engraved on the inside, the latter being 1838. The name, which was told THE REFLECTOR in confidence that it would not be divulged, is entirely unfamiliar in this section, and a search of county records for years back fails to disclose any such name. THE REFLECTOR has an idea that the watch may have been lost by a soldier of either the Confederate or Federal armies when the soldiers were in this section during the civil war, but this, too, is only a supposition.

How the watch is so well preserved cannot be explained, and really seems fabulous. It is a fact, however, that it went to work as soon as wound, and we have been informed that it has been working regularly ever since. It is an old style key winding watch, open face, and very handsome design. The only cleaning given the watch when found was a bath with soap and water by which the accumulations of clay were removed from the lines of engraving on the case and the beauty of the exterior disclosed.

Mr. Joe McLawhorn, who was in charge of the convicts when one of them found the watch, now has it and will deliver it to its rightful owner if positive title can be established.

In the Belasco Theatre in Washington Sunday Rev. Dr. Clarence Barbour, of Rochester, N. Y., discussed the tendency of society (not using the term in its narrow sense) to worship the god Success. That there is such a tendency no observing person will deny. The man who succeeds, who controls a tremendous enterprise, who employs countless workers, it is his success which makes the greatest impression upon the mind of the average person. But the Rochester man says such success is often based on the unlawful employment of child labor, paying of unwarranted low wages and the spirit of greed. Looking at the question from this view point, there ought to be a less general desire to win the particular kind of success described by Dr. Barbour. And success when there is the possibility of the untoward conditions referred to should certainly lose some of its glitter. The highest form of success is certainly not in amassing wealth. There is many a humble minister of the gospel who is more successful than the Rockefellers and the Morgans.—Greensboro Telegram.

Mr. Jacob F. Parrott killed his big hog "Jumbo" Wednesday and he weighed 720 pounds dressed, on Mr. L. J. Moore's street scales. This is thought by many to be a record breaker for porkers in the State. The huge mass of flesh was taken to Bond's market and stayed on exhibition last night, where many visited and viewed the real curiosity. This morning the monster hog was cut up and some idea of his size can be gathered from the weight of hams, 65 lbs each, trimmed closely to cut away the fat, and the head weighed 47 pounds. Suspended from the gallows the hog measured eight feet and the height was three feet and one inch at the shoulder. He was two feet across the back and the tip end of his snout was 4½ inches across. The hog was 2½ years old and had tusks four inches long. He was 6 feet 3 inches long standing up. Notwithstanding the enormous weight the hog was not considered fat and could easily have taken on 150 pounds more flesh. It is probable that Lenoir leads the list in big hogs this year.—Kinston Free Press.

THE CITY OF JALAPA.

An Old Fashioned Place, Curious Even in Mexico.

Jalapa means a "place of water and sands." It was an Indian town at the time of the conquest, and because of its position on what for a long while was the main road between Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico it early became a place of importance. After the establishment of the republic it was made the capital of the state of Vera Cruz. Between the years 1720 and 1777 a great animal fair was held here for the sale of goods brought for years by the fleet from Cadiz, whence it derived the name of Jalapa de la Feria, frequently applied to the city in documents of the eighteenth century.

The city is famous throughout Mexico for the exceeding beauty of its women and of its situation. From these, its pleasing characteristics, arise the saying that Jalapa is a part of heaven let down to earth, and the proverb, "Las Jalapenas son halaguenas" (bewitching, alluring are the women of Jalapa). A less pleasing characteristic, its frequent days of mist and rain, at once the cause of and a very serious drawback upon the enjoyment of its green loveliness, has given rise to yet another saying in Jalapa. During these melancholy days the Jalapeno, muffled in his serape and smoking, dismally mutters, "Ave Maria purissima, pue venga el sol!" (Holy Virgin, let the sun shine!)

The city is a curious, old fashioned place—curious even in Mexico, where everything seems odd to the tourist—with narrow, crooked streets, lined with tile roofed houses, whose pitched roofs project their eaves so far that they seem to cover the sidewalks like a shed, and pending from these are spouts to carry the rainfall from the roof to the center of the roadway. The city has a perfect drainage system, based upon and indeed consisting almost entirely of the facilities so lavishly bestowed by nature in the shape of rain and grade. The streets slope gently from the sidewalk on either side to the center of the roadway, thus practically forming high troughs or gutters, and all dirt or refuse matter is immediately washed beyond the city limits by the rains, which fall, at least for a short time, almost daily throughout the entire year. This accounts for the scrupulously clean appearance of the city, which impresses those who have visited other Mexican cities not so advantageously located in respect to drainage as Jalapa. So abrupt is the descent of the streets down the side of the hill that no attempt is made to use carts or carriages for transportation of goods or persons. A tramway which provides a means of transportation to Coatepec runs through a portion of the main thoroughfare and is the only wheeled vehicle to be found within the city limits, and even this requires six mules to haul it up the steep grades from the railroad station to the hotels. All merchandise is carried from one part of the city to another by cargadores and pack mules, which latter are utilized extensively and almost to the exclusion of the burro and the horse.

A walk through the streets of the city is repaid by many interesting sights. The lavanderas, or washerwomen, pursue their vocation in the public streets at large basins or troughs, which have been placed in all parts of the city for their accommodation. The churches are open all through the day, and at all hours worshippers may be found.—"Modern Mexico."

Why the Bread Came Back.

A boy who had been working in a baker shop for some time was just about to finish his trade. One night when the boss was gone he broke the marble slab he molded his loaves on, so he went to the marble yard to secure another, but could not find one, says Lippincott's Magazine. On his way back he passed a graveyard, and as it was very dark he jumped over and pulled up a small headstone about the right size and took it back and finished his job. The next day after the bread had been delivered nearly all of it was sent back. The baker looked at it and broke several loaves open, but found nothing wrong. Then he happened to turn one of the loaves over and found on the underside of every loaf the inscription: "Here lies the body of Mrs. —. Born A. D. 1682; died A. D. 1740."

Why the Doctor Couldn't Go In.

A lady had been ill and under medical treatment for a long time. As she grew no better all the while she became distrustful of her physician's skill and did not wish to see him and yet was not bold enough to tell him so. She communicated her state of mind to her maid.

"L'ave 'im to me, mum; I've 'im to me!" said the girl.

By and by the doctor came to the door, and Bridget opened it about an inch.

"Sorry, sir," said she, "but ye can't come in the day, dochter."

"Can't come in? How's that?"

"The mistress do be too ill for to see ye the day, sir."—London Tit-Bits.

The Use of Grammar.

A teacher in a public school of Boston once had great difficulty in imparting to a boy pupil at ten certain elementary principles of grammar. In class one day the instructor experienced more than the usual amount of trouble with the lad. In desperation the teacher finally blurted out the question, "At least you can tell me why we study grammar?"

"Yes, ma'am," returned the pupil; "we study grammar so that we can laugh at the mistakes of others."—Harper's Weekly.

FRANCISCO MIRANDA.

Held in Rev. ce in Venezuela as a
Pioneer of Liberty.

Francisco Miranda was a type of the reckless adventurer and hero worshiper, and he was so closely identified with the inception of Venezuela's revolution against Spain that he will always be held as a national hero.

He was born in Caracas in 1756 and entered the Spanish military service when he was seventeen. He served in the United States in 1870 and later in Cuba. He was forced to leave Cuba for some illegal transaction and for several years led an adventurous life in Russia, Turkey, England and Germany. He went into the French service at the outbreak of the revolution and by brilliant service reached the rank of major general. His name is on the Arc de Triomphe in Paris as one of the great captains of the revolution. His reckless and adventurous spirit apparently kept him in constant conflict with sober law, for in 1797 he was condemned by the directory, but escaped to England. Receiving no aid in England, he came to the United States.

Here he put into motion his scheme of freeing his native country from the Spanish rule. He found means to equip two small vessels, and with 200 volunteers he sailed for Venezuela. He landed early in 1806 and was attacked by a superior Spanish force, losing many of his men. The Spanish captain burned Miranda in effigy and offered $50,000 for his capture. He recouped his forces and a few months later took a Spanish town, but did not succeed in arousing the people to revolution.

It was some time later that he met Bolivar and with him went to Europe to secure aid for their enterprise.

When they returned in December, 1810, Miranda organized the first republican government, which was made possible by the uprising of the people in April, 1810. He was vice president of congress and signed the constitution and the act of independence. He was commander of the army and won several victories over the Spanish, but his disregard for all properties finally got him into trouble. His fellow officers among the revolutionists turned against him. He was accused of being a traitor to the cause, and in 1812 he was taken prisoner by his own party.

He was allowed to fall into the hands of the Spanish authorities, who sent him to Cadiz in 1813 as a political prisoner. Three years later, on July 14, 1816, he died.

Drinking Milk.

Some complain that they cannot drink milk without being "distressed by it." The most common reason why milk is not well borne is due to the fact that people drink it too quickly. If a glass of it is swallowed hastily it enters into the stomach and then forms in one solid, curdled mass, difficult of digestion. If, on the other hand, the same quantity is sipped and three minutes at least are occupied in drinking it, then on reaching the stomach it is so divided that when coagulated, as it must be by the gastric juice while digestion is going on, instead of being in one hard, condensed mass, upon the outside of which only the digestive fluids can act, it is more in the form of a sponge, and in and out of the entire bulk the gastric juice can play freely and perform its function.

Should Work Both Ways.

Caller—Thank you. Well, I must be—
