THE COUNTY HOME.

Greenville, N. C., Mar. 10.

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

I read with great interest your article on the county home. Please let me say that I agreed with you in every particular. If there is anything that should appeal to an honest people it is the home for the poor unfortunates. Those of us who enjoy some little comforts should give those people not only of over substance, but should interest ourselves in providing some way to make them as comfortable as possible the little while they have to live on this earth. The community or the state that neglects or fails to care for their poor and helpless is doomed. The one sign of civilization that stands out clear above all others to my mind is the county home. Let us unite and provide some way to make the county home of this grand old county an example that other counties may follow. I am willing to be one of one hundred or more to contribute my share that this home may be one in fact as well as in name for our poor and unfortunate brothers and sisters. Keep up the good work that you have started in such a Christian and humane manner. The one thing in your article that impressed me was that you blamed no one, but the system, and I agree with you in that no officer or officers are responsible, but we have a bad system and let us correct it. Let us "put ourselves in their places" for one moment and I know the manhood and womanhood of this county will rise to the occasion, and if it can be done in no other way, will by voluntary subscriptions raise the amount necessary to remedy the present condition.

Q.

Wedding of an Editor.

The editor of the Gaylord (Okla) Sentinel wrote this account of his own wedding in his paper the other day. "This is the first instance in several years of newspaper work that the writer has dared to tell the truth about a wedding, for fear of getting licked, and does so now with a keen relish. The bridegroom is an editor, and is not a popular and accomplished leader of society—in fact, he doesn't know as much about it as a rabbit. His hair is red, and the freckles on his face crowd each other for room. In the dusk it is hard to distinguish him from a telephone pole. He has never considered that the future looked very bright or promising—it has always kept him too busy paying his board bills to have any dreams about future greatness. He is just a common sort of a fellow, and claims distinction only in that he is a Kansan from the soles of his clumsy feet to the top of his head. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. White, and was born and raised in the Solomon Valley. Judging from the job she has taken on her hands, she is a young lady of more than ordinary nerve."

THE WEATHER

MR. W. R. PARKER DEAD.

A Good and Useful Man Passes Away.

At 9 25 o'clock Friday night at his home in South Greenville the soul of Mr. William Robert Parker passed peacefully into the rest of the spirit world. He had been in poor health for more than a year and during his last sickness was confined to his bed four weeks. From the nature of the disease that fastened upon him, his family and friends had given up hope of his recovery, yet his death was a shock to all. The end came peacefully, his life ending as gently as a child falling into sweet sleep.

Mr. Parker was 53 years of age and a native of Pitt county, being born and reared in the country near Farmville. His early years were devoted to farming, his habits of industry and frugality winning him success. He married Miss Lucretia Hill in June, 1877, who died thirteen years later in August 1890. He was again married in 1892, to Miss Pattie Bynum, of Greenville, and after that time made his home here.

Greenville never had a better citizen than Mr. Parker. He was practical in his business methods, thoroughly conscientious in the discharge of every duty, and showed the highest integrity in all his dealings. He was a warm friend, a good neighbor, a devoted husband, a kind father, and exerted an influence for good upon all with whom he came in contact. He was a member of the Christian church and his Christian life was faithful in duty to God and his fellow man. He was also a prominent Odd Fellow and held in high esteem by the order.

Mr. Parker served several terms as a member of the board of aldermen of Greenville, and the first of July, 1904, was elected mayor of the town. In these public positions, as in the private walks of life, his every act was marked by the highest degree of faithfulness. Not long after being elected mayor his health began failing, and a few months later he tendered his resignation.

He is survived by five children of his first marriage, one daughter and four sons. These are Miss Ellen and Mr. W. R. Parker, Jr., who lived here with him; Mr. C. D. Parker, of Washington; Mr. Thomas Parker, of Florida; and Mr. Delk Parker, of Wilmington. All but the last two were with him at his death. He also leaves one sister and four brothers—Mrs. R. M. Newton, Messrs. S. J., J. W., and John Parker, of Farmville, and Mr. G. W. Parker, of Wilmington.

His last wife has been an invalid for several years, and his devotion to her was as loving and tender as though she were a helpless child. For her and the bereaved children all have the deepest sympathy.

Funeral services will be held in the Christian church at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, the interment following in Cherry Hill cemetery.

What is needed is fewer and better magistrates and a law that will allow them to help out good roadsmovement.—Durham Herald.

PARTING AND MEETING.

(Dedicated to Wm. R. Parker, who departed this life March 9, 1906.)

I stand by the silent river,
That bounds the shores of time,
And with head bent low, I list' to hear,
The sound of a distant chime.

I know that the bells are ringing,
And the gates swing open wide,
And the sweet voiced ones are singing,
As I stand by the river side,

I know, for while I have waited
A friend has journeyed home,
And is now far away in the city of lights,
And I stand on the brink alone.

I can feel the print of his hand-clasp,
As parting, he said "farewell,"
And I hear it once more, far out from the shore,
Like the toll of a distant bell.

The tears flow down unbidden,
For the pain of the parting is keen,
As I stand on the shore, and look far o'er,
To the land of the great unseen.

But not for long is the weeping,
For I shall be called to go,
And we'll be once more together,
Where the living waters flow.

So I'll stand on the shore, waiting,
And who can say but I'll hear,
The chimes of the city, greeting,
My friend, as he journeys there.

And then, when the sands of my life run out,
And I leave the shores of time,
I shall feel once more the clasp of his hand,
And the joy that is his will be mine.

—H. H. MOORE.

That Poll Tax Matter.

If you are, under the law, liable for poll tax, and your poll tax for 1905 is not paid when the 1st day of May, 1906, shall have passed don't stick out your mouth and say you are disfranchised by the constitutional amendment, for you will be to blame yourself. The amendment was passed to improve the elective franchise by eliminating the incompetent negroes from the ballot, so that the debased and unscrupulous white men, who care nothing for the welfare of the state, could not use him as a tool to work himself into office, thereby sinking our government to the lowest depths. As the law now is that every white man who feels enough interest in the well being of our state to prepare himself for the ballot, can do so, and it will always be thus; but our best people are determined that ignorance, superstition and vice shall not rule the state again.—Clinton Democrat.

MATTHEWS GUILTY.

Sentenced 20 Years in Penitentiary.

Greensboro, N. C., March 9.—At 9:50 this morning the jury in the case against Dr. J. B. Matthews, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree and Judge Ferguson sentenced him to 20 years at hard labor in the State penitentiary.

A motion was made for a new trial which the court overruled. Appeal was then taken to Superior court. Bail was fixed at $5,000, which the prisoner gave and was released until the appeal is decided.

King Giving In Spain.

It is a dangerous thing for a Spanish lover to present a lady with a ring unless he desires soon to marry her. The Spanish courts have over and over again held that such a present was the same as a betrothal and that a ring which had been presented by a man is sufficient evidence of an engagement having existed between them. Spanish brides have a deep superstition against removing the wedding ring from the finger after it has once been placed there. The only occasion upon which they can be induced to do this is when guests at the wedding feast desire to pass pieces of the wedding cake nine times through the ring. These pieces of cake are afterward taken home to be put under pillows, and the young girl who does this is supposed to dream of her future husband.

A Word of Cheer.

Some little boys were running a race, and all felt sure that Tommy, the boy in the lead, would win, as he was the fastest runner. Those looking on began to cheer the different boys, and Tommy gradually fell behind until he was the last one to reach the goal. His friends gathered around, inquiring why this was, and Tommy, wiping the tears from his dirty little face, replied, "You yelled, 'Go it, John!' 'Go it, Jimmy!' but there was not a one yelled 'Go it, Tommy,' and somehow I just could not run at all." A word of cheer frequently makes the difference between success and failure.

THE SAGO PALM.

How Its Delicious Product Is Obtained by the East Indians.

Is it from their noble aspect or on account of their utility that the palms have been termed the princes of the vegetable kingdom? Neither the anatomy of the stem nor the form of the flower entitles them to such a position. The stem is as simple as that of the common broom and the flower as that of the rush. Yet they have always been of great interest to the botanist, and their historical and legendary associations and their beauty and their economic value have made them of interest to the public.

More than a thousand species of the palm are scattered at different elevations throughout the tropics of both hemispheres, with stragglers in subtropical and even in warm, temperate regions. Their utility can scarcely be overestimated. They furnish food, shelter, clothing, timber, fuel, building materials, sticks, fiber, paper, starch, sugar, oil, wine, wax, tannin, starch, dyeing materials, resin and a host of minor products, which make them of the greatest value to the natives and to tropical agriculturists.

One of the most important is the sago palm of the East Indian archipelago. The tree flourishes only in low, marshy situations and seldom reaches a height of thirty feet. It attains a starch yielding condition at the age of fifteen years. The stem is then gorged with a mass of starchy matter, around which is a hard outer rind about two inches in thickness. Were the fruit allowed to form and ripen the whole of this starchy core would disappear and leave the stem a mere hollow shell, for when the tree ripens its fruit it dies.

It seems strange that a man can consume a tree, but it is so. The preparation consists in cutting off the branches and the hard rind of the trunk. The stem is then divided into sections and split up, and the starchy pith is extracted and grated to powder. When the starch is roughly grated or pounded into pulp and made into cakes one tree will feed a man for a whole year.

That which is intended for exportation is mixed into a paste with water and rubbed through sieves into small grains. It is known as pearl sago, bullet sago, etc., according to its size, and is served on our tables and in soups and puddings.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Mar. 9, 1906. Opposition to the rate bill has been latent all along and is crystallizing as the opportunity offers for the enemies of the measure to get a tangible reason for criticism. Senator Scott of West Virginia is one of the latest to come into the open and array himself squarely against the administration measure. In a speech in the Senate this week, he took just the position that will be assumed later by a number of senators and denounced the proposed legislation as ill advised and inefficient. He took the position that government regulation of rates was tantamount to government ownership, differing in degree but not in kind. He said that the experience of foreign governments had abundantly proved that the government could not make a rate that would meet the needs of expanding trade and commerce. And he said that a rate based on mileage alone would tend to centralize the trade of the country in a few cities that were geographically favored in their location or had the natural advantages of water location. This last statement disclosed the radical weakness of the speakers position as it was obvious that a river or seaboard city, the path to which was open to any sort of carrying competition would of necessity have the advantage of competition such as any favorably located point on the railroad ought to have. The advantage of location is obvious and inevitable if all shippers and all localities are treated on a perfectly equitable basis and the railroad, which is really the highroad of the country just as the rivers are, were thrown open to all comers on equal terms.

The Senator said that he wanted to see the railroads forced to make connections with branch and lateral lines and thus be forced to give free and equal access to all shippers to all markets. He also forced the principle of court review in any rate-making power that might be given. The address was altogether a very able argument, but it was principally interesting as indicating the lines along which amendments to the Hepburn bill are destined to be fought out.

I want to get a head of cabbage, said the man who had been sent to market. "Large or small head?" asked the grocer. "Oh, about 74," said the man, absentmindedly.—Yonkers Statesman.

A Shock.

The young man with the uncut hair and hungry look had submitted a poem for editorial consideration.

"Well," said the man behind the blue pencil, "in a hurried glance at it, 'How do you strike you?'"

"Why—er—really," stammered the rhymester, "that is more than I—er—"

"Well, that's the best I can do," interrupted the busy editor. "I couldn't think of writing a poem like that."

Pitt's Sarcasm.

In 1805 Pitt called a meeting of the British militia colonels to consider his additional force bill. Some objected to the clause which called them out under all circumstances and argued that this should not be "except in case of actual invasion." "Then," said Pitt, "it would be too late." Presently they came to another clause, when the same objections insisted on the militia not being liable to be sent out of the kingdom. "Except, I suppose," said Pitt, with cruel sarcasm, "in case of actual invasion."

THE BAGPIPE.

It is the Only Musical Instrument Distinctly National.

The bagpipe of Scotland is the only instrument of which it may be said that it is distinctly national. The violin, the flute, the horn and other instruments are common to many nations, but the bagpipe is peculiar to Scotland, and, although it does not now occupy the position it once did, it is found in no other country.

In the days when the notorious Rob Roy committed his depredations, when the Vich Ian Vohrs lived securely in their highland fastness and kept up their dignified social position—in the stirring times of which Sir Walter Scott has told us—the bagpipe player was one of the important personages in the chieftain's retinue, and these may be considered as the palmy days of the instrument.

Within the region more strictly known as the highlands its shrill note was the first sound that fell on the ears of infancy. It charmed the rude Caledonians in times of joy and comforted them in scenes of mourning. It animated their heroes in battle and welcomed them back from their conflicts, and wherever their chiefs went it accompanied them, even to the grave.

The effect of this wild instrument on the highland soldiers is marvelous. Above the rattle of musketry and the turmoil and roar of the battlefield the inspiring notes of the pibroch have spoken encouragement to the highlanders and led them bravely forward. At the battle of Quebec, when the troops were retreating in disorder and the conflict had a most discouraging aspect, the general complaint was about the demoralization in Frazer's corps.

"Sir," said an officer, "you did very wrong in forbidding the pipers to play. Nothing inspires the highlanders so much. Even now they would be of some use."

"Let them blow, then," said the general.

So the pipers started a well known air, and the highlanders rallied and bravely returned to the charge.

Some say that the bagpipe came down from the Romans; others, that it came through the northern nations of Scotland. At any rate, it seems to have always been one of the musical instruments of the Celtic race.

The pipe mentioned in ancient history was simply what is known as the shepherd's reed. After a time a bag was added and subsequently the drones or burdens. There are four forms of the modern bagpipe—the great highland bagpipe, which is blown by the player, the drones being placed over the shoulder; the lowland bagpipe, which is provided with a bellows for supplying the wind; the Northumberland bagpipe, which is smaller and sweeter in tone than the former two, and the Irish bagpipe, which is a much more complicated instrument.

Last Round for Taxes.

I will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting taxes due for the year 1905:

Farmville, Farmville Township Saturday March 3rd.
Grimesland, Chicot Township Saturday March 3rd.
Ayden, Contentnea Township Saturday March 3rd.
Pactolus, Pactolus Township Wednesday March 17th.
C. D. Smith's Store, Beaver Dam Township Wednesday March 7th.
Bethel, Bethel Township Saturday March 10th.
Grifton, Swift Creek Township Saturday March 10th.
Falkland, Falkland Township Saturday March 10th.
Stokes, Carolina Township Monday March 13th.
Be's X Roads, Belvoir Township Monday March 13th.

This is positively the last round to collect the taxes due for last year. After this I shall proceed to add cost and advertise the property of all who fail to pay. The election law requires me to certify to all white men who pay their poll tax. Those who fail to pay by the first of May may be debarred from voting in the next election.

Died of Complicated Failure.

"Very frequently," says a New York lawyer, according to Harper's Weekly, "there is an element of unconscious humor in the findings of a jury. To my mind, the best I ever heard in this connection was the verdict brought in by a corner's jury in Michigan, who were called upon to pass upon the case of a sudden death of a merchant in Lansing.

"The finding was as follows: We, the jury, find from the physician's statement that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, superinduced by business failure, which was caused by speculation failure, which was the result of failure to see far enough ahead."
