ANOTHER NEEDED CHANGE.

Train No. 59 Should Connect With Train from Norfolk.

The Atlantic Coast Line has been quite obliging lately in giving an additional train and increased service over its line through this section. The people have shown their appreciation of this, the large travel on the extra train making it pay from the beginning.

Now there is one other change in schedule that if made will be of more convenience to the public. When train No. 59 was the only passenger and mail train a day that we had from the north, it was important that it came as early in the evening as possible, and in order to do this a connection with the evening train coming out of Norfolk was broken. Since the extra train has been put on bringing a great part of the mail in the forenoon, it is not so important that the evening train get in so early, and the Norfolk connection might easily be restored. By this people on each of the roads branching from Parmele could go to and return from Norfolk the same day and have two or three hours to spend in that city.

As it now is, train No 59, scheduled, to reach Greenville at 6:47 p. m., rarely comes in on time. We believe it is conservative to say that nine times out of ten it comes in late enough to have made the Norfolk connection at Hobgood had the delay been beyond that point instead of at Parmele. It would be no inconvenience now to change the schedule of this train, but on the contrary it would be helpful to business to have this connection.

Danger Ahead.

With trains coming in at almost any of the night, we do not see what the railroad company can expect of employes when they have to be on duty day and night without relief. First thing they know a big disaster is going to cost the company more than would be required to have sufficient service to handle the business.

THE WEATHER

Fair and slightly warmer tonight, frost in exposed places. Thursday fair, warmer.

CONTESTS 'N MID AIR.

Several applications have been made to the Jamestown Exposition management for permission to operate dirigible balloons and airships at the celebration in 1907.

For the first time in the history of aerial navigation, air vehicles will be used commercially, that is to convey passengers. Hitherto all attempts to conquer the air have been mere spectacles and have subserved no useful purpose except in so far as demonstrating the possibilities of levitation and dirigibility.

Only trained aeronauts have occupied places in the balloons or vessels and the general public's interest in the matter has always been that of spectator.

At the Jamestown Exposition, if the company is satisfied that the air conquerors are entirely safe, passengers will be carried from the shore to the ships and elsewhere through the air.

This aerial navigation is quite dissimilar to the ascension of captive balloons, which has hitherto been the only form of ascension in which the public has participated.

Santos Dumont and several others have proved the possibilities of directing airships almost at will, and an American inventor, Captain Thomas S. Baldwin, has perfected an airship until it is almost as easy to navigate as an ordinary yacht.

In connection with Captain Baldwin's effort to subjugate the air, there are two men who have been brought prominently into public notice as inventors of these crafts; Lincoln Beachy and Roy Knabenshue. Whether these famous air captains will each command a Baldwin ship at the Jamestown Exposition or whether they will be engaged by rival constructors, cannot now be ascertained, but both of them will be present at the celebration and will direct airships. That they will contest for prizes in speed and directness of course is certain, whether they are employed by the same concern or not, but a far greater element of sport will be added if rival constructors each secure the services of one of these men.

Baldwin is not to be the only inventor. There is another air conqueror who has filed already his application for a concession, and probably there will be several others, so races and contests of every sort overhead are assured as features of the Tercentennial.

Haverhill, Mass., March 19.—Fire in Haverhill Manual Training School and High School annex imperilled more than 150 boys and girls, and although mainly because of the coolness and generalship of the teachers no lives were lost, several pupils had their hair burned and one girl injured her leg by jumping from a second story window.

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Coughs, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by John L. Wooten.

MOTHER BIRD'S STRATAGEM.

Her Clever Method of Reaching Her Nest Unobserved.

While strolling on the banks of French creek, near Clayton, in company with my wife and a friend we started a woodcock, which feigned being wounded and gave utterance to the most plaintive squeaks, from which we inferred the nest must be near.

A short search discovered it among small bushes on the ground in a comparatively exposed position. The nest contained three eggs, which we, of course, did not disturb. Leaving the nest for over an hour, I cautiously returned and, getting on my hands and knees, crept within ten feet of it without disturbing the old bird. After watching her for about ten minutes I saw her stand up in the nest and with her bill and one foot change the position of two of the eggs, after which she settled back on the nest.

She then evidently saw me, for she gave a sudden twist sideways with her head and then slowly and cautiously stretched out as flat as possible, her bill resting flat on the ground. She remained thus for fully five minutes. Presently I arose from my position and stepped forward, when the bird quietly sneaked away from the nest, seeming to crouch as near the ground as possible until about twenty feet away, when she arose with the usual cry, but immediately fell to the ground, fluttered up and down and finally turned over on her back, fluttering her wings as if in the last agony, but as I approached she scrambled away, dragging one wing on the ground until she had led me fully 200 yards from the nest, when suddenly she bade me au revoir and darted away like a rocket.

Secreting myself some distance from the nest, in fourteen minutes I was surprised to see her sitting on it as before being disturbed, but how she reached there I am unable to say, as I did not see her approach, and half a minute before her appearance on the nest nothing was to be seen or heard. As the woods were open, I had an excellent opportunity of watching her interesting maneuvers and had hoped to be able to note the manner in which the return would be made.—Forest and Stream.

An Apology.

A man who has a reputation for being very careless as to his toilet was elected town clerk in one of the small towns in his state, and the local paper thought it would be a good joke to announce that—

"Mr. Makeup will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk."

On reading the notice Mr. Makeup was furious and demanded a retraction, which the paper accordingly made the following day in this fashion:

"Mr. Makeup requests us to deny that he will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk."

And still Mr. Makeup was not pleased. How hard it is to satisfy some people!

ALPINE TROOPS.

Soldiers of Italy Who Maneuver Literally Above the Clouds.

William G. Fitz-Gerald writes of the Alpine soldiers of Italy: "All these soldier mountaineers are crack shots, and it is difficult to see how one of the forts held by them amid the great granite boulders and terrible pinnacles and spires of the Great St. Bernard could ever be forced by an enemy in the face of these troops, who would act as scouts, crawling up precipices and planting themselves on wild and seemingly inaccessible spots, whence they would pour an invisible fire which nothing could withstand. These Alpine troops when scouting or reconnoitering in the mountains use a curious kind of rifle rest, formed by three alpenstocks and one of the pillows they use at night when they sleep in the snow. For, strange as it may seem, these men when bivouacking at great altitudes do not trouble to put up tents, but merely dig out caverns in the vast snow-drifts and line these with waterproof sheets and blankets and there sleep amid dreary Alpine desolations as comfortably as though they were down on earth in a comfortable city bed.

"The life of the men is magnificently healthy and exhilarating, as may be seen by the bright eyes, rosy cheeks and clear complexions of a party of scouts that come glissading like lightning down the slopes of frozen snow on their long curving skees, guided and supported by the alpenstock. The troops also carry arctic sledges for the transport of their wounded, and sometimes realistic demonstrations are given, when one or several men will lie at full length on these sledges and be dragged or glissaded over glacier and snowfield."

Of Sunday in the Swiss Alps: "It is a fact that these troops maneuver literally above the clouds, and there is no more impressive spectacle than a Sunday morning service in some little icy recess at 9,000 or 10,000 feet, when the chaplain of the regiment mounts into a rude portable pulpit and discourses to the assembled soldiers who are shivering in their furs even though it be July or August. The members of the band play the hymns, which reverberate through the awful desolations of glacier and snow peak."—Chicago News.

A Clever Spaniel.

Spaniels are full of resource, and their exploits in retrieving wounded birds are wonderful. A small brown and white spaniel broke its fore leg, which was set in stiff bandages hardened with some preparation. It could only go on three legs, but hopped out after its master with the other dogs when these were taken for a walk. There had been a pheasant shot, and the little spaniel could not resist slipping off to smell down the side of a small belt. It discovered a winged cock pheasant, dashed after it on three legs and caught and retrieved it, hopping into the road with the big bird in its mouth.—Country Gentleman.

Now you get another slap in the face for discrediting the ground hog.

Come on with your name and show what interest you have in a building and loan association.

The Senate confirmed the nomination of District Attorney Holton, and Congressman Blackburn's opposition got a severe jolt.

By now Congressman Blackburn ought to be able to see his political finish, and it makes little difference whether he should claim Greensboro or Wilkesboro as his home.

Dr. McKelway's suit for $50,000 damages against the Charlotte Observer ended in a judgment for five cents. That was a come down right and covered everything the plaintiff deserved.

Greensboro granted a franchise to one company and High Point to another to build a trolley line between the two towns. They might settle the trouble by each building half and meeting on the middle ground.

The Reflector makes the prediction that a building and loan association will be organized in Greenville before summer comes. If you want to take shares in it do not hesitate to say so. A list is now open at this office to receive your name.

A negro in jail at Chattanooga under sentence of death was granted a stay of execution by the United States Supreme Court. The action angered the citizens of the city and a mob went to the jail, took the negro out and hung him to a bridge.

Raleigh's inhabitants and visitors of the tenderloin district in that city, have fallen under the glare of the search light, and for the time being there is consternation. It is strange how many men there are who think the warning "be sure your sins will find you out" was not written for them at all but only intended for somebody else.

Three years ago the town of Wilson closed saloons and established a dispensary by a vote of the people. Early in April there will be another election on the same question, the barrooms wanting to come back again. Both sides are claiming that they will win in the contest. It would be a decided step backward for that town to return to open saloons.

Just because you happen to be poor is no sign whatever that you are not covetous.

WOULD BE ROASTERS.

In a recent issue of the Princeton, Ind., Tribune we find the following:

"In this issue will be found a rather lengthy article with reference to newspapers and 'the whole truth' We dedicate it especially to some of our citizens who are always asking us to 'roast' somebody or wanting to know why we don't 'expose' some certain person or why we don't 'tell all the truth' about some particular case in which they happen to feel some personal vindictiveness. We will say that in the years we have been engaged in newspaper work we have never yet been asked by any one to 'roast' somebody we could not recall to mind a time in the life of the would be roaster where there was an occasion to give him, through the wrong doing or misfortune of himself, family or friends, a dose of the same medicine that he asks us to give some one else. We often wonder how these roasters would like this left-handed golden rule applied to themselves, for there is not a family that does not at some time have some sorrow, misfortune or trouble over which they may have no control, but which would give them deepest pain if given to the public in print, and frequently some very interesting stories are passed up for this reason. Do not get the idea that we shall cease to 'roast' but in these matters newspapers must rely on their own judgments, and, though we may sometimes 'roast' or give publicity unjustly, it is never intentionally so or with a malicious desire to make trouble or pain for any person."

This is one of the many ills newspaper flesh is heir to. The man who wants a puff of himself, some member of his family or a friend, the advertiser who wants a free reading notice which calls for as much space as his ad. and the man who wants a legitimate piece of news suppressed all belong to the same category. We can never get rid of them. The important question is how best to manage them.

We printed recently in The American Press a paper read before a press association which contained an excellent suggestion on this point. We don't remember the editor's name or where it was read, but the fact sticks in our memory. This editor said that when a man comes to his office and wants him to roast some one he says "Certainly." He hands him paper and pencil, asking him to write and sign what he wants published. That cures the would be roaster, and he cannot take offense. If he is not willing to resume the responsibility he cannot expect the editor, who has no interest in the matter, to do so.

Of course there are affairs of public interest which require different treatment; but, as The Tribune says, in such matters newspapers must rely on their own judgment.—American Press.

The man in business who does not advertise will soon find that his business is not increasing as rapidly as it might. The man who does not advertise may have a better stock than the one who does but he stands the chance of getting less trade than he deserves. Much the same thing may be said relative to municipal advertising: The city that advertises most effectively is the one that grows fastest, in most cases. The moral is obvious.—Winston Sentinel.

WATER, KEY TO HEALTH.

Free water drinking is essential to vitality and to the development of staying power. All the operations of the body—digestion, assimilation, absorption, elimination of poisonous waste and so on—are carried on by means of water; and an insufficient amount of water in the system means embarrassment of every function.

The body of a man of average weight contains more than half a barrel of water; and such a body needs for its proper operation at least two quarts daily of pure water. In this connection, it may not be irrelevant to mention that the Japanese soldiers, whose surprising power are now engaging the admiration of the world, consume each between two and four gallons of water daily—Outing.

DOGS' VOICES.

Persons Familiar With Them Notice Peculiarities In Tones.

"It may sound curious to persons not familiar with the pleasures of hunting and who know little or nothing of what I may call the language of dogs—the language they use not among themselves, but when they want to address their masters in the woods—I say it may sound curious to state that the experienced hunter can tell the kind of game traced by the way the dog barks, but he can do precisely this very thing," an old hunter said as he gossiped with a crowd of friends in one of the hotels. "Of course I have reference to the all round dog and not the dog that may be trained for a particular kind of sport. There are deer dogs, bear dogs, fox dogs, coon dogs, squirrel dogs and other dogs that have what we could call among human beings specialties, and, no matter how tempting the game, they will not depart from their training to chase only a certain kind of animal. But I was just thinking of the all round dog—the dog that will chase any old kind of game. I recall a dog of this sort owned by a friend of mine in Arkansas, and he was about the most useful member I ever saw. He was good at any old kind of game in the woods and was intelligent enough always to know just what his master wanted him to hunt. He would tackle anything, from a rabbit to a bear, and had enough hound in him to always bark when he struck a trail. This barking constituted the language he used when he wanted to notify his master what kind of trail he had struck, and his master would know quite as well as if he had called out the name of the thing. He knew by the way the dog barked. If he merely struck a rabbit track he made but little noise, and he was not very noisy on a squirrel's trail, though the bark was somewhat different from that used when he trailed a rabbit.

"So the coon yelp and the possum yelp were different as to each other and different as to other yelps and a trifle louder than the barking on a rabbit or a squirrel trail. But let him strike a deer trail or a bear trail—well, you would think the world was coming to an end. He would make more noise than a whole pack would make. The bigger the game, it seems, the louder he would bark. And yet his master could tell from the way the dog intoned his yelp whether he was chasing a bear or a deer, and he wouldn't have to wait either to learn the character and direction of the dog's movements in order to determine what kind of trail he had struck."—Pittsburg Press.

Sin Eating.

The curious and repulsive practice of sin eating is now obsolete. Aubrey in "Remains of Gentilism and Judaism" thus refers to it:

"In the county of Hereford was an old custom at funerals to have poor people who were to take upon them the sinnes of the party deceased. The manner was that when the corps was brought out of the house and layd on the bier a loafe of bread was brought out and delivered to the sinne eater over the corps, so also a mazer bowle of maple full of beer, wch he was to drinke up and sixpense in money, in consideration whereof he took upon him all the sinnes of the defunct and freed him or her from walking after they were dead."

The origin of this strance custom was most likely connected in some way with the ceremony of the scapegoat under the old law (Leviticus xvi. 21).—Westminster Gazette.

His Remorse.

One of the lords of creation broke a chair over his wife's head. When taken to jail and conversed with by the chaplain he displayed a good deal of repentance.

He said he "was very sorry that he had permitted his anger to obtain the mastery of him and to suffer him to do such an act, for the chair was a good one, an heirloom in his family, and he knew he never could replace it."—London Answers.

QUEER COINCIDENCES.

Andrew Lang Tells About a Clock and a Letter.

Here is a real curious coincidence, reported to me by a trustworthy friend. My friend paid a visit, with a companion, also known to me, to a lady. On the chimney-piece of the drawing room was a black marble clock, not going, and near it a small round clock in working order. Suddenly a child of the lady of the house, standing on the hearth rug, said, "Mother, the big clock" (the black marble clock) "is ticking." "Impossible!" said his mother. "It has not ticked for many a month. I broke the pendulum myself." Every one present then examined the marble clock, which was ticking away steadily, and the coincidence was that it had taken up the time correctly and was in accord with the small clock beside it. No one had touched the black marble clock.

Of this coincidence I can only offer the explanation which must already have occurred to every reader. Somebody in the house must have got the clock mender to mend the marble clock without informing the lady of the house. The clock must have been set to the right time, and neither the lady nor her visitors happened to notice its ticking till it was observed by the child on the hearth rug. If this view be disproved, then there was a genuine miracle—a clock going, or ticking at all events, with a broken pendulum. Such is the weakness of human testimony that my friend does not tell me whether the big clock's hands were moving or whether it only ticked.

I know nothing analogous to a clock that ticked without going except a queer story of a letter, which is vouched for by the signatures of the persons who wrote the narrative and who stuck to it when cross examined orally. They were a brother and sister, living together. One evening a letter came to their house directed to their care, but addressed to a third person, who did not live with them. The sister placed the letter on the chimney-piece, meaning to put on the proper address. Presently the letter began to tick like a watch and kept on ticking. The brother came in and heard the ticking. They examined the letter, could find no explanation and next morning carried the strange epistle to the person for whom it was meant. The letter proved to be extremely important, though the envelope was not marked "Immediate," like envelopes containing advertisements. Apparently the letter, like all matter, according to Haeckel, was not destitute of consciousness and knew that it was in a hurry. Of course, the black marble clock may on these principles have had not only consciousness, but conscience, and said to itself: "Let me fulfill the purpose of my being. Go I cannot without a pendulum, but tick I can and will." None the less the normal explanation seems the better.

Don't Need Hooks and Eyes.

"The hook and eye is one product of civilization that oriental races cannot be educated up to," said a manufacturer who was discussing export trade. "Our firm made strenuous efforts to popularize hooks and eyes in China, Japan and India, but we had to admit defeat and retire from the field.

"We sell hooks and eyes all over the world, even to the Eskimos, but the orientals don't take to them. This is partly due to the mode of dress prevalent in the far east. Garments are cut to conform to the figure, of soft, clinging materials, and after the attire has been adjusted it is held in place by a sash twisted around the waist. Unlike our fashions, there practically has been no change in the national costumes of China and Japan in centuries. The nearest approach to the hook and eye in use there is a sort of garment fastener resembling the frogs on a military greatcoat, and even its use is not general."

Natural to Him.

Vincent was altogether too garrulous in school to please his teachers. Such punishments as the institution allowed to be meted out were tried without any apparent effect upon the boy until at last the head master decided to mention the lad's fault upon his monthly report. So the next report to his father had these words, "Vincent talks a great deal." Back came the report by mail, duly signed, but with this written in red ink under the comment, "You ought to hear his moth-
