SKATING CONTEST CARNIVAL

Miss Lillian Carr Draws the Skates.

The skating costume carnival in Prichard's stemmy Tuesday night drew a good attendance, both for skating and looking on. A prize of a pair of skates was awarded for the best representation in costume of the title of any song or book. All the skaters present did not enter the contest, but those who did were as follows:

Miss Bessie Hasker, "Blue Flower," name of the author in blue flowers on her dress.

Miss Nina Harris, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." She wore a crown with large letter "C" under which was 20m., her dress being covered with emblems of the Epworth League.

Miss Lollie White, "The Lamp Lighter," dress covered with colored paper lamp lighters.

Wiley J. Brown, "Tales of Two Cities," names of two cities and peacock feathers.

Adrian Brown, "Scarlet Letter." It was pinned to his jacket.

Miss Mary Brown, "My Jewels," and the front of her waist was covered with them.

Bryce Brown, "Ivanhoe." He held one up and said "I've an hoe."

George Prichard, "House of a Thousand Candles," represented by the picture of a house, 1,000 and a bunch of candles.

Miss Lillian Carr, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Quaint dress and her apron filled with cabbages.

James Brown, "American Boy." Pictures of the real article pinned on him.

Allen Prichard, "Five Little Peppers." "Here they are," he said as he held out a handful of little pods of pepper. "I started with five but broke my string and lost one."

"Miss Essie Whichard, "Tessie," a large "T" suspended from her neck, her name filling out the rest.

Mrs. H. C. Hooker, "Innocents Abroad," a scarf bearing in, no, two pennies, a broad "A," the author represented by two marks.

Mrs. F. W. Clare, "Not Like Other Girls." And she wasn't. One white shoe and one black shoe, other garments equally mismatched, hair on each side and the back of her head done up in a different style made her very much unlike anybody or everybody else.

Miss May Whitfield, "Egyptian Princess," wearing a pretty Egyptian costume.

Charles Haskett, "Candy," suit made by himself all striped off to represent this late song and he carried a big stick of candy.

Miss Lillian Whitfield, "Blue-bell," dress in blue with a girdle of tiny bells.

Key Brown, "Good Night," picture of a little girl ready to retire.

Mrs. H. L. Carr, Mrs. Wiley Brown and D. J. Whichard were selected to decide which was the best costume and representation and award the prize accordingly. This was the hardest proposition of all and the committee just could not decide it. After debating the question until nearly time to go

AN OBSTACLE TO IMPROVEMENT.

Our weekly contemporary, Our Home, of Marshville, recently cited an observant citizen of that progressive town as saying that the world is made bigger when some men die. At first thought, it seems a heartless thing to say, if not an untruth. Yet the observant citizen stated a truth and proved it, and there is hardly anything too harsh to say of that class of people whom he describes, those who selfishly stand in the way of improvement, or who are continually knocking at every step toward advancement, whether material or moral.

The gentleman in question said:

"Some men are so intensely selfish and have so much hog disposition about them—so much of the miserly instinct, that they stand in the way of progress. They buy land and lots in a growing town and refuse to improve or sell at any reasonable price. They buy large farms and refuse to sell unless it is to somebody they can use or control in their own interest. There are plenty of people who would pay a fair price and take the land and improve it, but the land miser either refuses to sell or places a prohibitive price on it. When such a land miser dies it generally leaves his property so that it can go into the hands of progressive men."

The gentleman has proved his case, for we all know of just such people. Perhaps though they serve some beneficent purpose in the world, for all they are a mist, a break in the chain of material progress.—Charlotte News.

Married Couple Meet After Twenty Year's Separation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McEwen met each other here today after a separation of nearly twenty years. They were married in 1887 and separated a short time afterwards through the intervention of their parents. She was 14 and he 18 years of age.

Believing her first husband dead, Mrs. McEwen has wedded twice since that time. The second husband is dead and she left the third about two months ago, when she learned that the first was still alive. He never married again.

They will live together now without the formality of another marriage. She has several children.—Savannah Dispatch.

home they agreed that the five best should draw for the prize. These were Mrs. Clare, Misses May Whitfield, Nina Harris and Lillian Carr and Charles Haskett, and Miss Carr drew the skates.

The lights in the building got cranky and were so poor that at the close of the carnival Mr. Prichard announced that he would put in more lights and invite them all to come out again and have another evening of fun without charge.

DIDN'T GET THE JOB.

Why One Man Is Now Careful About Stamping Envelopes.

"I know a man who lost a good job once by doing that," said the tall, slim man in the lobby of the Stafford.

"Doing what?" asked the short, fat man who was putting a stamp on an envelope.

"Why," said the tall man, "sticking a stamp on lopsided."

"You don't say!"

"I do," said Harold D. Stauffer of New Orleans. "It happened that I was the young man. It was not so many years ago either. A paper in Galveston had advertised for a proofreader in 1893, and at that time I was out of work and needed a place badly. The salary was good, the work congenial, and I had enjoyed some little experience at it with satisfaction to myself. So I wrote a formal application, addressed the envelope and hurriedly stuck a stamp on about a quarter of an inch northeast of the proper position and zigzaggy across the top. A few days later I received this answer:

"Dear Sir—Your application has been placed on file; but, while all other qualifications seem to be present, the carelessness indicated by the manner in which you affixed your stamp may, unfortunately, be an index to the character of your work, and we may frankly say that the circumstance will be taken into consideration in reaching a decision.

"You could have knocked me down with a feather. I had no idea of a stamp except as carrying agent for the letter, and whether I placed it upside down, sideways to, criss-cross or on edge so long as it carried the letter did not appeal to me as material. I wrote and explained that the position of the stamp was not a character index and suggested the unfairness of the conclusion, as the stamp might have been put on by my office boy. An answer came in due time. Such deeply personal letters, the writer said, were not trusted to office boys by careful men. Argument: The office boy plea was merely another indication of possible carelessness. Now, whether that man was having fun with me or really took the matter so seriously I don't know, but I do know one thing."

"What's that?"
"I didn't get the job."

INTELLIGENT WRENS.

Some of Them Know a Human Friend When They See Him.

"Much has been written of the mind that centers in the brain of a bee or an ant," says Dr. Charles C. Abbott in Lippincott's. "The wren, too, has but a trifling brain when we consider its bulk, but from it flows many a suggestive train of thought. The career of the birds nesting in the roof of my porch was much the same year after year, and I will particularize only that of the season just drawn to a close. The first brood came from the nest a few days too soon, and great was the commotion that followed. The young birds were too weak upon the wing to avoid danger. I boldly declare I believe I was appealed to. The parent birds perched on the sill of my study window and sang as they had not done before. The marked difference from their ordinary singing attracted my attention. When I went out of the door their excitement visibly increased. I thought they would actually alight upon me. I saw the trouble and proceeded to remedy it. I caught four of the young birds, all that I could find, and immediately the old birds were more at ease. Placing a ladder against the porch, I carried the nestlings back. Every movement of mine was closely watched. I was followed every step I took, and when I replaced the young birds the parents were within a foot of my hand. Then such singing! It seemed unmistakable that I was accepted as a veritable friend in need and so a friend indeed. After this incident the wrens were even more tame.

"A few weeks passed, and I was again called upon to render these wrens assistance. The entrance to the nest had become too large for their needs, and a pair of English sparrows had discovered the fact. The rotten wood had so far crumbled away that the latter birds could pass in and out. This they attempted, and a battle royal was begun. The singing of the wrens was noticeably loud, incessant and sugges-

Indigestion is much of a habit. Don't get the habit. Take a little Kodol Dyspepsia Cure after eating and you will quit belching, puffing, papitating and frowning. Kodol Digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by John L. Wooten.

You're growing more beautiful day by day, dear Grace. I hope you're not using cosmetics on your face; Oh, Charlie, this is a great injustice to me, I'm simply using Rocky Mountain Tea. (with out) Wooten's Drug Store.

The best safeguard against headache, constipation and liver troubles is DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Keep a vial of these famous little pills in the house and take a dose at bed time when you feel that the stomach and bowels need clearing. They don't gripe. Sold by John L. Wooten.

There is one thing we have never been able to understand, why ladies will buy harmful cosmetics when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes clear complexions. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Wooten's Drug Store.

The best way to rid the system of a cold is to evacuate the bowels. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar acts as a pleasant, yet effectual cathartic on the bowels. It clears the head, cuts the phlegm out of the throat, strengthens the bronchial tubes, relieves coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough etc. Sold by John L. Wooten.

It enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves, makes every organ of the body strong and healthy. A great spring tonic. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Wooten's Drug Store.

If you are troubled with Piles and can't find a cure, try Witch Hazel Salve but be sure you get that made by E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. It is the Original. If you have used Witch Hazel Salve without being relieved it is probable that you got hold of one of the many worthless counterfeits that are sold on the reputation of the genuine DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Coughs, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by John L. Wooten.

Don't frown—look pleasant. If you are suffering from indigestion or sour stomach, take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Hon. Jake Moore, of Atlanta, Ga. says: "I suffered more than 20 years with indigestion. A friend recommended Kodol. It relieved me in one day and I now enjoy better health than for many years. Kodol digests what you eat, relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach, belching, etc. Sold by John L. Wooten.

A POT SHOT.

It Was an Unintentional One, but It Bagged Four Quail.

Four of us were out rabbiting, with indifferent success. H. got tired of it and thought he would try to walk up a bunch of quail. He walked along a road dividing a stubble field, and in nearing a bunch of grass alongside of the road a bunch of birds got up out of the grass. He gave them the first barrel as they rose, but missed. Then he gave them the second and saw two drop. One was dead, but the other only wounded. He picked up the dead bird and, having no dog, ran after the wounded bird and retrieved it. Then he followed up the birds he had marked down in some scrub oak to try for another shot.

About an hour afterward we came along the same place, when S. noticed one of the beagles mouthing a bird in the bunch of grass. The grass was about a foot and a half high, about two yards long and one yard wide. S. shouted to the dog to drop it and ran toward him. We both got there about the same time, and S. had taken the bird from the dog, saying, "Why, it's a quail." Just then I noticed one at my feet and said, "Here's another." S. walked on a step and said, "Here's another." Just then W. came along and stopped and said, "Here's another," picking one up at the same time. Well, we picked up four quail in that bunch of grass. The birds were still quite warm and were lying on their breasts, with wings spread out.

Well, we all wondered how such a thing could have happened. We all had heard H. shoot twice after he had been gone a short time, but no others. Just then we saw H. coming up the road. When he got to us we asked him if he had fired the two guns a short time before. "Yes," said he. "What at?" asked S. "Quail," said H. Then he explained that as he walked along the road the bunch of quail got up about sixty feet away. He fired the first barrel, but missed, "as he thought," as they got up out of the grass. Then he gave them the left barrel, knocking down two. "The one was dead, but I had a good run after the other one," he said, "and here they are," taking the two birds out of his game pocket. We then told him about the four we had found, and after a lot of talk and study we concluded that he had shot too low with the first barrel and killed the birds on the ground and, not knowing it, had gone right on after the others.

H. has been my shooting partner for the past eighteen years, and we all know him to be a thorough sportsman, one who would not shoot a quail on the ground. I don't know about a duck asleep. Nevertheless I am afraid the name of pot hunter will stay by him a long while.

May Day.

The Roman youths used to go into the fields and spend the calends of May in dancing and singing in honor of Flora, goddess of fruits and flowers. The early English consecrated May day to Robin Hood and the Maid Marian, because the favorite outlaw died on that day.

WEDNESDAY APRIL 4th, 1906

When farmers are satisfied at getting eleven cents it is hard to get them to hold for fifteen.

Greenville is going to start a building and loan association with something like a thousand shares. Who says this town can't do things?

Talk all you can about building and loan association this week, and be at the meeting for organization to be held in the mayor's office on Monday night, 9th.

Want of room is usually the trouble, but some of the fellows who are working against Greensboro as the place for holding the next convention claim that the hall there is too large.

People must think this a mighty sorry world when they shoot themselves or take some other short route to get out of it. Life is largely what we make it, and the suicide mania is not easily accounted for.

Any clerk or wage earner who can spare a small amount each week, even if not over 25 cents, should be in the building and loan association. It is better than a savings bank. Payments of 25 cents a week will carry $100 stock.

Some of these days you will hear Greenville asking Uncle Sam for a public building. In this particular The Reflector holds to the idea that the government would do so much better to give every town having a presidential postoffice a building to cost say $10,000 or $15,000, instead of spending such large sums for buildings in the big places. The small towns do their share in supporting the government and ought to be considered. Besides, the saving of rents would justify the government in erecting such buildings.

VISITING NURSES AND THEIR WORK

In every densely populated city in the United States there may now be seen going about at almost any hour of the day or night, in the worst weather and in the darkest and most squalid streets, numbers of honest-faced, capable-looking young women wearing plain dark uniforms,—usually consisting of long, loose cloaks and small bonnets, with short veils,—and carrying plain black leather bags. They are almost as familiar figures in the poorer quarters as the Salvation Army lasses, and they are accorded an even greater degree of respect. Streets that are dangerous to other people are perfectly safe to them. Doors that are closed to everyone else are opened quickly to their knock. Wherever there is sickness or suffering they are always welcome, and wherever there is sickness or suffering they are always found.

These are the visiting nurses,—trained specialists who give the best part of their lives to carrying expert care to the sick poor in their own homes, to instructing them in the laws of hygiene and sanitation, and to rooting out and destroying the unwholesome conditions which cause the spread of disease. Although they have been in existence a comparatively short time, they have already become an almost indispensable factor in the hygiene of the large city.

The function is threefold. They are at once nurses, teachers, and inspectors. Into the homes of the poor they bring the definite knowledge and the trained skill which the high-salaried nurse in private practice brings into the homes of the rich; but, as visiting nurses, it is not enough that they should use their skill and training for their patients alone. Much of what they know they must teach to the other members of the family, and, without presuming upon the confidence reposed in them as nurses, they must see and report to the authorities every unwholesome condition that may become a menace to public health.

Their work is both social and personal; their duty is to the community as well as to the individual. Since the beginning of the tuberculosis crusade they have done more to check the advance of the White Plague than any other one force. Since they have been given a chance to carry their work into the schools they have materially reduced the spread of contagious disease, while retaining in the class-room hundreds of children who would otherwise be deprived of their right to free education. They have been of inestimable service to health boards in discovering and reporting unsanitary conditions which are hidden from even the trained eyes of the regular inspector because he has not their facilities for daily observation.

These, however, are new developments of their work. Originally they were nurses and nothing more; but as they nursed they saw that there were other things for them to do, and they did them.—From "The Visiting Nurse as a Social Force," by Frances Maule Bjorkman, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April.

A man with chronic rheumatism isn't eligible to membership in a "don't worry club."

An Angry Juror Expressed Himself.

If jurors were allowed to speak out in court they would at times say things to lawyers and judges that would cause a stir. In Mecklenburg Superior court last week the case of R. E. and C. E. Mason against Williams & Wright, in which the plaintiffs sued for $25 on account of the alleged failure of the defendant to fulfill a contract, was tried. The defendant offered evidence but the plaintiffs offered none, and Judge Bryan instructed the jury that if it believed the evidence it would answer the first issue "yes," which would allow the plaintiffs no damages. The jury, on the contrary, answered the issue "no," awarding the plaintiffs the full amount sued for. Judge Bryan set the verdict aside and ordered a new trial. By agreement of counsel it was decided not to try the case at the present term. Judge Burwell, who appeared for the defence, said he had never before known "a jury of good Mecklenburg people to render a verdict, not only against the weight of the evidence, but against all the evidence in the case and the instructions of the court. I don't care to have that jury sit on any case that I professionally appear in or am personally interested in."

Counsel for the plaintiff said he could understand why the jury had returned the verdict—it was because they didn't believe the evidence. Then, says the Chronicle, from which we get this report, Juror T. P. Ross got to his feet and asked permission to say a few words. "I want to say," he said, "that every one of the jurymen were of the same opinion, and didn't believe the evidence, and, I for one, don't believe it this morning.

"Now," said Mr. Ross, dramatically, "I want to say that Judge Barwell has insulted the entire jury by the remarks that he has just made about them, and—" "That'll do, that'll do. Sit down," ordered Judge Bryan. And this ended the incident.—Stuesville Landmark.

METHODS OF READING.

Rules Cannot Be Made, as Each Man Has His Own Standard.

"Men have curiously different notions on the subject of reading, and almost all the literary men have had something to say on the subject," said an observant man. "Emerson laid down three rules. He said: First, do not read a book that is not a year old; second, never read any but books that are famed; third, never read any book but what you like. But it is not likely that many persons can follow these rules. In the first place, it is quite impossible to observe anything like an arbitrary rule in the matter of reading. There is no reason why a good book should be a year old before we venture through its pages. If the book is good it is just as good in fresh print as it will be at any other time. Besides, books are printed so rapidly now that if we are to wait a year before reading a book after it comes out we should soon be very much behind the times. We could not talk to our friends about contemporary literature and would be classed as a back number. Emerson's second rule is worse than the first. All good books do not become famous. It is much easier for a bad book to blaze out and win popular attention. Besides, how shall we know whether a book is good or bad without reading it? The same point may be made as to the third rule. How shall we know whether we like a book or not without reading it? True enough, some men, like Carlyle, can skim a book and get a fairly good idea of it, but this is not a satisfactory way of measuring a book's value. I have but little confidence in the literary judgment of the skimmer. The fact is, after all, that every man must read according to his own notion. My friend may like one book; I like another. He may have one standard of literary excellence; I may have another, and so on. Rules for reading cannot be arbitrarily fixed. Human nature is too fickle and there is too much difference between the temperament of men to admit of any such thing."

Obviously Unintentional.

"Young man," snapped the vinegary faced person on the opposite side of the street car, "I'll thank you not to stare at me, if you please!"

"Pardon me, madam," he said. "No offense was intended. I am so nearsighted I cannot distinguish objects two feet away from me."

"Your apology comes too late, sir."

"Pardon me again, madam," he rejoined, screwing a monocle into his eye and inspecting her features. "It is not so much an apology as—an explanation."

Later when she had studied this explanation in all its bearings it was too late to show proper resentment. He had left the car.—Chicago Tribune.

ANCIENT MEDICINE.

The Idiotic Nocturns In Which People Once Believed.

If modern science can boast of anything, it can of the way in which it has rescued medicine from the realms of imagination, says the London Standard. The wonderful prescriptions of the Magi, as narrated by the Roman historian, Pliny, are examples of what the earliest doctors were, while even the "salves" of our own Elizabethans seem at first sight not much of an improvement upon those of the Chaldean M. D.'s. Let us take a few examples of Magian healing from a Latin author, of which perhaps the most useful is the following—one that in modern parlance would run thus: A recipe to make women disclose their secrets. Take one hen and, having carefully extracted her heart, place the same on the mouth of a patient during sleep. You will ascertain her exact age the next morning. To do the old Roman justice he stigmatizes this statement as a "portentous lie." (No doubt he had tried it.)

Others are quite as grotesque. Feverfew, when used medicinally, had to be plucked by the left hand, after the patient's name had been spoken over it, the herbalist taking good care not to look behind him. A love charm could be easily obtained from a hyena caught when the moon was in Gemini. Sporting prophets who wish to excel in divination should change their customary chop for a few moles' hearts. It is stipulated that these be fresh. The Romans themselves, although no mean surgeons—they made use of the probe and nippers and instruments for trepanning—were not less given to prodigies than the people whose veracity they doubted. They believed that eating hare was a cure for insomnia, and even the skeptic Pliny imagined that there must be something in the superstition that people who had done so were good looking for nine days afterward. A veritable nine days' wonder! He recommended also, as a cure for quartan fever, that the dust in which a hawk had rolled should be put into a bag and the latter tied around the neck with a piece of red thread. Other cures for this same were the longest tooth of a black dog, in the same position, and a wasp caught in the left hand and then pressed against the forehead.

Making a Name For Himself.

A New York business man says that he once had in his employ as office boy a lad named Magillicuddy. Naturally enough, this youngster received so many joking references about his name from his fellow employees that he became extremely dissatisfied with it. So when he applied for a place under another employer in the building he evidently decided to bestow a new name upon himself. When the man to whom he applied asked him his name the boy replied:

"Robert Recapitulation."

"That's an odd name," said the man after having the lad repeat it several times.

The boy looked surprised. "Haven't you heard of General Recapitulation?" asked he.

"No."

"Why, his name is in all the reports in Mr. Blank's office."—Woman's Home Companion.

One Way Round.

An old man who sells produce in the towns near Lowell, Mass., has his share of the best kind of wit—the unexpected. Not long ago, according to a writer in the Lowell Citizen, he delivered a pair of dressed chickens to one of his customers. She was in the kitchen when he brought them in and, womanlike, shivered a little when she saw the headless fowls.

"I should think you'd simply hate to cut off the heads of those innocent chickens!" she exclaimed involuntarily.

"I do," replied the old man, "and so I never do it. I manage to get around it."

"How?" the housewife demanded, with eager interest. "The heads of these chickens are gone."

"Oh, yes," said the old man cheerfully, "I chopped the chickens off."

Not a Masterpiece.

A Scotch laboring man who had married a rich widow exceptional for her plainness was accosted by his employer. "Well, Thomas," he said, "I hear you are married. What sort of a wife have you got?"

"Weel, sir," was the response, "she's the Lord's handiwork, but I canna say she's his masterpiece."

His Career Ended.

Information reached here today that Mr. John W. Carson died Tuesday at his home in Bethel. There are many people in Pitt, Beaufort and Edgecombe counties who knew him, as he was one of the most notorious operators of blind tigers we have ever known. It seemed second nature with the old man to sell whiskey. Few courts come that he was not indicted. Time and again he served terms in jail and once lost a leg while hauling a barrel of whiskey to a meeting on Sunday, but none of these things seemed to stop him. At January court he was sentenced to jail and was released only a few days ago. The county never had a man whose influence was worse.
