A FRIDAY DISASTER.

Six Men on the Kearsage Killed.
Washington, April 14.—Two years to a day later than the fatal Missouri, disaster, and as every sailor immediately recalled, on a Friday and the 13th of the month, six men were done to death in the forward turret of the battleship Kearsage by one of those accidents which acquire additional terror for sailors because of their obscure origin and almost impossibility of prevention.

The Atlantic Fleet, the strongest fighting fleet America has ever owned, had been for weeks engaged in the most severe drills in the waters of the Caribbean Sea culminating in the quarterly target practice. This practice was just about concluded with most satisfactory results up to yesterday and it was confidently expected at the Department, upon the basis of preliminary reports received, that all records would be broken in the matter of rapidity of fire and efficiency of the gunners. But to-day, just at the close of the week's work at the Department, came a cablegram from Rear Admiral Evans, the commanding chief of the Atlantic Fleet, telling of a dreadful accident on one of his best ships the Kearsage. The news came from Caimanera, a little cable station at the mouth of Guantanamo Bay, indicating that the Kearsage itself had arrived at that place.

EASTER SERVICE.

Appropriate Exercises and Delightful Program.

Reported for Reflector.

The Sunday school and Epworth League of the Methodist church held jointly an Easter service in the church Sunday evening at which time an interesting and appropriate program was rendered. Much care had been taken in the preparation of the young people for the celebration of this glad occasion, and the entire program, which consisted of twenty six choice selections, was furnished in a pleasing and befitting manner.

The music was especially appropriate and well executed. The infant class had been well trained, and sang a very suitable selection much to the delight of the large congregation present.

The address of the evening was delivered by Gov. T. J. Jarvis, who spoke in a forcible manner to all present, paying special attention to the children.

At the close of the service the Sunday school classes were called, each reporting on amounts raised for Foreign and Domestic missions. The total amount raised was $221.47. Of this amount, Mr. Wiley Brown's class raised the largest proportion, and received the banner for the second quarter.

Series of Meetings.

At the close of the morning service at the Methodist church on Sunday the pastor announced that a series of meetings will begin in that church on the 29th inst, to continue for ten days. Rev. R. C. Beaman, D. D, pastor of Trinity church, Durham, will assist in these meetings, doing the preaching.

Hanged and Burned.

Springfield, Mo., April 14.—A mob of 3,000 men took Horace Duncan and Jim Copeland, negroes, from the county jail, hanged them to the Goddess of Liberty on the court house, and built a fire under them and roasted them to death. The men were charged with assaulting Mabel Edwards, but it is said they were probably innocent.

National Bank Opens.

The National Bank of Greenville opened its doors for business this morning and made a very gratifying beginning, the deposits running up to a good sum during the day. R. Greene was the first depositor. J. W. Aycock is cashier of the new bank and Fred J. Forbes teller.

BY ONLY ONE VOTE.

Men Were Recorded as Voters for the Subsidy When They Were Not Present.

Washington, N. C. April 14.—The House was all excitement this morning when the fact was disclosed that two members had been recorded as voting for the Southern Railway fast mail appropriation yesterday afternoon, when, as a matter of fact, they were not present at all.

Stephens, of Texas, started the flame with the announcement that he was recorded as voting for the appropriation although he was not in the House, and then Mr. Stevenson, of Minnesota, threw censure into the ranks of the subsidy advocates with the announcement that Hodges, of Louisiana, who was recorded as voting for the appropriation was not present. The question on every one's lips was, "Will the appropriation be knocked out." Speaker Cannon was appealed to for a recount, but he held that it was too late to permit such action, and the result was changed to correspond with the actual vote which give the appropriation the bare majority of one. The original vote stood 99 to 96, but with the two bogus votes eliminated the result is 97 to 96.

The fact that the two absent members were recorded as voting has been the occasion of much talk, though it is generally believed that the mistake is an error of tabulation on the part of the clerks.

In view of the fact that the fast mail appropriation has won out only by the skin of the teeth so to speak, in the House, there is some talk of inaugurating a fight in the senate to defeat the proposition. Heretofore the fast mail appropriation has encountered little or no opposition at the other end of the Capitol. The bill now goes to the Senate postoffice committee of which Senator Simmons is a member.

The fact is generally recognized here that W. W. Kitchen was a big factor in the fight against the appropriation in the House. His speech was by far the best of those delivered in opposition.

Just Like April.

Easter Sunday weather was provoking to the dresses. The day started cloudy, and just as they wanted to be on the way to church it was raining. Half hour later it was fair and the balance of the day was pretty enough.

The vote of Mr. Small, Mr. Pou and Mr. Gudger, of North Carolina, gives J. Pierpont Morgan & Company a gift of $142,728 per year. That sum would establish 198 free rural delivery routes that are badly needed. Is it best to give the money to the transportation monopoly or to establish rural delivery routes that help the people? The money spent in free rural delivery would help the South; the money voted to J. Pierpont Morgan will never get south of New York city.—Raleigh News and Observer.

ENDORSES KITCHIN'S POSITION.

Mr. Laughinghouse Writes Another Interesting Letter to the News and Observer.

I have just read that great speech of my young friend, Will Kitchen, in opposition to the subsidy for the Southern Railway. Ninety-five out of every hundred of North Carolina Democrats are with him in this matter. He is the type of lawyer that I have so much admiration for. I have no doubt he could have gotten ten thousand or more to have espoused the other side of this bill; but thank God he is not made that way. How different I have seen it in the Legislature of North Carolina. In the Legislature of 1903 I was on a visit to Raleigh and was invited by an old farmer friend who was a member of the House to go over to the Senate, to witness a contest over a bill introduced by Durham county's representative to compel the railroad to build a suitable depot in Durham. In that fight I found three of the brightest lawyers in the eastern part of our State pleading with all the power they could muster to defeat this most righteous measure. I said to my old friend: "What does it mean that our eastern attorneys here as Senators are fighting for the railroad against the interest of the people?" His reply was "They are retained by the railroad; that Senators here often get more from the railroad fighting one bill than the State pays them for the whole term. Now we have only fifty members in our Senate. The seven or eight Republican Senators are always on the side of railroad and corporatins. The railroads generally succeed in electing ten or twelve of their own attorneys as Senators, so you can readily see that they have only to retain seven or eight to defeat any measure that may be passed by that more representative body called the House."

We had in both branches of the last Legislature some splendid lawyers—men of the highest type, but they were in the minority and not admired by the class that can be retained by the railroads after they have been elected to the legislature. I was asked by one of the latter class if I did not think Judge Graham was "a great obstructionist." My reply was, "Your diagnosis is incorrect. I consider him a destructionist of more bad legislation than any other member of the House; that he is always on the people's side, and his great legal ability and long experience enables him to detect the evil trend of bad bills and fight them from the beginning. The people of Granville county can do the State no greater service than to keep him in the Legislature as long as they can get him to serve."

I trust you will continue to keep this matter of who will represent us in the Senate before the people, and that the next Senate will not be under the control of railroads.

CASSEL'S ART COLLECTION.

Purchased Mainly With Gold Paid For Hessians Sent to America.

Cassel is perhaps the only town in Germany with a distinctly American chapter in its history, and yet it is seldom visited by Americans.

Once upon a time there lived in Cassel the Landgrave Frederick II. of Hesse. He seemed to have been a very amiable sort of prince, with a level, practical head on his shoulders. He loved his capital city, lying in the mountain cradled plain, and he could look out of his palace windows any fine morning over the waters of the Fulda, which wound its lazy thread under the city walls. He divided his time between improving the town and amusing himself. In Cassel broad squares were laid out, streets cut and buildings erected, while up on the hills at the castle of Wilhelmshohe the landgrave held court, where ladies fair and gallants bold united to do him honor.

So all went merry as a marriage bell until the year of our Lord 1776. Then from over the seas came news of wars and rumors of wars. The American colonists, impudent rascals, had revolted against the king of England, and the landgrave pricked up his ears. At last one fine day Frederick II. in Cassel received a communication from George III. in England, and the result was that several thousand loyal Hessians were hurried off to aid the British in America, and the landgrave received a neat little consideration in the shape of several million dollars. And then—

Many of these Hessians made the long voyage only to be surprised one night as they lay on the banks of the Delaware and taken prisoners by a colonial general named George Washington, and Cassel became the owner of an art collection which, though small, is one of the finest in Europe, and which was purchased mainly with British gold paid as hire for the Hessian soldiers sent to America.—Grace S. H. Tytus in St. Nicholas.

Entertaining Sister's Beau.

While the swain was waiting in the parlor for his inamorata that lady's younger sister ventured into the room to entertain the caller.

"Sister 'll be down soon, Mr. Swilligin," she said. "Say, can you tell me when a door is not a door?"

The young man looked surprised at the ancient conundrum.

"That's a chestnut," he said. "A door is not a door when it is a jar or a jam."

"That's right," said the young sister gleefully. "Now, here's another: What makes more noise than a pig under?"

"Little girl," interrupted the young man somewhat testily, "Why are you asking me to guess those old gags?"

"Why, to entertain you till sister comes in. Isn't that the way Belle talks to you when she's here?"

"What makes you think so?" asked the young man.

"She told me that you had proposed several times, but that she was going to keep you guessing every time you called."—New York

The "Race of the Zoophytes."

Much of the superstition in poetry, says Andrew Wilson in the London Graphic, is due to the imperfections of science. Crabbe, for example, wrote of the Zoophytes that he styled "a race, which science, doubting, knows not where to place." In Crabbe's days at Aldborough he became familiar with the "sea flowers" with which the sea wrack was often mixed. To him they represented singular growths that were neither animal nor vegetable. Yet even in Crabbe's day the zoophytes were known to represent colonies of animals growing in the strange verisimilitude of plants. At the very least the poet committed no vital error, for he knew the race "involved in sea wrack" was a living one, and he duly commented on the difficulty of science placing it in any category of satisfactory kind.

The Straightest Line.

The strangest thing in nature or art is a ray of light when passing through a medium of uniform density; hence the eye is enabled to test the straightness of an edge or tube by holding it as nearly as possible coincident with a ray of light, such parts as depart from straightness then intercepting the ray and causing a shade to be cast upon other parts. It is not known at what early period in the history of mankind the discovery was made that straightness could be thus determined. It is certain that thousands of mechanics use the method daily without being able to give a rational explanation of it. This primitive mode of testing straightness, on account of its great convenience and accuracy, is likely to continue in use to the end of the world.

"Pin Money."

Pins were unknown at the beginning of the sixteenth century. Poor people used a sort of wooden skewer, while the rich used silver, bone or boxwood. When pins first came into use they were so expensive that only fashionable people could indulge in them, and they were given as New Year gifts and greatly appreciated. It became customary at last for husbands to give their wives the money to buy them instead, and so the term "pin money," meaning an allowance for small personal expenses arose.

Who Lost and how much.

A banker going home for his dinner saw a $10 bill on the curb stone. He picked it up and took the number home in order to find the owner. While at home his wife remarked that the butcher had sent a bill amounting to $10. The only money he had with him was the bill he had found, which he gave to her and she paid the butcher. The butcher paid it to a farmer for a calf, and the farmer paid it to a merchant, who in turn, paid it to a washer woman, and she, owing the banker a note of $10, went to the bank and paid the note. The banker recognized the bill as the one he had found, and which, up to that time, had paid $50 of debt. On careful investigation he discovered that the bill was counterfeit. Now, will some of our friends tell us what has been lost in the transaction, and by whom—Ex.

Paint brushes that have become hardened with dry paint may be rendered fit for use again by boiling for a few minutes in a strong solution of washing soda and water. Be careful that the bristles do not touch the bottom of the vessel or they will burn and then become useless. When the old paint is soft it may be washed out with soap and hot water or kerosene.

There will soon be grass enough for the "keep off" signs.

That the mail subsidy won by only a majority of three votes shows a growing sentiment against it.

The Reflector acknowledges an invitation to the inauguration of Prof. E. L. Moffitt as president of Elon College, on May 2nd.

Good for the North Carolina boys. In a game of ball played at Richmond Saturday between the teams of Trinity College and Harvard, our boys won.

Greene and Gaynor stole over half a million apiece and got four year sentences. If it had been a five dollar forgery the sentence might have been longer.

Charlotte thinks nothing is too good for her 20th of May celebration, and speaks out accordingly. And Charlotte is right. If it wasn't too far to walk we'd go ourself.

The man with a prospectus of a book describing the Vesuvius eruption may be looked for in a few days. The papers have already begun printing pictures of it like they were just from the spot.

Mr. Carnegie is out expressing indignation over that Atlanta kissing affair. He says the women are entirely to blame, having done all the kissing themselves, and he had to raise a protest against more of it. The matter gets worse.

If it gets much worse Congress might convert itself in a prize ring and let the belligerents have it out with their fists a la Sullivan and Kilrain. A little advance advertising of such a bout would fill the galleries at good prices and the fund might go to help swell subsidy appropriations.

One man says not ten women to the thousand who attended church Easter Sunday can tell what the text was. He did not say how the men would compare, but we doubt if they could make a better showing, as they were as busy looking at the women as the women were looking at each other's hats.

Every once in a while some fellow bobs up to dispute the fact that Andrew Jackson was born in North Carolina. The dispute is not disturbing Jackson's ashes in the least, nor giving much concern to the State of his birth. But the would-be wise ones and supposed history makers must have something to fill space with when they write.

Please note that Missouri banging and burning did not occur in the South.

Raleigh loves a stir and seems not content without one. It has been but a short while since the whiskey question was much in evidence there, those wanting to get back in the rum mill business making desperate effort to get an election called on the question of saloons or dispensary. This failed, and now the agitation has assumed new shape—prohibition against dispensary being the topic.

Common respect for honesty should lead to a recount of the vote on the mail subsidy in Congress. It was only claimed to have been carried by three votes, and later developed that two of these were wrongfully counted, which brings the margin down to one. It looks too much like there might have been fraud in the matter, and Congress should hasten to clear its skirts of even a shadow of suspicion.

THE DELINEATOR FOR MAY.

The May Delineator, with a complete display, pictorial and descriptive, of the latest Spring fashions, contains a wealth of suggestion for those who wish to be smartly gowned, and many other features of interest to women. Hon. Justice David J. Brewer contributes an article on "Woman in the Professions" in which he comments on the significance of the fact that the status of women has changed in the last half century. Miss Winslow's club story, "The President of Quex," drawing near its end, deepens in interest, and the author supplements the installment with a chapter on "Club Women and the Child Labor question." In "Famous American songs," Gustav Kobbe gives the story of the origin of the popular air, "Ben Bolt," and in an interesting historical sketch of Annapolis, Hester D. Richardson vividly pictures the romantic interest attached to the spot where the body of John Paul Jones is to rest. Florence Rowwell writes her experiences in playing Shakesperian roles and speaks of the need of a national theatre. Avery Abbott and Juliette B. G. Towne contribute short stories for older folks, and Alice Brown a fairy tale for the little ones. There are other features to delight young folks, including a chapter in the serial, "Sunlight and Shadow," and pastimes by Lina Beard. In the "Campaign for Safe Foods" Mary Hinman Abel writes of coloring matters and commercial cheats, and the pages devoted to the household are full of suggestions for the kitchen with many other helpful hints to the housewife.

The Wholesome Onion.

Onions are stated to be almost the best nerve known. No medicine, it is claimed, is so useful in cases of nervous prostration, and there is nothing else that will so quickly relieve and tone up a worn-out system. Onions are useful in all cases of coughs, colds and influenza and if they are taken regularly are very good for the complexion.

WHAT IS BROMONIA?
(BROMOZONE.)

Bromonia is a product as near capable of curing the majority of diseases as it is possible for Modern Science to produce. The use of Bromonia makes pure blood. Bromonia is not a miracle but simply the result of the scientific investigation of the greatest chemists of the present century. At the first symptoms of fatigue headache or backache, which are often the forerunners of disease, send for your physician if you will, but, if you take Bromonia, you may find that by the time he has answered your call, that the symptoms have disappeared.

Use Bromonia as directed. Live a temperate life. If you become ill while so doing, we will pay any reasonable doctor's bill on demand and proof of illness. We don't want you to invest a cent, however, until we have bought the first bottle for you. Fill in the coupon under this advertisement and mail it to us, taking care to write your name and address plainly, and we will send you without any cost to you whatever a full size package to try. No matter what your trouble is, write to us. Correspondence confidential. Address Bromonia Co., New York.

J. L. Wooten will give his personal guarantee that you will receive an order on your nearest druggist for a free bottle if you send us coupon. Be sure to write your name and address plainly.

THE SAGO PALM.

How Its Delicious Product Is Obtained by the East Indians.

Is it from their noble aspect or on account of their utility that the palms have been termed the princes of the vegetable kingdom? Neither the anatomy of the stem nor the form of the flower entitles them to such a position. The stem is as simple as that of the common broom, and the flower as that of the rush. Yet they have always been of great interest to the botanist, and their historical and legendary associations and their beauty and their economic value have made them of interest to the public.

More than a thousand species of the palm are scattered at different elevations throughout the tropics of both hemispheres, with stragglers in subtropical and even in warm, temperate regions. Their utility can scarcely be overestimated. They furnish food, shelter, clothing, timber, fuel, building materials, sticks, fiber, paper, starch, sugar, oil, wine, wax, tanning, starch, dyeing materials, resin, and a host of minor products, which make them of the greatest value to the natives and to tropical agriculturists.

One of the most important is the sago palm of the East Indian archipelago. The tree flourishes only in low, marshy situations and seldom reaches a height of thirty feet. It attains a starch yielding condition at the age of fifteen years. The stem is then gorged with a mass of starchy matter, around which is a hard outer rind about two inches in thickness. Were the fruit allowed to form and ripen the whole of this starchy core would disappear and leave the stem a mere hollow shell, for when the tree ripens its fruit it dies.

It seems strange that a man can consume a tree, but it is so. The preparation consists in cutting off the branches and the hard rind of the trunk. The stem is then divided into sections and split up, and the starchy pith is extracted and grated to powder. When the starch is roughly grated or pounded into pulp and made into cakes one tree will feed a man for a whole year.

That which is intended for exportation is mixed into a paste with water and rubbed through sieves into small grains. It is known as pearl sago, bullet sago, etc., according to its size, and is served on our tables and in soups and puddings.

An Innocent Accomplice.

Residents in a certain West End avenue block are surprised at the suddenly refractory disposition of the postman on that beat. Time was when he obligingly stopped and delivered letters to persons whom he met in the street. Nowadays all such requests are answered with a stubborn denial. About two weeks ago that neighborhood was thrilled with news of an elopement. Upon investigation it turned out that the match was made by means of a clandestine correspondence which was carried on with the postman's aid. The young man and woman in the case wrote the letters, but the postman handled at least half of them, and by allowing himself to be wheedled into giving them up to the young woman half a block away from her own door he prevented her family from finding out what was going on. The enraged parents are now denouncing him for complicity in the scheme, which accounts for his sudden reformation.—New York Post.

Mozart's Memory.

Mozart had a memory for music and for nothing else. On attending the papal mass at the Sistine chapel he was greatly impressed with the musical service and asked for a copy, but was told none could be given him, as the music was not allowed to go out. He went to the next service, listened attentively, went away and wrote down the whole from memory. When "Don Giovanni" was first performed there was not time to copy a part for the harpsichord, so Mozart conducted the entire opera, about three hours long, and played harpsichord accompaniments to the songs and choruses without a note of music to assist his memory.

The Word "Gentleman."

If the word is to be kept "for purposes of ceremony," let us be ceremonious on all occasions, and except where those we may be speaking of are behaving in plain opposition to the name let us hasten to

Ascribe a virtue, if they have it not. Thus if I were asked the time honored question:

When Adam delved, and Eve span,
Who was then the "gentleman?"
I would reply: "Adam was the first 'gentleman' and remained so till the fall. But when he threw the blame on Eve he forfeited the title."

Unfortunate Change.

The substitution of one word for another or the omission of one word is frequently enough to spoil the effect of an orator's eloquence.

Years ago there was a military celebration, in the course of which various popular military organizations and regiments were made the subjects for orations, eulogies and toasts. One enthusiastic admirer of the Salem Light infantry had carefully prepared a toast which he was sure would swell the hearts of those connected with the company in question with pride and joy.

He proposed to begin as follows: "To the Salem Light infantry! Let the enemies of our country look on such troops and tremble!"

Unfortunately when the time for the delivery of his toast came his wits deserted him.

"The Salem Light infantry!" he faltered. "The Salem Light infantry! Let our country look on such troops and tremble!"
