THE LITTLE BOY WHO RAN AWAY.

"I'm going now to run away,"
Said little Sammy Green one day.
"Then I can do just what I choose,"
I'll never have to black my shoes
Or wash my face or comb my hair;
I'll find a place, I know, somewhere
And never have again to fill
The old chip basket—so I will.

"Goodby, mama!" he said, "Goodby!"
He thought his mother then would cry.
She only said, "You going, dear?"
And didn't shed a single tear.
"There, now," said Sammy Green, "I know
She does not care if I go,
But Bridget does. She'll have to fill
That old chip basket, so she will."

But Bridget only said: "Well, boy,
You're off for sure: I wish you joy."
And Sammy's little sister Kate,
Who swung upon the garden gate,
Said anxiously as he passed through,
"Tonight whatever will you do
When you can't get no 'lasses spread
At supper time on top of bread?"

One block from home and Sammy Green's
Weak little heart was full of fear.
He thought about Red Riding Hood,
The wolf that met her in the wood,
The beast-like boy who kept so mum
When he heard of the giant's "Fe, fo, fum,"
Of the dark night and the policeman,
Then poor Sammy homeward ran.

Quick through the alleyway he sped
And crawled in through the old woodshed.
The big chip basket he did fill,
He blacked his shoes up with a will,
He washed his face and combed his hair,
He went up to his mother's chair
And kissed her twice, and then he said,
"I'd like some 'lasses top of bread."

WOMAN IN THE PROFESSIONS.

In The Delineator for May, Justice David J. Brewer contributes an interesting article on "Woman in the Professions." The Justice comments on the facts that during the last half century woman has broken down the doors of entrance into professional life, that she is no longer merely an incident but a conspicuous factor in politics and many of the professions. To quote in part:

She has a brain and is capable of receiving the highest educational training. The land is covered with co-educational colleges and universities, and no one has yet had the hardihood to say that she does not make a success of her work in them. In the realm of literature she is constantly present. Prose and poetry are at her command. Who writes the most of our acceptable stories? What masculine poet dares to look down on Mrs. Browning? No longer are face and form everything. We have learned to behold the intellect in her. We see her in the pulpit, at the bar, and in the doctor's office. She knows something of the Bible, quotes Blackstone, and, like masculine doctors, writes prescriptions in a dead language. She claims the right to be in every department of professional life, and many are asking how far she has gone and will go in that life; what has been and what will be her success. True, she has not yet become baseball or football champion and this department of culture still remains the peculiar occupation of masculine students. But who knows how soon she may become a successful competitor therein. She is developing as an athlete. Some so-called physiological affirm that her average stature is increasing. In the economic world she has broken the confinements of home and entered the doors of outside toil. She has established the fact that she has a mind as well as a heart."

THE BETHEL AFFAIR.

Six Men Arrested on Bench Warrants Charged With Implication In It.

Sunday night a week ago a dastardly outrage was committed near Bethel by several persons who went to the home of W. J. Teel and assaulted him. Particulars of the assault were published in The Reflector.

Much talk has been heard since relative to the affair and the names of several citizens were mentioned in connection with it, and while it was said there was strong evidence against some of them no arrests were made until today.

Judge B. F. Long, who is holding this term of court, arrived here Sunday and the matter was laid before him. This morning he issued bench warrants for several parties and Deputy Sheriffs R. Hyman, S. I. Dudley and W. J. Symonds went out to serve them. These officers arrested six of the men whose names were in the warrants and brought them to Greenville. The men arrested are A. G. Whichard, W. S. Briley, Zebulun Whitehurst, Charlie Wynne, Walter Woolard and J. K. Barnhill.

The men arrested were taken to the sheriff's office and held in custody there awaiting the action of the court. As nothing further has been done up to the time The Reflector is ready for the press, it cannot be told what evidence it in hand against them. The matter will be fully investigated.

Value of the B. and L.

The Presbyterian College building in this city is one of the finest educational structures in the South. Its erection was made possible through the instrumentality of the building and loan association. How it was done is briefly related in an editorial in The Greenville, S. C. News, and what has been done in Charlotte can be done in other places. The News says that a little over six years ago the movement was begun to build the college. The amount required was $50,000. The management conceded that the best way to raise this money was through the building and loan associations of the city. Subscriptions to the fund were therefore invited and these were made payable in building and loan stock which were made payable in weekly installments through a period of six and one third years. The weekly installment on $1,000 was $2.50. With the payments thus made easy the $50,000 was readily raised. The money was borrowed and the college building erected. The building and loan stock is now nearly matured and in another month or two the cash will be available to return the borrowed money. There is a church in Charlotte which raised quite a sum of money to clear off a debt in this same way through the building and loan association. Many, many a family owns its home, bought in this same way through the building and loan.—Charlotte Chronicle.

There will be a special communication of Greenville Lodge A. F. & A. M. tonight for work and instruction.

SUPERIOR COURT.

April Criminal and Civil Term in Session.

The April term of Pitt Superior court opened this morning for a two weeks' term with Judge B. F. Long presiding and Solicitor L. I. Moore representing the State.

The following were drawn as grand jurors for the term: Walter Mewborn, foreman, W. C. James, J. J. Stroud, J. L. Roberson, J. Stanley Smith, C. E. Spier, J. B. Speight, D. W. Bailey, J. T. Adams, S. T. Oakley, James Long, L. S. Hardee, W. A. Stokes, W. S. Galloway, Ferney Gaskins, E. W. Braxton, A. B. Congleton, G. M. Shirley.

In his charge to the grand jury Judge Long said he would not consume time in going through the catalogue of crimes and giving the definition of each, as he took it that the grand jury was composed of men of intelligence who could tell if a crime had been committed as well as if a lecture covering the whole revision of the code was given them. They know as well what is a criminal violation as does any lawyer.

He then charged the body relative to the requirement of their oath to keep secret their deliberations, an oath that is required of no other officer connected with the court. Their duty as to examining witnesses and inquiring only into the State's side of a matter was also explained, also the difference between a bill of indictment and a presentment. Nothing should stand between a grand juror and his duty in making presentment of any crime within his knowledge. The jurors were warned against the approach of those persons who sometimes dog the footsteps of grand jurors in the effort to influence their acts. "Gentlemen, avoid even the appearance of evil, and if there is any such approach made to you report it promptly to the court."

Then after touching upon their duties as to the examination of public buildings of the county and advising that he might have further instruction for the grand jury later in the term, he sent them to their room.

W. H. Smith was sworn as officer of the grand jury and L. W. Lawrence is crier of the court.

The call of the docket was taken up and cases marked for trial. The case against Will Kittrell for murder was set for Friday.

ICE FACTORY.

One Soon to Be Established Here.

Greenville is soon to have a new enterprise, an ice factory, something that the town has long needed. Mr. R. Greene is behind this enterprise and will push it to success, as he usually does such things as he puts a hand to. The contract has been placed for the ice plant, and Mr. Greene tells us he expects to have it ready for operation in a few weeks. The exact location of the plant has not been definitely decided upon, but this will be selected and everything put in readiness by the time the machinery arrives.

This plant will furnish ice to the people as such a price as to enable all to use it, and will so increase the quality consumed as to make the enterprise a profitable one.

Trade With the Advertiser.

There are no better business houses than those whose announcements appear in The Reflector. They deserve your patronage and will make it to your interest to trade with them. If it were not for the enterprising business man who advertises you could not even have a newspaper, therefore he helps you in more ways than one.

Barries Begin This Week.

The strawberry movement from this territory will begin this week and before Saturday night miles of box cars laden with the luscious fruit will have been hurried North from north, south and east of Wilmington. In the Chadbourne section already the movement is heavy, 29 refrigerator car loads of 400 crates each having gone forward yesterday.

Express shipments from all over the territory were large, 126 crates having gone forward from Rocky Point alone. The prices are reported to be very good indeed, ranging from 30 to 45 cents.—Wilmington Star.

The leaves are growing fast.

The threatened frost for tonight has had farmers busy today getting the young potato vines under cover.

Bay windows over the eyes might have been helpful for keeping out dust today. The wind made the dust something very disagreeable.

Million More From Congress.

Washington, April 21—An additional appropriation of one million dollars for the sufferers of San Francisco and other California cities was the distinctive feature of the legislation enacted by the House to-day.

A message from the President and a letter from the Secretary of War prepared the House for the action of the committee on appropriations in reporting another joint resolution increasing the amount of Federal aid to two millions, and barring a general inquiry as to the manner in which the money would be expended, the resolution passed without debate.

You see plenty of people making for the river with fishing poles.

MONDAY APRIL 23, 1906.

Greensboro's last round was so tame she will have to pull off some thing else

In the present excitement lookout for somebody to go to writing stories about Bald mountain.

All humanity is kin, and it is every one's duty, who can, to help the San Francisco sufferers.

It was twenty years ago this coming August when Charleston was visited by an earthquake.

Just as well send Gorky back to Russia. The advocates of "free love" should have no quarter in America.

Greenville is not doing what she might do for the aid of the San Francisco sufferers. "A little help is worth a deal o' pity."

If their charges against each other are true, there must needs be much pruning of the ranks before there is ever a resolute Republican party in North Carolina.

The Durham Herald calls the attention to the custom of disasters coming in threes, and is wondering where the next one will hit and what it will be.

No doubt the prosecution of Congressman Blackburn was largely spite work on the part of the opposing faction in the Republican party, and his acquittal gives them a jolt.

Those cities which have themselves suffered much from disaster, have that sympathetic feeling that hastens them to extend aid when misfortune strikes elsewhere. Jacksonville, Fla., contributed liberally to the San Francisco sufferers.

Blackburn came out best in his round, and now the rumpuss is on between Rollins and Bynum. If they have a mind to call each other cut throats, thieves and pirates, they have no right to complain if other folks should think that way too.

The two afternoon papers of Norfolk, the Ledger and the Dispatch, have been consolidated and now appear as one. It means a better afternoon paper for Norfolk. One paper well supported does more good than two or more that can barely exist.

Along now we read stories of marvelous happenings. Some fellow in Ohio has the gall to send out a tale that an old stone well, forty-six feet deep, containing fifteen feet of water, slid down the hill twenty-two feet and remained in tact, and an old windless on the well not even being displaced nor the water being disturbed in the least. That is a whopper.

The time draws near for the opening of the first series of The Home Building and Loan Association of Greenville. All who have subscribed for shares, and all others who want shares, should report promptly to the secretary and treasurer, Mr. S. C. Wooten, on the first Saturday in May. This association can be made the greatest incentive to Greenville's growth the town has ever had.

It is hoped the Water and Light Commission of Greenville will not abandon the idea of giving the town day electric current as early as possible. Such an advantage would go a long ways toward developing numerous enterprises, and the town needs every one of these that can be established. Every such enterprise will add to the business of the town and increase the support of the municipal plant. Bring on the day current.

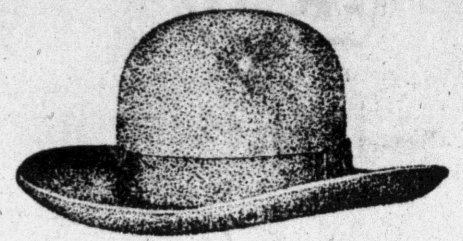

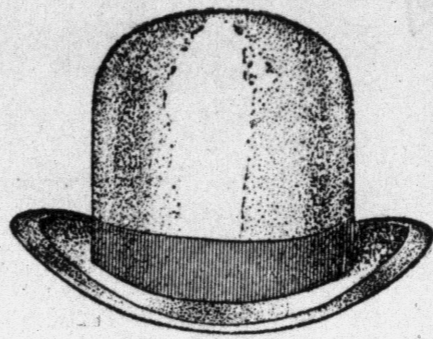

One thing Greenville needs is more people. The best way to induce more people to come here is to have avenues of profitable employment open to them. These avenues of employment are best provided in manufacturing enterprises, hence the duty and necessity of encouraging the establishment of every possible enterprise that can be induced to locate here. Every citizen can do his part in this direction. The town itself could do much toward stimulating manufacturing enterprises by providing a day electric current that would furnish power with which to operate.

The great spirit of the American people is brought to the surface when any one is in distress. Outwardly there may be much class-difference, but distress shows the real heart of the American people. Now as never before the spirit of universal brotherhood is being put into practice. The rich and the poor alike respond to the needs of humanity. During the past week the American people have shown how deep is the feeling of sympathy and kindness. The voluntary funds for the relief of the suffering in San Francisco have reached $10,000,000, and much more will be added to this fund. In spite of the spirit of money-getting, the heart of the true American is sympathetic, and he is always ready to help his brother.

Comfort for Baldheads

John S. Sargent, the noted portrait painter, said in Philadelphia on his last visit that he disliked to paint an old man with a thick head of hair, and that he disliked to see thick hair on an old man. He held that the custom had caused thin hair or baldness to seem the normal and natural condition of an old man's head, and that in consequence thick, bushy hair on an old man seemed abnormal, and was suggestive of animality, of savagery, of a lower order.

He said that an old man with thick hair growing well over his forehead invariably looked brutal and coarse. He had nothing like the look of gentle refinement that is found in the thin haired old man.

Only in young men and boys is thick hair natural. In the old man the middle-aged, thin hair and baldness is now the natural state, and no bald man if he could see how odd he would look with a boy's thick patch, would want his lost hair back.

Mr. Sargent's words are comforting to many men. There is no bald head living who would dispute them or who wish them unsaid.—New York Press

Stormy North.

The wind got on such a blow today as to disarrange telegraph lines. Communication was cut off north of Norfolk and Richmond.

Selected Her Victims.

An official in the government service at Washington tells of the rupture of the friendly relations that had so long subsisted between his daughter of nine years, named Katharine, and another little girl of the same age called Marie. It appears that immediately after the falling out the youngster last mentioned was moved to communicate to the parents of Katharine certain details of the distressing occurrence. When next the two children met there ensued some rather severe re-terminations. Said Katharine: "I think you're just a hateful, mean thing to tell my father and mother that I bit you. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" "Well," retorted Marie, "I think you ought to have been ashamed to bite me."

"Suppose I did bite you," vehemently answered Katharine. "You bite sometimes, don't you?" Whereupon Marie evinced the greatest indignation. "Let me tell you one thing," she observed, "if I do bite I never bite any one outside my own family!"—New York Times.

No "Breaking In"

ONE characteristic of the "Queen Quality" Custom Grade Oxfords is their flexible fit. Too many shoes are like the wooden lasts over which they are made—stiff and unyielding. They have to be "broken in." When a shoe is broken to conform to the foot, the original lines must be changed. The shoe thus becomes loose and shapeless. "Queen Quality" Shoes "keep their shape" because they fit perfectly with a flexible fit. The shoe yields to the foot as does a glove to the hand. We have over fifty styles of these superb shoes to show you.

JACKSON'S FANCY.

The General Liked Him Better Than a Spirited Horse.

"Stonewall" Jackson was as picturesque in the saddle as he was on foot, says the Washington Star. The grim old Presbyterian elder had ridden in his youth in West Virginia in races for an uncle, of which act in later years he was not proud. At the beginning of the civil war or thereabouts some of his admirers presented him with a war charger suitable for a man of growing fame and bright military future. He had been riding up to that date a rather undersized sorrel gelding of very meek appearance, which was one of a carload captured by his command at some point on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and consigned to Washington. This particular animal the general gave the name of Fancy, although from all accounts of Confederate soldiers it fell far short of the title in equine attributes, except in one respect—he had a fancy whenever the command halted for lying down and rolling like a dog. What the general liked most about him, aside from his quiet manners, was his gait, which he himself described as being as "easy as a cradle." Evidently the animal was of the hobby horse species.

The mount selected for Jackson was quite another animal in blood, disposition and spirit. On a certain review the general, dressed in a new uniform in place of the dingy gray he had long worn, appeared on the field mounted on his blooded charger, but when the band struck up "Hail to the Chief" and his men burst into loud cheers the horse bolted, threw "Old Jack" and trailed the new uniform in the dust. Fancy was never thereafter displaced in his affectionate esteem. He rode him in his valley and peninsular campaigns and was on his back on the evening of May 2, 1863, at Chancellorsville when he received the wound which resulted in his untimely death. For a long time Fancy was lost after the above event, but was finally found by a Confederate soldier and subsequently given a home in the family of Jackson's father-in-law, Dr. Morrison, Lincoln county, N. C. Fancy lived to a most extraordinary age, dying in 1888. His skin was prepared by an expert attached to the Smithsonian institution and is at the Confederate Soldiers' home, Richmond, Va.

VILLAGE FIREMEN.

Some Funny Stories Told of Amateur Blaze Fighters.

Rural fire departments, especially in the early days of organization, have often afforded material for comedy, says Youth's Companion. Had hand-tubs and ladder companies been known in Shakespeare's day it is easy to imagine that English literature might have been enriched by the portrait of some rustic fire chief fit to pass down to immortality with those of the country watchmen and justices we know so well. T. E. Lawlor has recently recorded some suggestive bits from English villages.

In Cornwall at an alarm of fire a member of a newly formed fire company was seen standing on a corner gaping in a dazed way at a brisk fire in progress some distance down the street. At last he was overheard murmuring to himself:

"A proper blaze—it sure be a proper blaze! A must go home and put on my uniform. Yes, it be a blaze worth getting on my new boots for, tight though 'en be."

At another fire the company, assembled hastily in an unlighted village lane, had no lanterns and in a darkness deepened by a thick smoke as yet unlighted by flame, were helplessly wondering what they could do and where to make their attack. Suddenly a tongue of flickering red shot up from the smoldering building, and the firemen, with a shout, prepared to turn the hose upon it. The captain grabbed the nearest fire fighter and jerked him and the nozzle he was directing violently aside.

"'Ere, you lunk'ed!" he shouted. "Old 'ard! If you wasn't goin' to put out the honly light we've got to see the fire by!"

At the burning of a large barn another village chief was so intent on personally getting out the live stock that he left the conduct of the fight against the fire entirely to his subordinates, who were sadly in need of direction. On being remonstrated with he declared excitedly:

"Drat the old barn! Let her burn! She's half gone anyway. But critters are critters, and pork is pork. Sammy Tottle's mast fed bacon is the best in three counties, and 'f you don't look out 'twill be all frizzled up together to oncet and nobody's tongue get a taste of it. Neyer you mind the fire, men. Turn to and haul out them pigs!"

Richard Not Himself.

Tom Keene was once playing in a theater in one of the larger cities and, as every one knew then, Keene used a rubber bag inflated with air to form a hump when playing Richard III. On the night in question as he stepped forth from the wings a supe plunged a penknife into the bag, and in an instant the air escaped. Keene went on the stage as straight as an Indian. He screwed his face up in every imaginable grimace, but without avail, and the audience gave him the laugh. Finally he was on to the trick, and after substituting a peach basket for a hump he went on with the play, but the supe did not get out of bed for nearly a week.

Two Mistakes.

An Irish merchant who had more money in his pocket than his appearance denoted took a seat in a first class carriage. A dandy fellow passenger was much annoyed at Pat's presence and, missing his handkerchief, taxed him with having picked his pocket. After recovering his handkerchief, which he had put in his hat, he made a lame apology, but Pat stopped him with this remark:

"Make yourself easy, darlint. Don't bother about the matter. You took me for a thafe. I took you for a gentleman. We were both of us mistaken, that's all. me honey."

HUNTING WITH A LEOPARD.

How the Swiftest Animal on Earth Goes After His Prey.

Four miles beyond the palace gates of Jaipur you may see a cheetah hunt. Now and again in the noonday heat you may have seen a leopard crouching along beside his master—querulous, uncertain, half timid, heavily hooded with blue silk, and finding the trimmed stone of the pavement maddening hot beneath his silent pads. But it is a different animal when at last, after a tedious stalk of a herd of black buck, the leopard is unhooded from the whining bullock cart and left to his own work.

In all the world there is little left so savage and so beautiful as this steel sprung cat when he scents his quarry. In a flash he has dropped to the plain, belly flat upon the hot stones, while he works his way to a ten inch patch of sagebrush, all elbows and seemingly but four inches above the ground. You may see the trail of him as he goes. From one bush he makes for another or a fold of ground. One watches him with a touch of his own silence, though the little caravan of bullock carts must still be kept moving lest their stopping should alarm the buck.

So it goes on, this yellow demon edging himself nearer and nearer to his chosen prey till, while fifty yards away yet, the buck raises his head. Whether he temporizes his danger at once or not, there is no chance of stalking him a yard farther, and the cheetah makes his dash. There is not a sound on either side. Two of the fastest animals on earth—the cheetah is beyond all question the swiftest—engage in a life and death race. It is soon over, for if the cheetah does not bring his prey down in 250 yards he throws up the chase and returns ignominiously to his master. If he catches the buck there is another final of jetting life-blood and convulsive limbs and glassing eyes, interfered with by the cheetah's master, who brings a huge wooden spoon filled with blood and entrails, which he forcibly substitutes for the buck itself under the still sucking muzzle of the sated leopard. But whether he catch it or not the cheetah's flight over the ground for 200 yards is a thing that is worth going to Jaipur to see.—Jaipur Letter in London Telegraph.

Thought He Lost His Head.

A gentleman while taking a ride with his groom had the misfortune to have himself and companion thrown violently to the ground by his horse taking fright and running away. The gentleman was not seriously injured, his principal loss being that of his wig, which had been shaken off, but he found Pat in a much worse condition, with the blood trickling from his head and holding his master's wig, which he was surveying with the utmost alarm and horror. "Well, Pat," said his master, "are you much hurt?"

"Hurt is it? Oh, master, do you see the top of my head in my hand?"

Pat in his terror and confusion had mistaken his master's wig for his own natural scalp and evidently thought that his last hour had arrived.—London Telegraph.

Genesis of "Hear, Hear."

The parliamentary cry of "Hear him, hear him," was familiar by the year 1689, as references in Dr. Murray's Dictionary show. Sir Edward Seymour as speaker seems then to have deprecated certain uses of it—ironical, no doubt. But we have to advance well into the next century, to 1768, before we find Lord G. Cavendish interrupted by a cry of "Hear," and "Hear, hear," makes its first appearance in 1769, Mr. Grenville being the first recorded user thereof. Pope had written of "the 'hear him' of the house of commons" and Bolingbroke of repeated "Hear him" ringing in a speaker's ears, and in the younger Pitt's time "Hear him, hear him," was still the cry.—London Chronicle.
