THE WAY TO DO IT.

Exercise three times a day;
Feed yourself on simple fare.
Mostly made of bran and hay.
Revel in the open air;
Never give way to your fears;
Sleep just like a baby;
Then you'll live a hundred years—
May be.

Wear no ropes about your throat;
Do not eat late lunches;
Do, oh! do not rock the boat;
Shy away from punches;
Do not drink too many beers;
Let not debts distress;
Then you'll live a hundred years—
More or less.

Don't dispute with men who wear
Larger fists than you;
Do not give up in despair,
Though the rent is due;
Do not waste your strength in tears;
As for trouble, scout it;
Then you'll live a hundred years—
Doubt it?

Do not umpire baseball games;
Don't for office run;
Do not call a fellow names,
If he has a gun;
Unto wisdom lend your ears;
Shun the festive schooner;
Then you'll live a hundred years—
If you don't die sooner.

—Piqua (Ohio) Call.

Run For Success.

The excuses some people make for their stolidity and failure are like the old woman's excuse for her idle clock. She said that as long as it wasn't running it was right twice in 24 hours, while if she started it going it might never be right.

People may be right once in a while by standing still. But it is no credit to them.

Better to make a run for it, even though there be many missteps.

The failures, who have never honestly tried, always have a lot to say about bad luck. They forget that those who have tried and succeeded might also have set down and summoned a horde of hindrances, but had something better to think about, and stepped boldly out and marched ahead.

The unsuccessful person is he who has said: "The way is dark, and I have no light; mountains are to be climbed, and there is no path; rivers to be crossed, and no bridge. No, I will not attempt the journey. I am safe where I am."

The successful one has said, "Well, I'll try; here goes!" and, saving his breath and energy for better purposes than mere croakings, gets there.

Often when defeat seems to be crushing us some slight adjustment reverses the entire situation.

Hindrances that we surmount become helps, because surmounting strengthens.—Atlanta Journal.

Fell Off Bridge.

On Saturday evening Willie B., a little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Covell, was walking the railing on the bridge just beyond the river. She lost her balance and fell to the ground about 20 feet. Fortunately she was not seriously hurt, but it was a narrow escape.

Correction.

In the report of the reception given by Mrs. Vines and Mrs. McClellan, as sent The Reflector Saturday, the names of Mesdames Baker and Forbes and Miss Alice Blow were omitted. We have been requested to call attention to the omission as it was an oversight.

GRADED SCHOOL RANKS.

Its Graduates Prepared for College--High School Features Urged.

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

Recently I wrote to Dr. F. P. Venable, president of University of North Carolina, explained to him the kind and quality of work which we are doing in the Greenville graded school, and requested that our graduates be allowed to enter the Freshman class of that institution without the usual embarrassing and difficult entrance examinations. To my great satisfaction, he agreed to do so, thus making the system of public education complete, so far as Greenville is concerned. The denominational colleges will honor us in the same way, I am sure. Many of the leading seminaries will be glad to enter the graduates of our school into their sophomore classes giving us full credit for having done the work of their freshman year.

After an existence of three years the school has taken its position in the rank of the older graded schools in such towns as Wilson, Rocky Mount, Kinston, Washington, etc. It seems to me that Greenville may well congratulate herself on what her schools have accomplished in so short a time. Few towns in the State have been able to make such a splendid showing in a period of only three years.

Since coming here, I have tried very hard to strengthen the high school department of the school. No graded school can have a large, strong high school during the first two or three years of its existence. The time has come when this department can be made much better and stronger than it is now, and I am trying very hard to obtain such a desirable result.

The high school department of every grade school ought to prepare young men for the freshman class of the State University, and young women for the same class at the State Normal and Industrial college. The system of public education is then complete. Since most of the leading denominational colleges take up the work at the same place as the State colleges, there is no deficiency to be overcome if the high school graduate should choose some of these colleges in preference to State schools. If the different types of educational institutions have their parts of the great system of education so correlated, there is no "missing link," no defect to overcome from the time the student enters the first grade until he takes Ph. D., degree in the best colleges and universities in America and Europe. Or if he should choose to take a course at some mechanical, agricultural or commercial college, there are no deficiencies in the preparation of the student, provided he has finished his high school course, a thing every child should by all means do.

If there can be built up in the Greenville grade schools a strong, high-grade high school department, and we have practically attained it already, the need of patronizing private high schools, academies,

&c, is entirely overcome. Those people who prefer sending their daughters to the seminaries and conservatories will find that by having them graduate here, a year is saved, and in addition, quite a handsome little sum of money. Those boys and girls who do not expect to attend college ought to graduate in high school department. They will find that it is a kind of people's college where they get a training that will enable them to cope successfully with at least half the college graduates, and they have scores of chances of success in life over the half educated man.

I am very anxious to see a good, sound high-school sentiment developed in Greenville. There never was a greater mistake than is made when a young man or woman finishes six, seven, or perhaps eight grades of his education and then deliberately gives it all up to accept some kind of work for a mere pittance, or for some other frivolous reason. Of course I know some boys and girls necessarily have to work, but these are few in number. "Where there is a will there is a way" is a true adage, and if young people and their parents will do a little practical thinking, there is no reason why the number of educated boys and girls in this town cannot be greatly increased within the next few years. H. B. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Skinner have moved from Oakley to Kinston. We regret to lose them, but they take with them the best wishes of all.

Ice Plant Building.

R. Greene is at work on the building for his ice plant, so as to have it ready for the machinery as soon as that arrives. The location of the plant is on Fifth street between Cotanch and Reade.

Bank Improvement.

The putting in of a plate glass front gives the Bank of Greenville building a much improved appearance. Changes have also been made inside the building that add to its convenience.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town.

Ayden, N. C., May 15, 1906.

Misses Clyde Harrison and Georgia Joyner, of the Winterville High school, have been visiting Miss Ida W. Edwards.

W. C. Buhmann left Saturday for Norfolk.

Prof. Covington, principal of the graded school, has gone to his home in South Carolina. We hope the professor will return next session. He is a clever gentleman and very much admired by our people.

J. S. Hart and J. A. Griffin left Monday for Florida. They will combine business with pleasure and will be gone a week or ten days.

Things were a little lively in town Saturday and our new chief was kept busy. He is a whole wheelbarrow. He gets them there.

The two big horses of Holton, Spier & Co. ran away on our streets Saturday. Outside of a few hand cart, barrels, mashed boxes and a crowd of badly scared people the damage was slight.

Something like 300 bales of cotton have been bought and shipped from this point within the last three days. Price paid 11-14 cents.

Sunday night a tenant house on the farm of Jesse Hart was burned. The house was occupied by a colored man, who with his family barely escaped. The entire contents of the house were destroyed, except one mattress two quilts.

Miss Florence Hardy who has been visiting relatives here returned to Greenville Saturday.

Mrs. J. H. Savage and children are visiting her parents in Greenville.

Last Saturday night out on the Claud Cannon place about two miles from Ayden, John Lewis Williams shot Cephas Harris with a pistol. The ball entered the left breast and ranged downward and has not yet been extracted. The wounded man is at this time in a very serious condition. The defendant Williams is held in a one thousand dollar bond for his appearance at court in September and to await further developments in the wounded man's condition. Williams was unable to give bond and is now rusticated behind iron bars.

The Need for Clean Men.

If one were to go to the President of the United States and ask him to name the country's greatest need he would reply in his quick, conclusive way, "Clean men." He knows. Smart men there are by the thousands; rich men abound more than in any other age of the world; able men are found in every State and township, but even from a population of eighty millions the chief executive has difficulty in finding the man of exceptional character for a post which requires a square and flawless morality. It is to his credit that he misses no opportunity to preach clean manhood. But neither presidents nor teachers can do the work of fathers except in their own families. We do not mean to underestimate the marvellous influence of the mother. In most lands men who reach success give their mothers the credit. "All that I am I owe to my mother," said Lincoln. "It was you who taught me to write so. You really did, dear mother," said the crabbed Carlyle. We get our moral qualities from our mothers, our mental from our fathers, say the physiologists, and as we look back we find this maternal affection the loveliest thing on earth. But isn't there a conviction down deep in our souls that we should have done much better if our fathers had taken time and trouble to share our confidences in the years that counted most?—From The Delineator for June.

The closing exercises of the graded school were held in the Baptist church Friday night. There were several beautiful songs by the pupils. Prof. J. B. Carlyle who was to have delivered the address failed to be present. In his absence Rev. J. E. Ayscue, of Greenville, spoke and it is but just to say that our people never heard a better impromptu speech. The large throng of people present were delighted with the elegant speech. Diplomas were presented to Miss Helen Quinerly and Allen Corman they having completed the prescribed course of study in this school. Prof. Ragsdale presented those and spoke for a few moments to the people urging them to stand by the school which was doing such admirable work. The whole evening was delightfully spent by those who were fortunate enough to get in the building, many not being able to do so on account of the large crowd present.

WHEN STEVENSON DIED.

The Story as Told by the Mother of the Gifted Author.

Here is the story of the death of Robert Louis Stevenson, told in the words of his mother in one of her letters from Samoa in 1894: "How am I to tell you the terrible news that my beloved son was suddenly called home last evening? At 6 o'clock he was well, hungry for dinner, and helping Fanny (his wife) to make a mayonnaise sauce, when suddenly he put both hands to his head and said, 'Oh, what a pain!' and then added, 'Do I look strange?' Fanny said no, not wishing to alarm him, and helped him into the hall, where she put him into the nearest easy chair. She called for us to come, and I was there in a minute, but he was unconscious before I reached his side and remained so for two hours, till at ten minutes past 8 p. m. all was over."

Do coming events cast shadows before? There is a hint of it in this. Mrs. Stevenson wrote: "For a day or two Fanny had been telling us that she knew--that she felt--something dreadful was going to happen to some one we cared for, as she put it to one of our friends. On Monday she was very low about it and upset, and dear Lou tried hard to cheer her. He read aloud to her the chapter of his book that he had just finished, played a game or two of patience to induce her to look on, and I fancy it was as much for her sake as his own that the mayonnaise sauce was begun upon. And, strangely enough, both of them had agreed that it could not be to either of them that the dreadful thing was to happen! Thus far and no farther can our intuition, our second sight, go."

Had Stevenson himself a "vision of the future?" "Lafaele told us that when he was on his way to milk the cows, a very short time before Louis was struck down, he saw him throw open the Venetian shutters of his window and gaze up at the top of Vaea mountain. When he noticed Lafaele he waved his hand and called to him cheerily." Now Stevenson sleeps on that mountain top.

His Famous Shot.

A sporting gentleman, who had the reputation of being a very bad shot, invited some of his friends to dine with him.

Before dinner he showed them a target painted on a barn door, with a bullet right in the bullseye.

This he claimed to have shot at 1,000 yards' distance.

As nobody believed him he offered to bet the price of an oyster supper on it. On one of his guests accepting the wager he produced two witnesses whose veracity could not be doubted to prove his assertion.

Since they both stated that he had done what he claimed he won his bet.

During dinner the loser of the wager inquired how the host had managed to fire such an excellent shot.

"The host answered:

"Well; I shot the bullet at the door at a distance of 1,000 yards, and then I painted the target round it."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Shepherd Puzzle.

A shepherd on his way to market with some sheep met a man who said, "Good morning, my friend, with your score of sheep." Said the shepherd, "I have not a score, but if I had as many more than I have, half as many more, and two and a half sheep, I should have just a score." How many sheep had he? Answer: Seven. Figure it out.

Selected Her Victims.

An official in the government service at Washington tells of the rupture of the friendly relations that had so long subsisted between his daughter of nine years, named Katharine, and another little girl of the same age called Marie. It appears that immediately after the falling out the youngster last mentioned was moved to communicate to the parents of Katherine certain details of the distressing occurrence. When next the two children met there ensued some rather severe re-primations. Said Katherine:

"I think you're just a hateful, mean thing to tell my father and mother that I bit you. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

"Well," retorted Marie, "I think you ought to have been ashamed like me."

"Suppose I did bite you," vehemently answered Katherine. "I bite sometimes, don't you?"

Whereupon Marie evinced her greatest indignation. "Let me bite you one thing," she observed, "I do bite I never bite any one outside my own family!"—New York Times

He Had Remembered.

Hiram Bobbs was absentminded. He admitted that himself. Still, even he was occasionally surprised by his own failings. One morning he reached his office unaccountably late. "Dear me!" he thought. "Where can I have been?"

The answer was not forthcoming. Hiram sat down at his desk and took out his pocket handkerchief. It was tied tightly in a knot.

"Now," he exclaimed, "what was that for? Oh, yes! Marthy told me to get my shoes soled."

With an air of resignation to the whims of womanhood he put on his hat, closed his desk, and went out to the "soled-while-you-wait" cobbler's. He went in and sat down, took off his shoes, and settled back in a chair to read his newspaper.

"What is it, Mr. Bobbs?" inquired the cobbler.

"What? Oh, er—er—er—why—oh, yes! I want my shoes soled."

"Pardon me, sir," said the cobbler, "but I finished sooling them only half an hour ago. They can't be worn out yet, sir."

A few years ago in a murder case being tried at Farmington, Me., the Hon. C. N. Blanchard of Wilton, now a member of Governor Cobb's council, was conducting the case of the accused, for whom he was trying, with doubtful success, to make out a case of insanity.

It appeared during the trial that the prisoner had been in many quarrels and had been brought many times before the courts to answer to the law for his conduct. At one of these trials ex-Judge Richard Thompson, formerly of Boston, but now a retired farmer in the town of Jay, Me., presided as trial justice.

Thompson was a witness at the murder trial above alluded to and was being questioned by Mr. Blanchard. The attorney, true to his purpose of establishing the insanity of his client, queried the ex-judge as follows: "Judge Thompson, did you notice any evidences of mental weakness or peculiarities in the defendant at this trial?"

Sixty one whiskey cases on the docket for trial at Durham Superior Court this week is a record not to be envied.

The sight of the gallows makes a man change front some time. The man Rogers, of Durham, who killed his wife and spoke boastfully of the crime, saying among other things that he wanted to hang, has changed tune as the time of his trial arrives. He is putting up a defense and says he don't want to hang at all.

The Edgecombe county man who lost nearly $40 in money in the burning of his home, and after a neighbor had several times advised him to put it in a bank, was no more foolish than many other people. Notwithstanding we have three good banks in Greenville and one each in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville and Winterville, making seven in the county, there are plenty of people in Pitt who instead of putting their money in these banks, keep it in their homes and take the risk of losing it by fire or burglars.

The Water and Light Commission has not seen it that way yet, but Greenville certainly ought to have a day electric current. Everything that will promote the establishment of new enterprises ought to be provided. If day electric current was provided a number of small manufacturing enterprises would soon follow, to say nothing of the many applications for fans in residences and business houses. Unless Greenville holds out such inducements as will show this is a good place to locate and do business, the town can not hope to gain many new comers. They will seek the towns that offer the best advantages.

San Francisco is setting a precedent that is worthy of notice. Before the late disaster it was wide open for saloons and the city was full of them. When the earthquake and fire came all the saloons not destroyed were ordered closed until the excitement subsided and the city started back toward normal conditions. Through the severe ordeal the order was so good and the absence of crime so marked as to occasion comment. Mayor Schmitz attributed this to the rigid enforcement of the rule against the sale of liquor. Now the idea has taken hold there if liquor is a bad thing to sell in a time of trouble and disaster, it is just as bad to sell it in times of contentment and prosperity, hence by unanimous vote of the police board all saloon license in the city have been revoked. Someday the entire nation will be awakened to the fact that saloons are a great evil.

They may drag along at snail pace on other things, but when it comes to pension bills Congress puts them through at a record breaking gait.

"LET THEM BE GOOD MEN."

Such are the frequent utterances concerning the men who are to be nominated for the various State and county offices to be filled in North Carolina this year. There seems to be a set determination with the people to bring to the front only good men for the offices. And this is correct. A public office is a public trust, truly; and it is unreasonable for any unfit man to ask the support of the people. And a man's intellectual attainments are not the only qualifications to consider in his fitness for office. While the public interest should not be intrusted to one who has not the intellectual ability to discharge the duty imposed on him by virtue and power of the office; it is not always the most brilliant men intellectually who is best fitted to serve the people's interest in office. Some of the world's brightest men intellectually have had faults and failings which made them unfit for public trust. The people desire to place in office men of good common sense backed up by convictions of right and moral excellence which will give assurance of conscientious service to the best interest of all. But with all the care that may be exercised, it is probable that here and there some who are not the best men in every sense may ask to be honored with public office. It has been so before and doubtless will be so again; but let us have as few such cases as possible.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

WHY DON'T YOU?

When you write a letter, why don't you date it? Why don't you name your postoffice? Why don't you properly sign your name to it in plain English? Why don't you properly direct it, stamp it, and mail it?

When you wish the address of your paper changed from one office to another, why don't you simply write us a postal card giving name of office from which, and the office to which you wish change made? And then be sure to write your own name plainly.

It is very important that the name and proper address should always appear in every letter to insure prompt, proper and satisfactory attention. The average reader would be astonished to know the number of important letters we receive but cannot attend to properly because the writer failed to observe the above points of great importance. Many dollars now await entry to the credit of sender because he failed to sign his name, or name his postoffice. Why blame us for your neglect?—Progressive Farmer.

The Northern papers continue to print with commendation the shrewd statement of the North Carolina colored preacher who prefaced the passing of the collection plate with this remark: "Salvation's free, brethren, salvation free! It don't cost nothing! But we have to pay the freight on it. We will now pass around the hat and collect the freight charges."—News & Observer

Closing of the School at Smithtown

The closing exercises of the school taught by Misses Mollye Bryan and Susie Keel, at Smithtown, closed last Wednesday night with splendid exercises by the children. The program consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues, drills, etc. Each piece was so well rendered that one could not be mentioned without naming all. This school has done fine work the past session. The work had to be suspended after Christmas and the house enlarged, putting in two teachers. There are some splendid men in this community and they are determined that their children shall have the best advantages. The teachers in the school have done fine work and the entertainment was a fitting climax to an unusually successful session. A large crowd was present and everybody was lavish in praise of the entertainment which showed that the children had been in the hands of teachers worthy of their profession.

He Was in Such a Hurry.

A man who has resided in Cairo told this tale as an illustration of the dilatory ways of Arabian trades people:

"A certain gentleman ordered a swing to be erected in his garden for the use of his little boy, aged six. He waited and waited, but the swing never arrived. In due course of time that boy grew up to man's estate and became himself the father of a little boy. When his son was six years old he remembered how his own father had ordered a swing to be made for him. So he called on the tradesman, who lived at his gate, and asked him to send up the swing that had been ordered twenty years before. The man agreed to do so. The little boy becoming impatient after three weeks, his father called again and remonstrated with the Arabian as to his dilatoriness. The indignant tradesman replied that he could not really undertake to serve any one who was in such a hurry."

THE SECURITY BOND SUIT.

Our now popular Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security" Bond Suit originated last season in an attempt to furnish progressive dealers with a really meritorious boy's suit that can be sold at $5.00 with an unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back should the suit prove defective. After considerable experimenting as to fabrics, tailoring, improved features, such as

Double seats, double double knees, extra strong thread, linings waist band, etc.

We succeeded in producing a guaranteed boy's suit that is proving a tremendous success with dealers now selling it. The "security" bond suit is good because it is so thoroughly reinforced throughout. Our success of last season has encouraged us to still greater efforts, and we are determined that the future of the Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security Bond Suit" shall be a bright one from your standpoint and ours.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

How to Play the Exciting Game Called Touch the Third.

To play "tierce," or "touch the third," the company must stand in a circle in pairs, one behind the other, excepting in one place, where they stand three deep. One person stands outside the circle and is on no account allowed to go within it. The object is to touch the third one, wherever she may stand. But when he attempts this she darts into the circle and takes her place before one of the others. Then the third one, who stands back of her, becomes the object. But she likewise slips into the circle and takes her place in front of some one else. The pursuer is thus led from point to point in the circle, for he must always aim at the one who forms the outside of a row of three. Any one caught changes places with the pursuer. This is something like the old game of fox and geese.

Game of Grammar.

The game of grammar is very enjoyable. One plays teacher and the others pupils. The teacher says, "Write a list of nouns." The pupils get to work, and the teacher watches their lists. The one who first makes the mistake of writing down something which is not the "name of anything"—i. e., a noun—has a bad mark set down against him.

Then "verbs" are required, and the same procedure follows. Next "adjectives," next "adverbs," etc., until all are ready to quit.

A-von, Not Av-on.

Most boys and girls if asked the name of that town in England that Shakespeare has made famous most of them would be likely to answer, "Stratford-on-Av-on." And neither he nor any one else would have a right to find fault with them for pronouncing the name of the river in that way, for almost everybody calls it Av-on. Your dictionary will tell you, however, that it is A-von. Ask the teacher of your geography class. Perhaps he or she may have fallen into the error of saying Av-on.

A Queer Word.

There are lots of queer things about the English language, as you have been told before, but that is only another reason why it should be diligently studied. Here is the word "charm," for example, which has two derivations, according to the sense in which it is used. When we use it as meaning a magic spell, or incantation, it is from the Latin "carmen," a song. But when we use it in the sense of grace or beauty it is from the Greek word "charma."

The Name "Easter."

Easter has, from the earliest times of Christianity, been celebrated as the Christian Passover, or festival of the resurrection of Christ. The name is derived from the old Saxon word oster, which means rising, whence also is derived the word east, or the region of the rising sun. In the primitive days of Christianity Easter was celebrated on the day of the full moon which falls on March 21 or next thereafter, but by the council of Nice, in the year 325, the rule was adopted which makes Easter day always the first Sunday after the full moon which happens on March 21 or next thereafter, and if the full moon happens on a Sunday Easter is the Sunday after. By this arrangement Easter may come as early as March 22 or as late as April 25.

Lying In Bed.

Avoid a cramped position as you go to sleep. If the base of the brain, the spine or the chest is especially tired, take the middle of the bed and place a pillow under you perpendicularly, so that it reaches just below shoulder blades and the head hangs over slightly at the top—enough to throw out the chin. Then throw the arms out horizontally. This expands the chest wonderfully, and, in fact, recuperates all the upper part of the body. When the posture becomes irksome, turn the pillow about at once and assume the usual sleeping attitude. Let all the muscles of the body remain as passive as possible.

A Compliment.

Old Woman (awaiting magistrate's signature to her declaration that she has lost a pawn ticket)—An awkward thing, your honor, to lose a pawn ticket.

Police Superintendent—Sh-h-h. Old Woman (not to be suppressed)—Ahem! It's an awkward thing, yer honor, to lose a pawn ticket.

Magistrate—My good woman, I never lost one.

Old Woman—Ah! Sure, yer honor, some people are very careful.—Punch.

Nothing In It.

A certain young wife helps out her husband's somewhat slender income by doing dressmaking for her friends. Upon coming home one evening, he found her cutting up a piece of goods for a waist, and inquired:

"Well, dear, what do you expect to get out of that?"

"Oh, two dollars, I guess!" was the reply.

Later on the parents observed their little five-year-old daughter engaged, with a pair of scissors, in cutting into small fragments a scrap of the same goods.

"What are you doing—making your dolly a dress?" the father asked.

The little girl sighed. "No! I was trying to get a penny out of it, but I haven't found it yet," was the little girl's reply.—American.

BIG GUNS A BURDEN.

Expensive to Build and Test and Soon
Get Out of Gear.

"When a big gun is made it becomes a perpetual charge on the expense account of the government," remarked the inspector of naval ordnance. "It costs a lot to make it, too, to try it when it is mounted, and its extreme limit of life is 100 shots. The largest guns we make now are twelve inch. They are from forty to fifty feet long, and the weight of the gun will cause it to droop and in a few years render it useless. It has to be sent back to the ordnance yard at intervals to have its rifling 'trued up.' Even the toughest steel, with the highest elastic limit and greatest tensile strength, will bend under its own weight. If you support a bar of steel even a few inches long at both ends for a long time it will curve down in the center to a degree that cannot indeed be detected without the aid of precise instruments, but it will take a permanent set, and a gun does the same thing in a greater measure. When we try a gun the armor makers furnish the plate, the gunmaker the gun, the shellmakers the projectile and the government the powder. The total cost of a shot is approximately $1,000, and we usually fire three shots at different distances.

"The shell is casehardened at its point and now carries a charge of oleaginous graphite in its nose, which breaks at the moment of impact and oils the hole in the armor. The patent on that graphite scheme cost the government $50,000. The shell simply bores its way through the armor, and its progress is aided very materially by the graphite. The navy exacts armor that can't be pierced and shells that will go through anything, so we have about arrived at the paradox of an irresistible force meeting an impenetrable body. As a result the few makers of this high quality of steel are now able to furnish from the plants constructed under the fostering care of the government a much higher grade of steel to the trade than ever before. The tensile strength and the elastic limit of steel have been raised in the general market from 50,000 pounds a square inch to 275,000 for one and from 45,000 to 185,000 pounds a square inch for the other within a few years, and this as an indirect result of the government's exactions.

"It's very seldom a gun is fired after it is mounted. Gun pointers are used for drill, and once or twice a year the gun is used for actual target practice and fired once or possibly twice. But it is too expensive a machine to use for practice when there are exact ways of testing the range and accuracy by triangulation and the known qualities of the powder and other factors that apply to it and which are preserved from its first test."

Nothing too GOOD

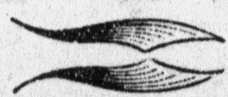

FOR

OUR CUSTOMERS

we are always looking for something better; always working to secure values and styles superior to other stores. when

The Ladies Home Journal

began to sell paper patterns we began to investigate. we said to ourselves,

THE LADIES HOME JOURNAL

Is the leading Womans Magazine. It is first class and has never done anything in a second class way. We knew that its reputation was at stake. Our investigation convinced us that the patterns are as high grade as the Magazine

Furthermore the Ladies Home Journal added a new feature which makes these patterns much more desirable than any other pattern. They furnish a Guide Chart free with each pattern. This Chart shows exactly how the pattern is to be put together. It is so comprehensive that a child can understand it. It is a boon to ladies who are inexperienced in garment cutting and garment making. Mothers advise us that by the aid of the Guide Chart furnished with each

they train their daughters to do their own sewing

But there is still another point to consider. The patterns are all new, no old styles, no ancient creations; all new, all up-to-date and perfect in fit and style, and so much more easily understood than other patterns that one trial will convince you and make you a regular customer
