A DAY IN WINTERVILLE.

Editor E. E. Hilliard, of the Scotland Neck Commonwealth, who delivered the literary address at the recent commencement of Winterville High School, speaks of that town as follows in his paper:

Fifteen years ago when the Scotland Neck railroad was extended to Greenville and then on to Kinston the only thing at the point which is now the prosperous and lovely town of Winterville six miles below Greenville was a wood rack of Mr. A. G. Cox. In the pine forest Mr. Cox commenced to cut wood and supply the railroad and other interests, and this was the beginning of the work which has in a few years developed into important manufacturing industries and built a prosperous town.

Mr. Cox soon conceived the idea of laying off a town, and being a man of deep and abiding moral convictions, which are shown daily in his consecrated Christian life, he coupled a condition with every deed to real estate that on it there should be no intoxicating liquors manufactured or sold for ninety-nine years.

Winterville is the home of the famous Cox cotton planter, guano sower and many other articles manufactured in that thriving town which but a few years ago was a vast pine forest. Among the many useful things manufactured under Mr. Cox's supervision are cotton planters, guano distributors, carts, back-bands, fine buggies and other things. It is a general opinion, felt and freely expressed, that no man in North Carolina has done more for his community than A. G. Cox has done for Pitt county and the town of Winterville.

The town presents many advantages in pretty homes, well arranged streets, good employment for all who want to work, good water and a healthful atmosphere, and good church facilities; but perhaps the most attractive advantage of all is the educational interest that centers around Winterville High School.

From the very beginning there had been good school interests there but about seven years ago Prior G. E. Lineberry, a young man of sterling worth, scholarship and ability, commenced the work of laying the foundation for a good institution of learning. The Winterville High School, like many other great and good institutions, had a modest beginning, but it has already developed into one of the finest and most efficient and useful institutions of the kind in all the country. There are four good and commodious buildings, one recitation and study building and auditorium, two dormitories for boys and one for girls. The school has the capacity of caring for from eighty to one hundred boarding students, and has this year been taxed to its fullest. The grounds are large and well arranged, and the wise and thoughtful A. G. Cox has still other adjacent lots reserved for their enlargement whenever it becomes necessary.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Wednesday, warmer Wednesday.

GOL. P. H. PEARSALL AND HIS INTERVIEW.

Col. Pearsall, the manager of Hon. Franklin McNeil, admits that he is the attorney of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Co., but he thinks it ought to be considered of little importance, because he is the attorney of a lesser railroad, and his salary is small. He modestly underestimates his power and influence. He is the attorney of a railroad that is the backbone of the great Merger system in Eastern North Carolina and it is backed by the Rocketellers.

A railroad lawyer is sometimes bigger than his salary—that is an instance. On the day after my card announcing my candidacy in the News and Observer, that paper published an item that Hon. Franklin McNeil had gone to New Bern. It was no doubt supposed by the oppressed shippers along the line of the A. & N. C. R. R. that Mr. McNeil had gone to New Bern to take steps to stop overcharges, and reduce the excessive freights and rates complained of all along the line. But instead of relief for the suffering shippers, it was to secure the valuable services of Col. Pearsall, the attorney of that road, to conduct his campaign, was it not? Did not Col. Pearsall begin his active campaign within less than two days? Col. Pearsall introduced, that same week, the resolution of instructions in the Craven county convention, did he not? He failed to tell the people that he and his chief have free transportation over the railroads. My friends have not.

It has been said that the great Southern Railway Company passed over its able and experienced lawyers living in the western part of the State, Bason, Busbee, King, Manley, Means, Linn, Caldwell, Irwin, and others, and made as its chief counsel Col. W. B. Rodman, of Washington, N. C., (now of Charlotte,) on account of his great political power. When the State witnesses what happened in Craven upon the motion of Col. Pearsall, and in Mecklenburg under the fine "Italian band" of the Southern's magic hand, Col. Pearsall will understand that his chief builded wiser than he knew.

Under the magic wand of Col. Pearsall, attorney for the A. & N. C. R. R. Co., manager for Mr. McNeil, and the allied influences he has set in motion along the S. A. L. Railroad, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Southern, he would be amazed to see the effect of his letters, that fall like snowflakes all over the State, and of his travels and that of the allied influences. It costs them nothing!! Free passes!!!

Will the descendants of the men of Mecklenburg, Alamance, the Cape Fear and Halifax submit to this? How will the Democratic party meet this question at the polls? If it nominates the candidate for Corporation Commissioner secured by the manipulations of the railroads, what can be said or done to defend such action? If the people will be allowed to open their eyes, they will see who it is that is getting through resolutions of indorsement and who is suppressing news of my position and campaign.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town.

Ayden, N. C., May 29, 1906.

Since our last items there have been two deaths here. On Friday night the infant child of Mr. Oscar Moore died and was buried Saturday afternoon. Saturday night the infant of J. A. Harrington died and was laid to rest Sunday afternoon. Both infants were buried in Ayden cemetery. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

We regret to learn that our friend Jesse Canton is sick with measles and that J. J. Harrington is confined to his home with fever. We hope both may soon recover and be able to resume their business affairs.

The colored man who was so seriously shot sometime ago is very much improved and there are strong hopes of his ultimate recovery.

Miss Clara Forrest came up Monday from a visit down the road.

Miss Sallie Bet Quinerly, after a visit to Grifton came home yesterday. She was accompanied by her little friend, Miss Earl Tucker, of Grifton.

Saturday was a gala day in Ayden. There were two brass bands, a town full of colored folks, plenty of booze in evidence, but under the circumstances for a lively, jolly set it was one of the best behaved crowds we ever saw. We never heard of a disturbance. It seemed to be the purpose of all to have a good, old time and they had it.

H. T. Savage is here on a visit to his uncle, J. H. Savage.

Mrs. J. H. Savage came home from a visit to friends in Greenville.

Miss Della Smith and little nephew, Jamie, came home from over the river yesterday.

Mrs. J. T. Smith, Sr., has returned from a visit in the country. The rain just came right. There are many light hearts.

At a meeting of the directors of the graded school, Friday night, the selection of a principal was left open until another meeting of the board. The following were re-elected as teachers for the various grades for the fall session: Misses Alyce Taylor, Mary Long Whitehead, Hennie Brown, Dora Hornaday and Mrs. F. G. Buhmann, Mrs. Staucill Hodges will have charge of the music department.

Eugene Edwards and wife, of Hookerton, have been visiting their father, J. J. Edwards.

Sunday morning Dr. L. C. Skinner carried a negro boy to the hospital at Washington to be treated for appendicitis. While undergoing the treatment Sunday night the boy died. His remains were brought back to Ayden yesterday.

If you would spend an evening of real pleasure and profit, attend the concert of the singing class from the Oxford Orphan Asylum, at Ayden, June 7th, 1906, at 8 o'clock p. m.

By attending the orphan children's concert you encourage and

AN APT SUGGESTION.

The Washington Post, a great friend of President Roosevelt's, says: "It is expected that the Department of Justice will prosecute the coal roads as vigorously as the Santa Fe was prosecuted." Precisely! Harmon and Judson, who had been employed as special counsel to prosecute the Santa Fe, were dismissed because they really wanted to prosecute it; and Paul Morton who had been a party to the violation of law charged against the Santa Fe, was put in the cabinet and with a fine coat of white-wash from the President's brush, was put at the head of a life insurance company.

The Post should have added that the President will prosecute the coal trust as vigorously and effectively as he prosecuted the beef trust; and will probably reprimand Charles E. Hughes and the courts for the "miscarriage of justice," for the same reason that he reprimanded Judge Humphrey in the "dissenting opinion" expressed in his muck message.

Are You Registered.

Registration books for the coming town election will open in the several wards tomorrow and be open three days from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. All who have become of age or become citizens of the town since last election must register to be entitled to vote. Those registered for the last election will not be required to register again.

Ward Primaries.

The town primaries to nominate candidates for aldermen to be voted for next Monday, will be held in the several wards Friday night of this week. There is yet little talk of candidates.

aid a most important work for the homeless children of North Carolina. Entertainment at Ayden June 7th, 1906.

John S. Hart and James A. Griffin returned from their visit to Florida last Thursday and report an exceedingly fine time. What "Uncle John" can't tell you about beautiful cities, lovely women, huge crocodiles, prodigious alligators and such like one need not travel to South America to find out. "Oh it was a trip right," but "Uncle John" says it don't begin to touch the Old North State.

The remains of Mr. Claude Quinerly, accompanied by his brother, Mr. Watt Quinerly arrived here on Friday evening, and the next morning were taken to the family burying ground near Centerville and buried with Masonic honors. There were very many Masons to participate in the ceremonies and a large crowd was present to attest their regard and esteem for the deceased. Mr. Quinerly was a prominent business man, being a member of the firm of J. W. Quinerly & Bro., who do a large business in Ayden. He leaves two brothers, Messrs. J. W. and W. B. Quinerly, of this place, and one sister, Mrs. Calvin Tucker, of Grifton, who have the heartfelt sympathy of everyone.

Military Company.

A movement is on foot to organize a military company here and several have given in their names for membership. Greenville used to have a good company and we see no reason why she could not do so again.

Odd fellows above all don't miss the meeting tonight. Come, intensive business lessons on installments also touching on building and loan. Nutsed come early, walk light and keep your eyes open.

Attorney-General Ellis, of Ohio, has been invited to Washington by the President to confer about the prosecution of the Standard Oil trust. If more information is really wanted on this subject, the attorney-general of West Virginia might give some evidence, especially of the connection of Senator Elkins with the octopus and its donation to the Republican campaign fund of that State when Elkins was electing a legislature in his interest.

MARSHAL CANROBERT.

A Fearless French Soldier Whose Hair Belonged to History.

It was a singular fact that Marshal Canrobert, the last of the French marshals, offered in himself a constant example of the violations of the regulations of the army in which he was so conspicuous an officer. Throughout almost the whole of his military service Canrobert wore his long hair flowing down upon his shoulders, and this hair was a sort of oriflamme to the soldiers.

But ever since the year 1833 the French army regulations have positively required that every officer and soldier shall wear closely cut hair, "without any tufts, curls or ringlets whatsoever," and severe penalties are provided for persistence in letting the hair grow long.

Canrobert had a profuse mass of hair, which he was very proud of. It was cropped to his great grief when he went into the military school of St. Cyr in 1826, but when as a young officer he went into the Algerian war in 1835 he profited by the relaxation of many regulations there to let his hair grow down his shoulders again. Several years later, also in Algeria, Colonel Canrobert, bareheaded, led a heroic charge at Zaatcha, and his long, floating hair in the thick of the combat served as a rallying sign to the zouaves as they swarmed through the breach.

After this war Canrobert's head of hair had already become so famous that no superior ventured to command him to cut it off, though General Pelissier, who hated him, once called him "professor" in a cafe in Paris, and by way of excuse affected to have mistaken him for a doctor of philosophy on account of his hair.

The Emperor Napoleon III. did once venture to remonstrate with Canrobert for wearing long hair. The marshal's response was very "Frenchy."

"Sire," he said, "my hair belongs to history!"

He did not cut it. It floated all through the French and German war, becoming legendary among the soldiers. Long since it became snow white and fell upon the old marshal's shoulders in his declining days, and it clustered about them as his body lay in state in Paris.

Misplaced Politeness.

The Barrow family possessed a dog named Growler. If addressed politely, Growler instantly obeyed all reasonable commands, but if spoken to crossly the sensitive dog crept under the sofa and sulked. At such times as she wished to be alone it was Mrs. Barrow's habit to hold the door open and remark courteously to the discriminating animal, "Please go out, my dear." And Growler, wagging a cheerful tail, always went.

One evening while Mrs. Barrow sat reading by her evening lamp a large June bug entered the room and behaved as June bugs usually do. The absentminded lady, conscious of the disturbance without fully realizing what caused it, rose abstractedly, politely opened the door and, to the great delight of the family, murmured gently: "Please go out, my dear."

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Some Helpful Suggestions For the Busy Housewife.

To clean unvarnished black walnut, milk, sour or sweet, well rubbed in with a soft flannel, will make it look like new.

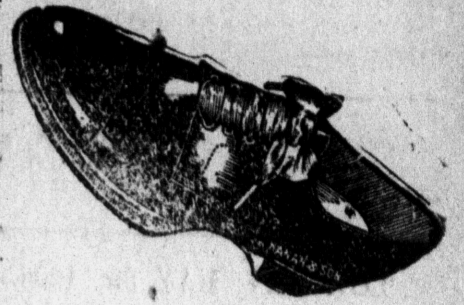

A fluid that will remove spots from furniture and all kinds of fabrics without injuring the color is made of one ounce of aqua ammonia, one of glycerin, one of castile soap and one ounce also of spirits of wine. Dissolve the soap in two quarts of soft water, add the other ingredients and apply with a soft sponge and rub well. Even delicately colored silks can be cleaned with this without injury.

Drainpipes or all places that are sour or impure may be cleaned with limewater or carbolic acid.

In packing away winter flannels, etc., in bureau or cupboard drawers sprinkle powdered borax and cloves under the bottom paper to keep out moths.

To rid the house of little red ants saturate a cloth with oil of sassafras and put where they are.

They might search for years and not find a better man for representative than Mr. Hilliard. He is above reproach in every walk of life and always stands on the side of right.

One thing has been developed in the strenuous debate in the Senate on the railroad rate bill and that is that Vice-President Fairbanks is a most incompetent presiding officer.

Mr. Carnegie says he would work for a dollar a day, if it was necessary. How many dollars he makes every day out of work of other men and through the virtual monopoly, the tariff on steel, is the question that interests the American people.

Chairman Shonts confesses that the attempt to "make the dirt fly" at Panama without due preparation was a grave mistake and although he does not say so, in so many words, he evidently thinks the President has been to blame for the "more hurry less speed" plan of operations.

The Republican frauds and scandals are being somewhat lost sight of in the political excitement at Washington, but another batch of 21 indictments against men accused of timber stealing and a further postponement of the trial of some of those indicted for postoffice frauds, not to mention the consular scandals, reminds us that the past six years have produced more frauds, scandals and grafting than ever before.

HIGH PRICES

Do you know that your money will only buy about two-thirds as much now as it would before the present tariff bill was passed? Yet that is the lesson shown by Dun's Index numbers of commodity prices for May 1st, being $06,059, whereas on July 1, 1897, it was $72,455, so $106 now only buys what $72 bought nine years ago. These high prices are very largely caused by the Republican policy of protection which while it apparently produces prosperity, really tugs at your pocket book whether you are a farmer, a professional man, a storekeeper, an artisan, or a laborer. The only man that does not suffer by these high trust prices is the comparatively few who extort these high prices under the protection of this Republican law.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, is on a prospecting tour in this state. He is searching for a mineral called cobalt which is said to have been found in several North Carolina counties.

The case is this:

If a man has one Summer Suit, it ought to be a Serge Suit.

If he has two or more he ought to have a Serge Suit among them

It might seem as though we were trying to make the Serge Suit out a paragon of all the virtues. It is really—at least

THE SECURITY BOND SUIT.

Our now popular Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security" Bond Suit originated last season in an attempt to furnish progressive dealers with a really meritorious boy's suit that can be sold at $5.00 with an unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back should the suit prove defective. After considerable experimenting as to fabrics, tailoring, improved features, such as

Double seats, double knees
extra strong thread, linings waist band, etc.

We succeeded in producing a guaranteed boy's suit that is proving a tremendous success with dealers now selling it. The "security" bond suit is good because it is so thoroughly reinforced throughout. Our success of last season has encouraged us to still greater efforts, and we are determined that the future of the Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security Bond Suit" shall be a bright one from your standpoint and ours.

DOSING THE COOK.

What Would Happen if This Custom Were Now Revived?

An English magazine printed in 1807 affords an opportunity to learn of the hygienic treatment of cooks at that period. Similar proceedings in these enlightened times would promptly depopulate our kitchens. It appears that in England at the date mentioned it was considered the correct thing to administer medicine to cooks at stated intervals. This was insisted upon whether or not they resisted. The theory in vogue as a reason for this heroic treatment was that the continued fumes of cookery and the necessity of drinking often to cool the throat produced bile and humors that injured the sense of taste. The local effect was to excoriate the palate, and unless prompt remedies were applied it became callous and the cook's usefulness imperiled.

To restore the integrity of the organs of taste it was considered imperative to resort to the following treatment: The victim was first subjected to two days of preparatory regimen, when a decoction of manna, senna and salts was administered. One day's rest was allowed, when the dose was repeated. A respite of forty-eight hours intervened, when, if favorable results followed, a heavier dose was given.

The periodical quoted reviews the contingencies likely to arise from this enforced regimen. As a matter of precaution it insists that employers shall make service dependent upon prompt acquiescence in this heroic formula. If the cook is recalcitrant she is either to be dismissed without payment of wages or reduced to the position of scullion. The forced administration of senna, manna and salts to the haughty beings who preside over our kitchens would promptly land heads of households in a police court, to say nothing of preliminary athletic manifestations with available pots and pans.

Plan That Failed.

A certain henpecked husband of Muskogee read in the papers where a girl at Tahlequah had been scared to death by the discharge of several cannon crackers, and straightway went downtown and bought a large supply, intending to fire them. He lusted his wheelbarrow load of combustibles up near his wife's room and touched them off. When the shower of shattered glass and broken pieces of timber ceased, the man felt something cold against his cheek, and, glancing that way, saw his wife with a revolver thrust in his face. She remarked coldly: "Now, you march into the house and go to bed or there'll be a second class funeral." He marched, muttering under his breath: "It might work on a Tahlequah damsel, but on a Muskogee woman, never!" —Prvor Creek Clipper.

QUEER BELGIAN CUSTOMS.

Burning the Dead and Renting Graves to the Indigent.

There is nothing in Belgium, not even a marriage, to which so much pomp and show belong as to a funeral. It is the most important show occasion of a career, and the expense must be a heavy tax on the average family, for one will not economize in the details that custom says are necessary for the dead if such ceremony can be prevented. When a death occurs crape is not hung upon the door, but a notice is sent to all friends and relatives. This when folded is about the size of a sheet of commercial note paper, not placed in an envelope, but folded so the address is written on the outer section, which has a black border an inch deep.

On the receipt of this notice cards are left at the house by men, who call and represent the women of the family. No woman attends a funeral, though it may be her nearest and dearest who lies dead, nor does any woman go to the grave. Grief always appeals to one's sympathies, but it is difficult for a foreigner of Anglo-Saxon stock to associate grief with the usual funeral procession that one sees in Belgium. The hearse is gaudy with gilt and looks top heavy with its ornaments. It is much like a circus chariot in all but shape. The driver wears a fantastic hat and cloak. The hearse is drawn by black horses with trappings of black, and two, sometimes four, men follow it clothed in high pointed hats with streamers quite to their waists and long flying capes of black with more streamers. Then comes a line of carriages, the more the better for popular esteem. It is not necessary to have any one in them. Often the men who ride are smoking. I have counted twenty-five carriages, half of them empty. Only the very rich can buy land outright for their dead. The other people hire the grave for as long a time as they can afford, maybe a year, five years, ten years and very rarely twenty-five years. Then it is taken for another occupant.

Those opponents of cremation who have sentiment as an argument against it are asked to think of this way of doing, which must one day be the only alternative near the large cities. The new coffin is placed upon the remains of the former unless one cares to remove what may be left of what was once the home of a soul. For the very poor there is a harder lot still, as they cannot hire a grave. The potter's field is a large ditch, into which the bodies are placed and covered with quicklime. Does not cremation seem even in a sentimental way preferable to this? Letting out graves explains why there are no old time grave-stones. I asked the workmen around the place, "Where is the old part of the burying ground?" and received for answer, "There isn't any," which a stroll around proved. The oldest grave I could find was but twenty-five years and was a "concession perpetuite," the workmen explained, to the letting of graves, and the inquiries elsewhere verified all their statements.—London Standard.

The Spider's Spinning Machine.

The "spineret" or web machine of the common garden spider is an object worthy of the careful study of every owner of a microscope. It consists of four united masses, each pierced by a multitude of holes, the openings being imperceptible to the naked eye. These several holes each permit the passage of a single thread. Some idea of the infinitesimal fineness of these threads may be gained when it is known that the spider's thread as we see it is made up of upward of 4,000 minute webs, 1,000 from each of the four spineret masses. These 4,000 separate threads unite at the main opening of the spineret, making the single filament from which the spider spins its web.

An Island Classed as a Ship.

The island of Ascension, in the Atlantic, is the property of the British admiralty authorities and is borne on the navy list as a vessel, being classed as a tender to one of his majesty's ships of war. The island is governed by a naval captain, and the men stationed there (chiefly royal marines) are subject to the same rules as they would be on board ship. There is no private property in land, so there are no rents, rates or taxes. The flocks and herds are public property and the meat is issued in rations.

NATURE IS KIND.

Sensations of Those Who Fall From Any Great Height.

"Persons who fall from any great height have little or no recollection of their sensations during the actual falling period," remarked the ambulance surgeon as he finished putting the arm of an accident victim in splints. "Sometimes they know what started their fall, but the manner and sensation of falling is always a blank to them. It seems almost as if nature was kind enough to dull their senses, so that they would have no horrible sensations.

"Yesterday I was called to a man who had fallen thirty feet from a roof. He was seemingly conscious when we picked him up, but he could not remember the process of his fall. He remembered that he stepped on a nail, which started his tumble, but he did not remember that he grabbed at an eaves trough and that he tried to jab his jack-knife into the shingles. But a fellow workman saw him do those things. When my mother fell downstairs there was every indication that she tried to grasp the banister, that she did save herself for an instant the fourth stair from the bottom and that when she finally reached the floor she turned a complete somersault. But she remembered only that she stepped on her dress and pitched down.

"Another man who fell from a roof had the presence of mind to push against a projection so that he landed on a roof twenty feet below. But he had no recollection of that fact. He merely remembered that the scaffolding broke. Oftentimes a fall is accompanied by a somersault in the air, a hurtling against some projection which breaks the fall and a grabbing at things; but, although the victim may be conscious when he is picked up, he has no remembrance of these things. His path downward seems to be an utter blank to him. I really believe it is nature's method of preventing a falling person from becoming hopelessly crazed." — New York Press.

Economical.

The senior member of a large New York house tells the following as an incident of his junior days. The house at that time employed about a dozen male bookkeepers and stenographers and one young lady. This young person was a perfect beauty of the "dizzy blond" type, but practically worthless as a clerk. The junior partner brought the matter to the attention of the senior and suggested that she be dropped.

The old man smiled quizzically.

"Mr. Brown," he said, "we pay that young lady $20 a month. We pay a dozen young fellows $5 each per month less than they could probably get elsewhere—and they stay with us. Think it over."

The young lady was not discharged.—American Spectator.

Piebald Savages.

Piebald savages are among the people and things of which A. E. Pratt writes in "Two Years Among New Guinea Cannibals." He says: "For the most part their bodies were brown, but they were marked with pinkish patches unevenly distributed. This marking might be due to a disease, contracted from a too constant fish diet, but if it were a disease I could not discover that it gave any discomfort. Against this theory must be set this fact, that I observed one man in whom the light markings predominated. In fact, he was quite fresh colored, like a European, and had light hair. These piebald people were not a class apart from the rest of the Hula villagers, but shared their life in every respect."

A Laundry Hint.

The first step in pressing blankets after the tedious process of washing is to fold them evenly when they are perfectly dry, pulling them into shape if one side or corner has become stretched. Then cover with a clean sheet, place a board on top and pile weights upon it, leaving the blankets for a day or two to "iron" themselves.

THE ALLISON AND BAILEY AMENDMENTS.

So much has been said of the Allison and Bailey amendments, that it is well to keep them distinctly in mind in order to understand the controversy about them.

Mr. Bailey proposed to insert in the Hepburn rate bill an amendment denying to the inferior courts of the United States the power to issue preliminary injunctions or restraining orders pending judicial review of any rate fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Allison proposed to vest in the circuit and district courts full jurisdiction to hear and determine all suits arising under the law, and, therefore, conferred the power of issuing preliminary injunctions and restraining orders.

Nothing too GOOD

FOR

OUR CUSTOMERS

we are always looking for something better; always working to secure values and styles superior to other stores. When began to sell paper patterns we began to investigate. We said to ourselves,

THE LADIES HOME JOURNAL

is the leading Women's Magazine. It is first class and has never done anything in a second class way. We knew that its reputation was at stake. Our investigation convinced us that the patterns are as high grade as the Magazine

Furthermore the Ladies Home Journal added a new feature which makes these patterns much more desirable than any other pattern. They furnish a Guide Chart free with each pattern. This Chart shows exactly how the pattern is to be put together. It is so comprehensive that a child can understand it. It is a boon to ladies who are inexperienced in garment cutting and garment making. Mothers advise us that by the aid of the Guide Chart furnished with each

LADIES HOME JOURNAL

They train their daughters to do their own sewing

But there is still another point to consider. The patterns are all new, no old styles, no ancient creations; all new, all up-to-date and perfect in fit and style, and so much more easily understood than other patterns that one trial will convince you and make you a regular customer
