A GOOD WOMAN GONE.

Mrs. Isabella Moore, widow of James Spencer Moore, died at her home in Pactolus township the 28th day of May, 1906, aged about 84 years. She was born in 1822, and was married in 1835, and was the mother of twelve children, G. L. Moore, L. C. Moore, Z. L. Moore, Mrs. David Hyman and Mrs. J. J. Fleming, of Pactolus, Mrs. B. H. Hearne, of Greenville, G. C. Moore, Zeno Moore, Miss Melissa Moore, Miss Jacky Moore and Miss Ellen Moore, of Whitakers, N. C., and McG. Moore, who was wounded and captured at Fort Harrison in 1864, and died of wounds in prison.

Mrs. Moore was indeed a good woman, up to the close of the civil war she was surrounded by considerable wealth and her charity to the poor was unbounded. She united with the Primitive Baptist church many years ago, and was a consistent member up to the time of her death. Her church life was truly beautiful. For the last few years of her life she was feeble and bent with age, but the warm grasp of her hand, and her cheerful voice will long be remembered by the members of her church and the public generally. A FRIEND.

WHO WANTS HIM?

Sheriff Has a Negro He Would Like to Locate.

The negro who was shot by Sheriff Tucker while fleeing from the officer Saturday afternoon, is evidently an escaped convict or fugitive from justice. He first gave his name as Ben Jenkins, but since has claimed several other names as his. He also said he had been in the penitentiary and was yet due a year there on a sentence but did not say he had escaped.

He is a strange negro in this section and no one seems to know him. Sheriff Tucker would like to ascertain if the negro is an escaped convict or if he is wanted in any neighboring county for crime. He is ginger cake color, about 5 feet 6 inches high, weighs about 150 pounds and is bow legged.

Rev. B. W. Spilman.

Rev. B. W. Spilman, of Kinston, occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church here Sunday. He preached good sermons both morning and night, and in the afternoon made an interesting address on Sunday school work. He outlined the course of international lessons series, and emphasized the need of a thorough knowledge of the course to be a successful Sunday school worker.

Thirteen years ago this summer Mr. Spilman supplied the church here, and he has many friends in the community. He was heard gladly on Sunday.

The Fault of the Clock.

Pat and Mike were playing a game of cards in a saloon. Pat kept looking at the clock. Mike said "And faith, what are you looking at the clock for?" "Every time that clock ticks," Pat replied, "J. D. Rockefeller makes $10." Mike dropped his cards and jumped on the table. "What in faith are you going to do?" asked Pat. "I am going to stop the clock," answered Mike.

DREAMS vs REALITIES.

It was ten o'clock on a summer's night
When a maiden dreamed a dream.
Her hopes were bright, and her heart was light,
For in love's kingdom she was queen.

It was eleven o'clock on a moonlight night,
And they had often met,
They plighted troth beneath stars so bright;
And the wedding day was set.

It was twelve o'clock on a wintry night,
And a wife sat all alone,
And she looked unhappily quite,
For husband to the club had gone.

It was one o'clock on a stormy night,
A mother dreamed of love undying,
When suddenly she was awakened
By a baby's crying.

THE GOLDSBORO DEPOT INJUNCTION.

For years the people of Goldsboro have been abusing the railroads entering that city for not building a passenger depot, and now that they have a chance to get one it is headed off by an injunction. The railways have for a long time expressed their willingness to build a union depot if the citizens would agree on a location. This the latter could not do because some of the business men on the main street, where the trains now stop, would not agree to have the depot located further from the center of the town. Present conditions became such a nuisance that appeal was made to the corporation commission to settle the dispute between the two factions. The commission decided upon the location thought to be the best by both the railroads and the majority of the citizens. Because the few who do not want trains taken off the main street, where no depot can be erected, could not have their way they have sought the aid of the courts and have had a restraining order issued against the contemplated location of the depot. The order was issued by Judge O. H. Allen, to be heard by Judge W. R. Allen in Goldsboro on June 20th. This, of course, will delay matters and the traveling public will be just that much longer subjected to the great inconvenience which has already existed for far too long a time. The few persons in Goldsboro who object to the building of a passenger station there seem to forget that the public has some rights and privileges which should be respected and they are doing everything in their power to prevent an improvement on the present inconvenient and annoying conditions which confront every person arriving in or departing from their city. The injunction will hardly amount to more than the delay of the proposed change and an annoyance and expense to the railroads.—Wilmington Messenger.

Buys More Property.

The Raleigh & Pamlico Sound Railroad Company has purchased from W. A. Darden a portion of what is known as the Gorman lot lying between Dickinson avenue and Ninth street. It is the part of the lot next to the property previously purchased by the railroad for a depot. We understand there are options on other adjacent property.

Crop Condition

The government report issued today on the condition of the cotton crop placed it at 84.75, increased crease 6.2.

HOW A NIGGER CAN LIE.

And His Name Was Washington.

A very funny thing happened in the mayors' court this morning before Mayor Wooten.

There was a case against one Henry Davis, colored, for disorderly conduct and assault on one Washington Edwards, colored. The said Washington being a preacher of the Gospel. It appeared from the evidence that the said preacher was employing the wife of the defendant Davis, and that Davis had given notice through The Reflector of Saturday last forbidding harboring or employing his wife, &c, Davis fearing the negro preacher would not see the notice, took a copy of the paper to him Saturday evening and a row followed. The evidence showed that the preacher put his hand on his hip pocket, &c.

Col. Sugg appeared for Davis, and on cross examination asked if he was a preacher, if he preached, if he administered the sacrament, and many other questions, and if he carried a gun. The preacher said he did not carry a gun. Col. Sugg asked if he did not have one in his pocket? He said no. Col. Sugg asked if he was willing to be searched for one. He said yes, whereupon the policeman searched the aforesaid preacher, and lo and behold, he found a Colt's revolver, fully loaded. And his name was Washington.

AGENT DEFAULTED.

Embezzles $1,127 of Railway Funds.

Luther E. Vick, until recently a trusted agent of the East Carolina Railway, at Farmville, was this morning arrested in Tarboro on a warrant sworn out by a representative of the American Surety Company, of New York, which concern carried his bond.

The warrant charges Vick with embezzling $1,127. He was brought to Greenville and this afternoon was taken before the Justice of the Peace, C. D. Rountree, who issued the warrant, and at this writing is in the custody of the Sheriff endeavoring to give bond.

Vick is 23 years old, unmarried, and has hitherto been regarded as an exemplary young man. For two years he has been in the employ of the railroad company, and enjoyed the confidence of his employers to the extent that they would not believe the charges against the agent until personally verifying the figures in the claim made under the bond of the surety company.

Died

Charlie Beverly, aged 6 months, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Latham, died Saturday night at their home in South Greenville after a few days illness with meningitis. There is much sympathy for the parents in their bereavement.

The interment took place at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Cherry Hill cemetery, service being conducted by Rev. H. H. Moore. The pall bearers were Messrs. T. E. Hooker, D. S. Spain, N. W. Jackson, and W. J. Turnage.

AFRAID OF THE DARK.

A recent biography of Robert Louis Stevenson tells this story, on the authority of Stevenson's nurse: "During one of the many feverish, wakeful nights he suffered from, when he lay wearily for the carts' coming (a sign to him of morning), she read to him for hours at his request from the Bible. He fell asleep, soothed by her kind voice, to awake when the sun was bright on the window pane. Again he commanded, 'Read to me, Cummie.' 'Now, what chapter would my laddie like?' she asked. 'Why, it's daylight now,' he answered. 'I am not afraid any longer. Put away the Bible and go on with Ballantyne's story now.'"

Broke the Spell.

"An amusing scene was witnessed in the fourth magistrate's court recently," says the Straits Times of Singapore. "A Javanese was arraigned on a charge of theft. As the man entered the dock, he threw on the ground a hen's egg and then commenced to chew some 'sereh.' This was supposed to work a spell on the magistrate and cause him to discharge the accused. Unfortunately for the schemes of the Javanese, he was seen by the Malay constable in charge of him. This Malay seized the Javanese by the throat and choked him until he spat up the 'sereh' and so broke the spell. The case was postponed."

Flocking to the Cities.

Of the modern tendency to flock to the cities a writer says: "In 1801 not more than 36 per cent of the entire population of England lived in towns and embarked in urban industries. Today they who dwell in cities form more than 66 per cent of the whole. On the other hand, in 1801 the percentage of the nation who lived in strictly rural districts and were occupied in agricultural and rural pursuits amounted to 52 per cent of the whole population. Today it has descended to the alarming level of not more than 18 per cent."

"Luck" in India.

In India, according to a writer in the Bystander, the natives are trying to turn motoring to a profitable account. An Englishman was motoring into Calcutta after playing golf in the park at Barrackpore, and on the way the car passed over a native and only just missed scalping him. As compensation the native was given 10 shillings, with which he hobbled off quite gayly. Ever since natives in the neighborhood of Calcutta have been wildly throwing themselves in the way of every available motor, in the hope of similar "luck!"

The Heaviest Rails.

What are believed to be the heaviest rails in use on any steam railroad in the world are on the belt line around Philadelphia. They weigh 142 pounds to the yard. Concrete with nine inch girders is used, with heavy ballast to make a firm roadbed. One railroad official states that this section of roadbed will last for twenty-five years without repair. This would mean a material reduction in maintenance expense to the road using these rails.

MONDAY, JUNE 4, 1906.

Getting the time of year to be reading excursion announcements.

The railroad officials are rivaling the insurance men at the get rich quick game.

The next thing to think about running from Sheriff Tucker had better remember that long range pistol before putting such thoughts in execution.

We reckon that plot of Russian nihilists out in Portland, Oregon, to come across the continent to kill President Roosevelt, will hardly put a scare on anybody.

Blowhounds are supposed to be kept for trailing criminals, but a bunch of prisoners who escaped from the Rowan county convict camp took the camp hound along with them.

The anarchists could not let the King of Spain get married without throwing a bomb at the carriage containing the king and his bride in the procession in the attempt to kill him. The bridal carriage escaped harm, but eighteen other persons and several horses were killed when the bomb exploded.

A matter of no small magnitude has come out of the recent lynching of the white man in Wadesboro. Governor Glenn, Judge Neal and the solicitor went there to investigate the affair. It seemed not hard to identify certain of the parties who were engaged in the lynching, and the arrest of several resulted. These were given a preliminary hearing before Judge Neal and sixteen were held under $5,000 bond each for trial before the Superior Court. The parties indicted are prominent and well connected and the matter has caused great excitement throughout that section of the State. When a mob gets together to commit a crime, the participants should expect the consequences if caught.

The Republican lobbies of the House of Representatives in Washington are now furnished with mourning benches for the accommodation of those Republican statesmen who have visions of Democratic successors, and there are many who take this pessimistic view of matters.

That our high tariff prevents trade between the United States and the Republics of America south of the Caribbean Sea is shown by the government report that but 12 per cent of their imports comes from the United States. We cannot expect other countries to deal with us, if we raise a barrier against trading with them.

How it Arose, Spread, and Still Flourishes.

Merrill A. Teague, in Everybody's Magazine for June, gives, in his striking leading article, 'Bucket-shop Sharks,' the following account of the rise of bucket-shops:

'The invention of margin gambling was what made bucket-shopping possible. As long as trades were actual and the things bought and sold were actually transferred and the whole price was paid there was no room for speculative markets for the keeper of the bucket-shop.

'It was a quarter of a century ago that transactions on leading stock and cotton exchanges and boards of trade—the marts where prices originate and are fixed—were first counterfeited. Deals were consummated at the 'buckets' with greater ease than on legitimate exchanges, where rigid rules governed each transaction, and where red tape had to be tangled, unraveled, and tangled again. The counterfeit transactions perfectly simulated the genuine. The counterfeiters used quotations established on regular exchanges. There was nothing to prevent, since those quotations were gathered by the telegraph companies and disseminated to anybody who paid for them. Places where the counterfeiters held forth stood cheek by jowl with the offices of regular brokers and bankers; there was no apparent difference in their appearance. But the keepers of bucket-shops held out to all who wished to gamble the inducement of 'quick action' for their money. They charged small commissions, waived interest upon balances supposed to be advanced to cover deficiencies between margins and full values, required narrower margin than would be accepted by regular brokers, and, as an irresistible magnet to attract patronage, offered to accept orders for transactions in fractional lots. Legitimate exchanges countenance trades only when made to fixed units or multiples thereof, the minimum being 100 shares of stock, 10,000 bushels of grain, 100 bales of cotton, and so on. The bucket-shop keeper accepted orders for five shares of stock, 1,000 bushels of grain, and five or ten bales of cotton. Your bucket-shop keeper went on the road to steal all the money that might chance to cross his path. He has never had any more scruples about stealing the five-dollar bank note of the broken-down gambler, the clerk or office boy, than an industrial life insurance company has about accepting the weekly premium of five cents on a policy of insurance on the life of the three months' old babe of unloving, poverty-stricken parents.'

The Cincinnati Enquirer, so long looked upon as the organ of the Ohio Democracy, appears to have hitched up with the Foraker ring, of which boss Cox is a shining light, for it unstintedly praises Foraker for his vote against the railroad rate bill. But this effort of the Enquirer to stem the current of reform in Ohio is evidently not relished, for even the Republican county conventions are denouncing Foraker. The United Democracy of Ohio can get along very well without the Enquirer, which has always been an 'old man of the sea' on their backs to drag them down to the corrupt level of the Republican machine.

The Odd Postures in Which Animals and Fish Seek Repose.

Fish have a density so nearly that of water that they can rest quietly on sand or gravel without apparent effort. Are they asleep? Probably, though they do not shut their eyes. At the beginning of evening, for instance, the gudgeon chooses a sandy spot between stones and remains here, facing the current, its body resting on the lower lobe of the tail and on its pectoral and ventral fins. It is possible that it assumes the same position in winter and remains in it until spring, hibernating. The mackerel and breams sleep in company like the gudgeon, but on a sandy bottom. The pike sleeps in summer near the bank, at the surface, where the sunlight can reach it. The carp keeps near the bottom. The eel hides in holes that it makes in the bank.

The observation of sea fish is more difficult, as may be imagined. It is now agreed that herrings, mackerel and other so called migratory fish pass the winter at the bottom in a kind of lethargy. Do they adopt the gudgeon's position? Perhaps, though Pleville le Peley has seen thousands of mackerel half buried in the mud, holding their tails vertically above it. Batrachians sleep sitting with the head in the air. The toad sleeps by day in holes or under rocks and retires underground for the winter. He burrows backward, his hind feet and the end of his body serving to dig the hole, while he pushes with his fore feet. The marsupials are generally forced by the shape of their bodies to sleep sitting. The phalanger fox sleeps in a crouching posture, the head between the fore feet. The lemurs also crouch, with the long, bushy tail around the hind feet. With the chimpanzees and other apes the hair on the upper arm and the forearm grows in opposite directions. This serves to protect the animal more effectively from the rain when he sleeps crouching in the thick woods or in the brush with his arms folded and pressed against the body. The orang takes his siesta with bent back, head hanging on his chest and sometimes holding to a branch by one of his extended arms, but generally with both arms hanging by his sides.

Penguins and pelicans also rest in a sitting posture. A whole flock takes refuge under a projecting rock, the beak resting on the breast or with neck bent, to allow it to rest on the back. The hare does not sleep with open eyes, as has been wrongfully asserted, for its pupils are hermetically closed during sleep.

The crocodile and the cayman repose on the ground on the entire ventral surface. Lizards sleep with their eyes shut and their mouths open. Turtles naturally take the same position, the land varieties in dry grass or in a shallow burrow, the marine ones at the surface of the sea, on which they float. This is the moment chosen for catching them.

Most of the ruminants lie on the flank. Camels stretch out with neck extended. Deer lie near each other in winter. The horse stretches out his legs. Cats and hares also sometimes stretch themselves.

The carnivores—the cat family, the bear, dog, wolf, fox, etc.—curl up or place the head stretched out on the paws. Several rodents, like the rat, sleep rolled up into a ball. The hedgehog, which passes the whole day hidden among stones or brush or in the trunk of a hollow tree, also rolls up, with its head and paws under its belly so that it looks like a huge chestnut bur.—Detroit News-Tribune.

THE SECURITY BOND SUIT.

Our now popular Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security" Bond Suit originated last season in an attempt to furnish progressive dealers with a really meritorious boy's suit that can be sold at $5.00 with an unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back should the suit prove defective. After considerable experimenting as to fabrics, tailoring, improved features, such as

Double seats, double knees extra strong thread, linings waist band, etc.

We succeeded in producing a guaranteed boy's suit that is proving a tremendous success with dealers now selling it. The "security" bond suit is good because it is so thoroughly reinforced throughout. Our success of last season has encouraged us to still greater efforts, and we are determined that the future of the Mrs. Jane Hopkins "Security Bond Suit" shall be a bright one from your standpoint and ours.

"Did that there woman from the mission give ye a call yesterday?"

"Deed and she did. Them kind makes me tired. Didn't she set for a good hour talkin' to me about sannytation an' hygeeny an' how I ought to give civilized milk to my baby, an' all that sort o' rubbish, until I got tired an' I sez to her, sez I, 'Did she have any babies of her own?' An' when she looked foolish an' said as how she was 'Miss Brown, I sez sez I, Well, seeing that I've curried ten, I don't see as no one has any call to tell me how to rare up babies, especially some one as never rared up none of her own.' I guess that dashed her so she won't be apt to come 'round givin' me any more of her gab about civilized milk an' sannytation an' sich nonsense." - Lippincott's Magazine.

SANDPAPER BY THE MILE.

One of the seven sandpaper manufacturing factories in this country is located in Hallowell and is now a part of the American glue trust, as glue forms such an important factor in the making of sandpaper.

This factory has been established for twenty-three years and was started by Benjamin Tenny, who originally started making glue at his own home in Farmingdale. The output of the factory is about 300 reams a day. There is used in the manufacture a ton of glue a day.

Instead of using sand for the paper, powdered quartz is employed, and this is obtained largely from Topsham and ground at the factory to suit the different kinds of paper. While some kinds of sand might possibly be used, little of it that is picked up at random would answer the purpose for which it is used at this factory.

Another article that enters into the manufacture of the sandpaper is garnet for the paper used in the shoe factories. Much of this is obtained from the Adirondacks. This garnet is ground, and it makes a paper of high quality.

Sometimes there is rolled off from the machines one piece of sandpaper three or four miles in length.—Boston Globe.

Athletic Oratory.

After every speech he delivers Bourke Cockran is a sore man physically. Any one who has ever seen him in oratorical action knows why he is sore. The old flagellant monks were not much more cruel to themselves than Cockran is to himself. His favorite gesture is to slap his thighs, and it is no love tap he gives them. It's a good beating. Cockran is one of the old school—muscular, desk pounding school of orators. If he could not hammer his desk and thump his thighs he would probably think his powers falling.

Living on Cheese.

The new treatment for bringing stout people to slim, elegant and comfortable proportions consists, in the first place, in eating all manner of cheeses, to the exclusion of all other foods save nonfattening biscuits, fruit and a limited quantity of meat once a day. You may breakfast on cream cheese, lunch on Gorgonzola and Camembert, take Cheddar sandwiches for tea and a light supper of Stilton and Brie. But at dinner you must have a "soupçon" of meat and nothing rich.—Exchange.

Too Exclusive.

There is such a thing as being too exclusive. The other day the Hotel Cambridge, in New York city, closed its doors. For twenty years its policy has been exclusiveness and avoidance of publicity. Its guests were all of social standing, and none could gain admission except through this recommendation. The dining room was for the use of the guests only, and admission to it from the outside was by invitation only.—Buffalo Commercial.

Thinks Well of French.

Max Nordau has come out now with a proclamation in which he urges compulsory teaching of French in the public schools of all countries. His contention is that French must eventually become the universal language, because it is the cleverest of tongues and the most phonetic. He says also that it is the most adaptable of all the tongues and is more universally read and used outside of its own borders than any other.

A LITTLE MISSENCE.

Preacher's Condemns the Father's Admonition Literally.

"I don't know what to make of that boy of mine," sighed a well known minister of the gospel. "I have tried to bring him up in the way he should go, but he is always coming back at me in a way that destroys the value of the lessons that I try to teach him. The other day his mother informed me that he had been throwing stones at one of the neighbor's little boys, and I called him into my study to question him about it.

"My son," said I sadly, "what is this I hear about your misconduct?"

"Why, papa," said he, "I haven't been doing anything that I ought not to."

"Your mother reports that you have been throwing stones at the little Jones boy."

"And so I did!" he shouted defiantly.

"Do you think that is the proper thing for a little Christian boy to do?"

"Why, papa," he answered, "you said yourself that a little boy could preach sermons more powerful than those delivered from the pulpit—sermons that would sink deep into the heart and remain there forever and that I should be constantly on the lookout for a chance to teach such lessons to my little friends."

"I remember saying something like that," I answered gravely, "but throwing stones can hardly be classed as a sermon."

"Why, papa," he flashed, "I've heard you say time and time again that there were sermons in stones, and if there was ever a kid that needed a sermon that Jones boy does!"—Detroit Free Press.

The Amenities.

"I like people who always tell me the plain truth," said the idealist.

"I'm not sure that I do," rejoined Miss Cayenne. "I'm a little disappointed if people don't indulge in the conventional falsehoods sufficiently to show they care for my good opinion."—Washington Star.

He Has Only One.

She—What is meant by "bottom dollar?"

He—Well, in the case of a married man it's the same as his top dollar.—Brooklyn Eagle.

She—You know the left side of the face is usually considered by artists to be more beautiful than the right.

He—Don't see why that should be, for both sides of some women's faces are painted.—Yonkers Statesman.

Less and Less.

"Chumpley poses as quite a sportsman, you know. He goes in for the very latest hammerless guns and smokeless powder, and"

"And hitless shot," judging from the result of his gunning expeditions."—Baltimore Sun.

Stella—You say she is two faced, but can you prove it?

Hattie—To my own satisfaction, yes. I have seen her when her real face showed through.—Detroit Tribune.

Not Journalism.

"Spacer is bragging a good deal about 'the liberty of the press' these days."

"Yes. He's engaged to Miss Huggins, I believe."—Philadelphia Press.

"I know it. She has never gone to a hospital to be operated on for anything."—Chicago Record-Herald.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Neat and Inexpensive Screen For an Unused Grate.

The problem of screening a grate which has been closed for the summer or of hiding the bare space below the mantel where a stove has been standing may be solved (for those who desire an inexpensive and pretty screen) by the following suggestions in a popular style of treatment:

A piece of matting of any solid color that will harmonize with the other furnishings of the room will be required.

This is to be cut of the right length to make a banner screen and hung from a rod upon the chimney beneath the mantel. In case the wall is flat, as where a stove has been in use, it may be tacked close up under the mantel and reach to the floor. It should, of course, be decorated to be at all ornamental. The lower edge may be turned up and caught in place as a hem with long, loose stitches.

Banana Compote.

Put three-quarters of a pint of cold water into a stew pan with four ounces of sugar and the peel of a lemon, and let it boil for five minutes and then simmer for a quarter of an hour.

Peel five or six bananas and then cut them into pieces about an inch in length, and put them into a fairly deep dish.

Strain the sirup, add the juice of an orange and a squeeze of lemon juice to it, and pour it while hot over the bananas.

When quite cold arrange the latter in a glass dish with the sirup, and cover the fruit with whipped cream or a thick custard, and scatter some unsweetened desiccated coconut over the top.

For Hard Hands.

Many people have naturally dry skin. The following treatment will soften it wonderfully: First soak the hands in warm water, and while still wet apply a small quantity of olive oil. Rub this well in till the skin has absorbed as much as it will. Then dry thoroughly. At night slip on a pair of loose white gloves, which for ventilation should have the finger tips cut off and the palms punctured all over with a stiletto, lined with almond paste made by mixing in half an ounce of rose water enough almond meal to form a thick paste.

Mending Table Linen.

When a hole actually appears in table linen it must be either darned or patched, and darning is most satisfactory. If the tear or broken place is not large put the linen into an embroidery hoop and darn with soft mercerized cotton or get the flat linen thread if you can, which is made for the purpose of darning table linen. Either will be better than ravelings of the cloth, which were once thought to be the best for mending.

To Transfer Printed Pictures.

Take a small, cheap brush and a little bottle of ordinary turpentine. Paint the picture you wish to transfer with turpentine, then blot with a blotter, so that the ink will not run. Turn the face of the picture down on the paper you wish to transfer it to, and rub the entire surface hard with a smooth surface, and the transfer is complete.

To Clean Marble Slabs.

Get two ounces of washing soda and an ounce each of powdered pumice stone and chalk and pound them together. Make a paste of a little of this with cold water and spread on your marble slabs. Let it stay a little while and wash off with soap and water. All stains and dirt will come off with it.

Metal Polish.

Take half a pound of best prepared chalk, three ounces of turpentine, three ounces benzine and one ounce liquid ammonia and thoroughly mix together. Shake the bottle well before using, and apply with a sponge, allowing the mixture to dry before rubbing with flannel to polish.

Nothing too GOOD

FOR

OUR CUSTOMERS

we are always looking for something better; always working to secure values and styles superior to other stores. when

The Ladies Home Journal

began to sell paper patterns we began to investigate. we said to ourselves,

 THE LADIES HOME JOURNAL

is the leading Womens Magazine. It is first class and has never done anything in a second class way. We knew that its reputation was at stake. Our investigation convinced us that the patterns are as high grade as any Magazine

Furthermore the Ladies Home Journal added a new feature which makes these patterns much more desirable than any other pattern. They furnish a Guide Chart free with each pattern. This Chart shows exactly how the pattern is to be put together. It is so comprehensive that a child can understand it. It is a boon to ladies who are inexperienced in garment cutting and garment making. Mothers advise us that by the aid of the Guide Chart furnished with each

LADIES HOME JOURNAL

They train their daughters to do their own sewing

But there is still another point to consider. The patterns are all new, no old styles, no ancient creations; all new, all up-to-date and perfect in fit and style, and so much more easily understood than other patterns that one trial will convince you and make you a regular customer
