WINTERVILLE NOTES

Interesting Items from Our Hustling Neighbor.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., June 23—

The Masons of our town and surrounding community met here Thursday morning in annual communication and elected the following officers for the ensuing Masonic year: E. W. Braxton, W. M.; J. F. Harrington, S. W.; B. F. Manning, J. W.; E. F. Tucker, secretary; A. G. Cox, Treas. At noon the Masons with their families and friends all gathered in a vacant store and enjoyed a delightful dinner, consisting of barbecue, baked chicken, cake and lemonade. After serving refreshments all marched to our school building where we had the pleasure of hearing one of Pitt county's most honored citizens address us on this occasion, Maj. Henry Harding, of Greenville, which was very much enjoyed by all. Then with a hearty wish for each one's future welfare and another day like that one all returned to their homes to long remember the pleasures of that day.

Miss Mimie Cox returned from Greenville Wednesday morning.

Miss Ethel Carroll returned from Asheville Wednesday, where she has been attending the Y. W. C. A. convention.

J. J. May, C. T. Kittrell and Charley May attended the funeral of Mrs. W. J. Kittrell, at Grifton Wednesday.

Misses Janie and Bessie Kittrell went to Grifton Wednesday to attend the burial of their aunt, Mrs. W. J. Kittrell.

A. D. Johnston goes and comes so often, we can't keep up with him.

Mrs. B. T. Cox and little Olivia left Friday morning for a visit to Oxford.

Mrs. J. B. Little and children left this morning for House to visit relatives.

Miss Olivia Cox entertained a party of friends at her home on Wednesday night, complimentary to her guests, Miss Guilford, of Aurora, Miss Peele, of Portsmouth, Va., and Miss Vincent, of Greenville. The evening was spent in playing games, music and various amusements. At 10:30 refreshments were served. The party dispersed at eleven wishing their hostess and each other many another such pleasant occasion.

A. W. Ange spent the day "down on the farm" Friday.

J. B. Little left this morning for a visit to relatives and friends at Castoria.

Miss Vonie Crawford left Friday morning for a visit in Greene county.

J. W. Sparks returned from a trip to Washington, Belhaven and Plymouth Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Taylor returned Thursday night from a visit to Kinston and Raleigh.

There were so many here Thursday that we can't make mention of them individually. We will say to each and every one that we are glad they came, and extend them a hearty invitation to come again.

E. E. Dail, of Reidsville, was here on business Friday afternoon.

G. A. Kittrell rubs about so much we don't try to keep up with him.

EXPOSITION GROUNDS.

Those of the Jamestown Celebration Near Norfolk Rich in Historical Lore.

[By Charles Frederik Stansbury]

Sewell's Point, the beautiful spot on Hampton Roads where the Jamestown exposition is to be held is rich in historic events and incidents that have occurred at and around it.

Within cannon-shot distance of the exposition grounds is Craney Island which has been used jointly by Norfolk and Portsmouth for some years as a detention station for patients with contagious diseases. Craney Island is rich in historical lore.

On the 22nd of June, 1813, a powerful British fleet made an attack on Craney Island, at the entrance to Elizabeth river, near Norfolk, and was signally defeated.

Before the British could enter the harbor of Norfolk and approach the town it was necessary to take possession of Craney Island. On the morning of the 22nd they were discovered passing around the point of Nansemond river, and landing on the mainland in a position where the passage was fordable intending to pass over and attack the works on the west side of the island, while at the same time a number of barges from the fleet attempted to land in front. These were attacked before they reached the shore, from a battery on the beach, manned by the sailors and marines from the Constellation and the gun boats. Three of the barges were sunk, most of the men drowned, and the rest compelled to retreat their vessels. The party which landed at Nansemond, were met and repulsed by the Virginia militia, and driven back to their ships, with the loss, including those in the barges, of upwards of two hundred in killed and wounded. The city of Norfolk and the neighboring villages of Gosport and Portsmouth owed their safety to this gallant defence of Craney Island.

The National Bank.

On a call from the Comptroller of the Currency the National Bank of Greenville makes a statement of the standing of its business on June 18th, which will be found in this paper. This statement commends itself to the public and shows the excellent standing of the bank. It is all the more remarkable when the fact is considered that the bank had been in business only two months. The stockholders have cause to feel proud of the work the bank is doing and that it was so quick to gain the confidence of the public. The bank has made a fine beginning and is admirably officered.

Charles Walker, the switch tender who in February caused a wreck on the Southern railway, near Greensboro by which five people lost their lives, has been convicted of manslaughter.

THE WEATHER.

Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday, showers Sunday in western portion.

MOORE FOR REGISTER OF DEEDS.

Grimesland, N. C., June 22.

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

We the undersigned citizens of Chicod township respectfully ask for space in your valuable paper to heartily endorse the candidacy of W. M. Moore for Register of Deeds of Pitt county.

We have known "Bud" Moore for a number of years and from boyhood, and know him to be a gentleman of the highest type and ability, a man who has been loyal to his party and a friend to the public. We believe that if honesty, politeness and perseverance speak for anything, then we should nominate and elect a man that Pitt county will be proud of.

W. S. Galloway,

Greenville Banking & Trust Company.

The statement of the Greenville Banking & Trust Company at the close of business on the 18th, as made to the Corporation Commission, will be found in this paper. While the individual deposits are not quite so large as shown in the April statement, the loans and discounts are larger bringing the total up to about the same figure, and a large increase has been made to the surplus. This is a fine showing, coming in the midst of the dullest part of the year.

Sudden Death.

Mr. J. I. Keel, of Carolina township, died suddenly Friday evening of heart disease, a malady to which he had been subject for some time.

On Thursday Mr. Keel went to Williamston on business, returning from that town to Robersonville in train. He was not feeling well and stopped at the home of Mr. Ab Everett, near Robersonville. He had a sudden attack Friday evening and died in a short while.

Mr. Keel was 38 years old and leaves one child, four brothers and four sisters.

—An exchange tells of a newspaper reporter who interviewed thirty successful business men and found that all of them when boys had been governed strictly and frequently thrashed. He also interviewed thirty loafers and learned that twenty-seven of them had been "mammas' darlings" and the other three had been reared by their grandmothers.

OVER THE STATE.

Happenings of Interest in North Carolina.

Mrs. Alice Newsom, of Greensboro, has sued the Southern Railway for $25,000 damages. Her husband, who was a laborer in the employ of the company, was killed by an excavation of earth while engaged in his work.

Living near Rocky Mount is a lady whose sole income for eighteen or twenty years has been board and five dollars a month. For twelve years of this time she supported an invalid mother, though she has saved and invested over five hundred dollars.—Rocky Mount Echo.

YOUR BOY

You do not know what is in him Bear with him; be patient; wait Fed him; clothe him; love him; He is a boy, and most boys are bad and I fear he is light-headed as well.

But remember he calls you father.

When he played in your lap, you fondly hoped he would some day be a great and useful man.

Now that he has grown larger, and his young blood drives him into gleeful sport, and makes him impatient of serious things—patting, playful, thoughtless—you almost despair. But don't be snappish and quarrelsome, and make him feel that you are disappointed in him. He is your boy, and you are to live in him. He bears your name, and is to send it on down the stream of time. He inherits your fortune and fame, and is to transmit them to generations to come.

It cannot be otherwise. A daughter divides your fortune, transmits less of your fame and loses your name. A boy is more nearly yourself than anything else can be. It is though your boy you go down in history; though your boy you are to live in the future; by him you are to act upon the generation that is to come.

It may be difficult to govern him, but be patient. He may seem adverse to everything useful and good; but wait

No one can tell what is in a boy. He may surprise you some day. Hope. Let him grow. While his body grows larger and stonger, his mental and moral nature may expand and improve.

Educate your boy. You may think money spent in this way is money spent in vain. There is nothing in him; he has no pride, no aspiration. You don't know.

No one can tell what is in a boy. Besides, there may be an unkindled spark, an unfanned flame, a smoldering fire, a latent energy, which the teacher's rod may stir, the association, which the books and men may arouse develop and direct, and thus start a boy a going, with such energy and determination that no power on earth could stop him short of the topmost round in the ladder of fame.—Exchange.

The father (to boy back from college)—"Well, son how much money do you owe?" The Son—"Well, er, dad, how much have you got?"—Harper's Bazar.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Of Those Coming and Going.

A. E. Tucker is sick at his home on Fifth street.

Julius Brown went to Bethel this morning.

Dr. D. L. James returned from High Point this morning.

L. I. Moore returned from up the road this morning.

J. G. Bowling returned from Scotland Neck Friday evening.

Miss Peel, of Norfolk, who had been visiting Miss Elise Vincent, left this morning.

Miss Katie Trustall, who had been attending school at Baltimore, has returned home.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Pitt County.

The government of the town of Grimesland, N. C., is composed of the following officers:

Mayor—William Carson, ex-government distiller.

Commissioner—W. E. Proctor, banker.

Commissioner—T. F. Proctor, ex-barkeeper.

Commissioner—W. S. Mills, Jr., F. D. carrier.

Policeman or Constable—T. J. Talley, ex-barkeeper.

Treasurer—W. M. Moore, ex-barkeeper.

The selection and election of these officers was not by accident, but by design. It shows that the liquor interest is in absolute control of the town, and this accounts for so much disorder here. The barkeeper license is only $25 payable semiannually. The town pays the policeman $2 per week and he serves only every Saturday. The balance of the time we are without police protection.

The law requires a town to furnish constant police protection in order that liquor may be sold therein. In this town there are gross, flagrant and frequent violations of the liquor laws, and under the present conditions nothing else is to be expected.

With the construction of the new railroad in the near future, there will be an influx of foreign labor near here, and we will need constant police protection.

My object in writing this letter is to ask you not to issue any license to sell liquor in the town of Grimesland until the town government qualifies itself to have liquor sold within its limits, as required by laws enacted by our last Legislature. The liquor question should not be a political issue, but a moral issue. I think we have had enough liquor legislation, we need only to enforce the laws we already have on statute books.

Your honorable chairman is well acquainted with the facts above stated. He has seen much lawlessness and disorder here and I refer to him for verification of the above facts.

Most Respectfully,
Dr. C. M. Jones.

A COLLISION.

It Was Between Two Men, and the Climax Was Pathetic.

A blind man was making his way out Washington avenue, using his cane as a guide for his feet. Across his chest was a placard bearing the legend, "I am blind," and suspended by a chain around his neck was a small tin cup, a convenient receptacle for charity coins.

It was broad daylight, and he knew that stretch of walk so well that he felt very little fear of accident. He was about the middle of the block, so he did not have to look out for the step down from the pavement to the cross street. There are never many pedestrians out that far on Washington avenue, and no one is going to run ruthlessly into a blind man.

He was striding bravely along when, to his utter astonishment, he collided with a rapidly moving object. The object was a man, who grew very angry, for the impact had dislodged his hat. It had also served to hurl the blind man backward, so that he must have fallen had it not been for the man who sprang to the rescue and who tells the story.

"Haven't you got any sense?" the enraged man cried. "Now, you'd better pick up my hat, you awkward lubber!"

"I can't," the disconcerted fellow replied. "I think it was your own fault. You ought to look where you are going."

"How can I look where I am going? Can't you see that I am blind? It is you who ought to look where you are going and not go bumping into a blind man."

"What's that? You blind? I didn't know. I couldn't tell, you see. I am blind too. I'm sorry I knocked off your hat. I'm afraid I can't help you find it. I wonder which way it rolled."

The other man was staring blankly at him. Then he groped his way forward, fell upon the other blind man's neck and said in a broken voice: "We blind people get selfish, expecting all the world to get out of our way. I didn't mean to talk to you as I did."

By this time the witness to the little tragedy had picked up the battered hat, dropped a coin into each cup and hurried on, saddened but grateful for the priceless gift of sight.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Fastidious Public.

A young man who had given an excellent account of himself while on trial as a conductor was very much surprised when told by the superintendent that he would not be satisfactory as a permanent employee.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Didn't I attend to business? Weren't my accounts straight?"

"Yes, you were all right that way," said the superintendent.

"The trouble is, two of your fingers are gone. Unfortunately there have been many complaints from passengers as to the maimed condition of your hand. Most people are sensitive in regard to an infirmity of that kind, and, although they do not wish to be unkind, they object to being thrown in contact with it. I have been obliged to turn down otherwise desirable young fellows who were just as good as you." — New

Speaking of the Baker.

"The baker," said the knowing youth, "is the happiest man ever. Everything he stirs up pans out well. All he kneads is his, he has dough to burp, and his stock is still rising. He certainly takes the cake. He's a stirring chap and does things up brown. Though he is well bred and somewhat of a high roller, he is not above mixing with his hands. Besides, he is pious and cheerfully icing his favors for everybody. The baker is the original wise man of the yeast."—Lippincott's Magazine.

THE PLAINS TRIBES.

Typical American Indians of the Great Northwest.

The northwest plains Indian is to the average person the typical American Indian, the Indian of our school day books—powerful of physique, statuesque, gorgeous in dress, with the bravery of the firm believer in predestination. The constant, fearless hunting and slaughtering of the buffalo trained him to the greatest physical endurance and gave an unbridled desire for bloodshed. Thousands of peace loving, agricultural living Indians might climb down from their cliff perched homes, till their miniature farms, attend their flocks and at nighttime climb back up the winding stairs to their home in the clouds and attract no attention, but if a fierce band of Sioux rushed down on a hapless emigrant train the world soon learned of it.

The culture of all primitive peoples is necessarily determined by their environment. This, of course, means that all plains tribes, though speaking a score of languages, were in life and manner broadly alike. They were buffalo hunting Indians, and only in rare cases did they give any attention to agriculture. Buffalo meat was their food, and the byproducts their clothing, tools and implements.

The plains tribes in earlier times were certainly true nomads. For a time, in the depths of winter, they camped in the shelter of some forest along the streams. Other than that wherever roamed a herd of buffalo, there also wandered the bands of northern Indians. The very existence of these tribes seemed bound to that of the buffalo. From the skins their lodges were built, while the hair on the hides furnished the robes for the body as well as mattresses and bed coverings. The meat, prepared in many ways, with the addition of a few roots and berries, furnished their entire food. Advancing civilization has swept these countless herds from the face of the plains and left their human companions stranded.—E. S. Curtis

Embarrassing.

One fault of a certain extremely popular general is that he, being rather deaf, is apt to come to wrong conclusions.

Returning from a campaign, one of the first men to greet him was an old acquaintance. "Ah, my dear fellow," said the general, "so glad to see you again. Hope you have prospered and had good fortune these years."

"Yes, general, yes; but I have had the great misfortune to lose my wife since I saw you."

Catching the word "wife," the other guessed at the idea of a recent marriage, and, patting his old friend affectionately on the shoulder, he exclaimed:

"Happy man! Happy man!"—London Mail.

Observation.

The modern Sherlock has been hastily summoned to discover why so little work was done in the big office while the boss was out.

"I observe," said Sherlock, looking around the room, "that Mr. Bones, your tall bookkeeper, has been kissing your pretty stenographer during your absence."

"How in the world did you find that out?" gasped the boss.

"Why, she has a blot of ink on her nose. He forgot to remove the pen from behind his ear."—Chicago News.

The Setting Moon.

Have you ever had a chance to see the moon as it was setting below an unobstructed horizon, at sea, for example? If so, it was not the moon itself, but its refracted image, that you saw as the lower rim touched the horizon line, for the moon was already below the line. The atmosphere at the horizon has a refractive power of one-half a degree, and one-half a degree is the measure of the apparent diameter of the full moon. Therefore when you see the moon at that time you don't see it. It is the same with the sun, for its apparent diameter is also one-half a degree.

SATURDAY JUNE 23, 1906.

It may seem quiet in Greenville now, but just watch this town wake up after awhile.

The incorporation commission might shut up shop, go home and save its seats until another Legislature can meet and put some authority behind it.

When Dewey got his body sorted out in his soul, as he declares, we don't see what he wanted to reunite them on this troublesome globe for.

The Corporation Commission "have on the subject" in the controversy with the Southern railway over the Raleigh-Greensboro schedule.

Statistics of the Grand Army of the Republic show that civil war veterans are dying at the rate of 100 a day, or 3,000 a month. And the pension list increases almost as fast.

It may be hard to accomplish, but the Retail Merchants' Association of the State are pursuing the right course in advocating the repeal of the business tax. That is a law that has long since outlived its usefulness and is a blot on the credit of the State.

TIME TO ADVERTISE IS ALL THE TIME.

Much has been said about the best time to advertise, and it has been regarded as a sort of loss of energy to carry on an energetic advertising campaign during the hot summer months. This has all changed, however, and only the inexperienced advertiser bothers himself or anyone else about the time to advertise, for the experienced advertiser, regardless of what his line may be, is fully aware of the fact that the time to advertise is all the time. That this is thoroughly appreciated by the leading concerns of the country is proved by the expensive summer campaigns which they carry out. Of course advertising in the summer time should be different from that of the winter, but there should be no let up whatever in the advertising. Some people put forth the argument that the summer months are dull, but if these misguided souls will ask the man who has advertised they will find that he isn't at all in doldrums over the condition of trade, and the difference is the result of his advertising. If one time is better than another to advertise, it is during the so-called "dull months," made so partly by the lack of advertising.—Southern Publisher.

THE SUMMER TIME.

Summer time is reading time. People read all papers more thoroughly now than in the busier season. Use newspaper space oftener now than in the big season. Attractive cuts with well-wadded advertisements offering a definite price that you know is a good value, can have only one effect—a stimulation of summer business. Then never let up even for a base ball game. Keep at it everlastingly and you won't know there is such a thing as a dull season. You won't even think of how hot it is. Mountain and seashore requisites, commencement dresses and various other specialties are needed now. Advertise then and deliver them. Make the delivery part a feature. Comforts can be sold all the time if properly advertised. And the majority of people now look to the newspaper advertisement to tell them what you have and what the inducements are.—Merchants' Journal and Commerce

The Wilmington Messenger commends the following to the earnest and prayerful attention of the Greensboro papers which have had so much to say about that wonderful hailstorm which took place in that city a few days ago. Those Greensboro papers should "go back and sit down."

Each man around the store had told his tale of the "hardest rain he ever saw fall out of the sky." Tom Limpkins was an easy winner with his of the great harvest rain in '93.

"It began with big drops kind of scattering-like," he said. "Then it got to a shower, and I just thought I'd crawl under the canvas of the paper till it was over—knowed the team would stand. But, sir, when the lightning took to hittin' right at that binder I concluded to get out from there. I had a gallon-and-a-half bucket on my arm and I lit out for the mule-shed. When I was about half-way there the thing begun to get heavy. I looked down and if the blamed thing wasn't full of water I'm a liar."

The lank individual who had been leaning against a barrel spoke in:

"Well, now, I reckon that must 'a' been the day I am thinkin' about. What made me know it was rainin' some was seein' a flock of wild ducks go over. Gents, them ducks had folded their wings and was just naturally paddlin'."

For the space of two minutes not a sound was heard save the purring of the cat asleep on the counter; then silently, with bowed heads, the crowd dispersed.—Woman's Home Companion for July.

The mayor of Haverhill, Mass., is a friend of the children. A circus is billed to appear in the town shortly and the mayor ordered that the public schools be closed so that the children might witness the parade and perchance attend the performance under the tents. The school committee refused to close the schools to allow them to attend and the mayor declared he would station a policeman at every school house door and forbid the children to enter. The school committee at once sought backing in the courts and asked for an order restraining the mayor from interfering with the running of the public schools. The mayor says he has authority to suspend the schools if he so desires. It is to be hoped that the court will side with the mayor, for school children are entitled to a holiday while the circus is in town, and the visits of the greatest shows on earth are too few and far between. The mayor of Haverhill is all right.—Charlotte Observer.

They Explore the Sewers in Search of Articles of Value.

Shoremen or shore workers they sometimes call the toshers, but their most familiar appellation is "toshers," and the articles they pick up "tosh."

They really belong to another well known class, the mudlarks, but consider themselves as a grade or two above there latter, for the genuine tosher does not confine himself, as they do, to trawling through the Thames mud for pieces of coal or wood, paper, nails, bolts, iron and old rope.

When about to enter the sewers these men provide themselves with a pole seven or eight feet long, on one end of which there is a large iron hoe, a bag carried on the back, a canvas apron tied around them and a dark lantern similar to a policeman's. This they strap on their right breast, so that while walking upright through the large sewers the light is thrown straight in front.

The toshers generally go in gangs of three or four, both for the sake of company and to be able to defend themselves from the rats with which the sewers swarm. When they come near a street grating they close their lanterns and watch an opportunity to slip past unnoticed, for otherwise a crowd of people might soon collect at the grating whose presence would put the police on the alert.

When "in luck" they find many articles of plate, spoons, ladies, silver handled knives and forks, mugs and drinking cups and now and then articles of jewelry. They generally also manage to fill their bags with the more bulky articles found in their search, such as old metal, bones and ropes. These they dispose of to the marine store dealers and rag and bone men and divide the proceeds, along with the coins found, among the different members of the gang.

The Influence of Music.

"Music at meals," remarked the commentator on little things of life, "usually makes me feel like swearing. In fact, I am more likely to swear than not when I go to a restaurant for dinner and am greeted by the ordinary band. And yet, curiously enough, if a hand organ begins to play outside the restaurant in which I am eating my lunch it has the opposite effect, for it invariably makes me blue. Why it should be a mystery, but it does just the same. I wonder why."—New York Press.

ART OF COOKING.

Progress of Human Race Closely Allied to It.

It may well be said that the development of the art of cooking is closely connected with the onward progress of the human race. As the prehistoric cave dwellers knew nothing of the use to which fire might be put, their gastronomic abilities were probably on a par with those of the beast of prey with which they competed for their daily supply of food. The earliest nation of whom we possess historical records recognized the value of foods properly prepared, and we find that the science of cooking gradually attained the height of its development during the reign of the great Roman emperors of the Augustan period.

Whatever knowledge we possess of their civilization we owe to the many monastic orders of Europe, whose members preserved and cultivated, among other things, the traditions of the culinary art until the renaissance, in the reign of Louis XIV. of France and his successors. The influence of France on the menus of the world has continued uninterruptedly down to the present day. The principles of cooking, speaking of the latter in a general sense, were developed by the early Romans in a purely empirical fashion. Now they have been made the subject of scientific investigation and found to rest on a firm and sound basis. The Russian physiologist, Pavlov, has clearly demonstrated in his researches on digestion that the ingestion of substances with a purely nutrient value does not sufficiently satisfy the demands of the body. Taste and appetite must also be taken into consideration. These are satisfied only by the addition to the food of spices and salt, and it is largely due to the influence of these condiments that the proper amount of gastric juice is liberated by the mucous membrane of the stomach.

A Fortunate Question.

A senator used to tell this story of an incident he witnessed on a Boston street car. It was about 11 o'clock p. m., the mystic hour when all law abiding Bostonians lose their thirsts. The senator happened to notice a man running after the car and vainly trying to attract the conductor's attention. The senator notified the conductor, who stopped the car. The belated passenger, who was somewhat under the influence of liquor, had no sooner climbed aboard than he delivered himself of the following remarks: "Shay, Mr. Conductor, does this road run to 'commodate the passengers or the passengers run to 'commodate the road?"

WOMEN'S HATS.

No Two of Them Are or Ever Will Be Just Exactly Alike.

There are no two things alike in this world—no two atoms alike, no two blades of grass alike, no two peas alike, no two faces alike—wonderful—most wonderful of all—no two ladies' hats alike! Has this thought ever been impressed upon you while sitting in an assemblage of women? Oh, the wisdom and forethought of nature, for were each woman to have a hat similar to her neighbor's what an infinite variety of additional woes and heartaches and tears the human race would have had to bear!

And yet Matthew Softleigh, born and bred in New York, knew naught of this. His tender brain could not conceive the fact that everything in this world is infinite in its revolutions and ramifications, particularly ladies' hats, so Matthew backed his poor judgment with real money and made a wager with his friend, Silas Cute, that he would soon find him two hats that were alike.

Matthew and Silas selected a day, and they walked up and down the great White Way, they promenaded Fifth avenue, they visited the parks, they strolled to the east side, the west side and every other side; they visited the theaters, the concert halls, the churches. From day to day the quest continued until both were weary and footsore. They saw Gainsboroughs, picture hats, hats with ribbons, hats with feathers, hats with aigrettes, but no two hats alike. They saw dreams of red and blue and green as well as nightmares and incubi, of "Arabian Nights" phantasy. There were poetry and prose, music and flowers typified in every one, but no two alike. What ingenuity they represented, what ceaseless brain activity, what thought, what feeling, what delicacy in some, which if put into a poem or a symphony would earn him or her a place in the Hall of Fame!

Matthew lost his bet, and it is well that he did. There should be no two hats alike, there are no two hats alike and there never will be two hats alike. Nature, like woman, is feminine. She has a variety of moods, of expression, of beauty, of color, of form and figure, and a woman's hat is the embodiment, the epitome of her every thought, her every wish, her every desire. Not one woman is like another; neither can her hat be. And when the time comes that two hats are found alike, then will genius have reached its limit and the world will have lost all its beauty and all that makes life worth living.—New York Herald.

Flowers That Won't Mix.

A Broadway florist who had just received an order for table decorations called up the customer in haste.

"Say," he said, "those bouquets and centerpieces won't last half through the dinner. You've mixed roses and mignonette, and those two flowers simply won't hitch. You'd better let me carry out the designs to suit myself."

The customer at the other end of the wire evidently agreed to the suggestion, for the florist hung up the receiver with a satisfied air.

"Most people who order flowers make the same mistake that that woman made," he said. "They do not know that certain flowers positively cannot get along together. Take roses and mignonette, for example. Each has a bad effect on the other, and when combined in any floral piece the whole thing wilts in less than an hour."—New York Sun.

Wasted Effort.

In a photographic establishment a worthy rustic presented himself to the lady assistant. She ushered him to the dressing room to prepare his toilet. This operation appearing to take a considerable time, she gently tapped at the door. Getting no response, she entered and found the swain seated before the looking glass in a most striking attitude. He anxiously inquired, "Is a tveken yet, mum?"—London Telegraph.
