Drink and the gang drinks with you, swear off and you go it alone, for the bar room bum who drinks your rum has a quenchless thirst of his own. Feast and your friends are many, fast and they cut you cold. They'd not get mad if you treat them bad if their stomachs have all they can hold. Steal if you can get a million, for then you can furnish bail, it is a great big thief who gets out on leave while the little ones go to jail. Advertise and the dollar will come, quit and they fail to arrive, for how are men who have money to spend to know you are still alive.

—Why is it that no one want to live in the country anymore? Cities are full of people who live from "hand to mouth," and whose total wealth is represented by the clothing they have on. Years go by and these persons never have a home. They lose that independence that the proud owner of a farm has. If there is one needed reform it is to keep people on farms and away from cities.—Louisburg Times.

REFORM IN JURY SYSTEM.

Suggestions From Judge Nael. To The Charlotte Observer.

Under the law as it now exists in this State when a person is charged with the commission of a capital criminal offense and is placed on trial he may challenge peremptorily 23 jurors and the State challenge only four. From an experience in the practice of law and then five years work on the bench it is clear to my mind that the statute ought to be changed so that in the trial of the offenses of arson, rape, murder and burglary, the four capital felonies, the State ought to have the same number of challenges as the prisoner. It is my deliberate opinion that this will help solve the lynching problem.

As I go over the State and try young boys for the commission of crime I become more and more impressed with the imperative necessity for the establishment of a reformatory to which youthful criminals may be sent. I would not suggest in its inception the outlay of a large sum of money by the State but one just large enough to see if we can't save bad boys and make out of them good and useful citizens. I am sure we can bring good out of this and I think we ought to make the effort.

Very many times I have had my heart broken when a judge became my duty to send boys to jail and the penitentiary—bright-eyed, good looking boys; boys that had too much promise of good in them to be sent off with thieves and murderers and hardened criminals, and yet were so bad and vicious that they ought not to have been turned loose on society and the public. I have made up my mind to make an effort, conducted on an honorable basis, to have these two statutes written in the laws of my State.

I do not expect to fail and I am addressing this to you to ask for your co-operation. The support I will ask at your hands, if you agree with me, is that at the proper time you advocate these two laws in your paper, and that you will secure signatures to petitions I will send you and forward the same to your member of the General assembly. I expect to organize this movement in every county in this state, and while it is a gigantic undertaking for one man to face—one who is busy holding court every week—yet I have undertaken the task and I am going to win. I shall not be able to offer you any pay for your time or space and only recompense we shall be able to gather will be the consciousness of having helped our fellow man. Thanking you in advance for your reply, I am,

Yours very truly,
WALTER H. NEAL.

SAD DEATH OF PREACHER.

Rev. L. S. Etheridge, of Grifton M. E. Church.

Rev. L. S. Etheridge, pastor in charge of the Methodist church at Grifton for the past year, died in the Robert Bruce McDaniel Memorial hospital at 8:30 o'clock this morning of cancer of the liver, from which he has been a sufferer for about six years. Mr. Etheridge had been declining in health rapidly recently and his congregation voted him a vacation in which to try to regain his health and upon consulting his physician at Grifton it was decided to bring him to the hospital here, where a careful examination by the doctors revealed an extensive cancerous growth upon the liver that precluded all hope of recovery.

Mr. Etheridge was very cheerful during the entire examination and elected, if the diagnosis showed a possible hope of recovery by so doing, to submit to an operation, but when the extent of the cancer was learned the futility of an operation was seen and none was performed to remove the cancer. He was accompanied by his wife during his stay in the hospital, she remaining by his side until the end. Preparations are being made to take the body to Laurinburg for interment at his home and the sad party leaves on this evening's 7 o'clock train.

Mr. Etheridge was about 40 years of age and leaves a widow and six small children. He was a Godly man and notwithstanding his bodily infirmities labored earnestly in the ministry for the uplift of humanity and gave unsparingly of himself to benefit others. It is indeed a sad death and one that appeals to the citizens of this community and his recent charge at Grifton.—Kinston Free Press, 3rd.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN.

The Norfolk Landmark call attention to the injustice done women teachers "by the existing graduating scale of pay in the public schools of Norfolk. Most teachers, it is stated, now receive $1,000 a year on entering the service of the public schools of Norfolk. The next year they receive an increase of $50, and for each year thereafter they receive an increase of $100 until they reach $1,450, and the year after that they receive $50, making their final salary $1,500—the maximum for men. Women teachers start at $400 and receive an increase of $25 a year until the salary reaches $650—the maximum for women. In other words, men teachers in Norfolk's public schools get $1,000 at the start and after six years are paid at the rate of $4,200 a year; while women teachers begin at $400 and, after ten years get $650 a year, when the increase stops. This is not right and it is no wonder that The Landmark is making an effort to have the school board increase the salaries paid the women teachers. Not only in Norfolk, but in numerous other schools, and in many other occupations men get more for the same work than women. There is no justice in such practice and it should be remedied. Probably the public school is the best place to begin the movement for reform.—Charlotte Observer.

A POLICE CHIEF'S STORY.

The Way the Notorious Jack Graeme Was Arrested.

"A man and a woman," said the police chief, "occupied a compartment of a Pullman. In a desolate place, the train speeding like lightning along, the man said to the woman:

"Madam, I will ask you to look out of the window a few minutes. I am going to make some changes in my apparel."

"Certainly, sir," said the woman politely.

"Two or three minutes, filled with odd rattling noises, passed. Then the man said:

"Now, madam, I am finished." "She looked at him, and behold, he had transformed himself into a flashing girl, heavily veiled, fashionably dressed and with rich and beautiful blond hair.

"Some moments later in her turn the lady said:

"Now, sir, or madam, whichever you are, I'll ask you also to look out of the window. I have some changes to make in my own dress."

"The other complied, and when he was permitted to withdraw his gaze from the passing landscape, what was his surprise to find the lady changed into a man. He gave a loud laugh.

"It seems," he said, "that we are both fugitives; hence we should be pals. I am a bank robber. What are you?"

"I," said the other, "am Detective Hawke of San Francisco, and for three days in female attire I have been shadowing you. Wrist together, please, so that I may now slip the nippers on."

"Thus," concluded the police chief, "did Detective Hawke arrest the notorious Jack Graeme in 1879. It was the nearest arrest, from the melodramatic standpoint, of the year."—St. Lou's Globe-Democrat.

Killing Wild Ducks in China.

One Chinese method of killing wild ducks consists in placing calabashes on the water in great numbers. After awhile, when the ducks have become used to their presence, the hunter puts one over his head with holes, so he can see, and, with the rest of his body under water, approaches the ducks. Seizing one of them by the legs, he quickly pulls it under water, wrings its neck, fastens it to his belt and takes his next victim.

DOES THE DOG REASON?

Authentic Instances That Seem to Warrant That Conclusion.

A dog I owned suffered a great deal with indigestion. The least indiscreet diet would bring on these attacks, and as they occurred very frequently I had a large bottle of medicine always on hand and kept it on a shelf in his kennel. The dog seemed to have acquired a thorough comprehension as to the relief bringing quality of that bottle. Whenever he was ill and food was placed before him he would scent it, walk away without touching it, then turn to the shelf and, gazing steadily at the bottle, indicate plainly his wants. He took the medicine without the slightest balking, which is rather exceptional, as any one who ever tried to dose a dog will agree.

This dog when let out would never disturb anything in the poultry yard, but the moment a stray chick lost her way into his yard the savage got the better of him. He would catch the unfortunate straggler, kill and devour it, leaving only a few feathers as evidence of the "murder." Punishment always followed. The remnants of feathers were shown to the dog so as to impress on him his wrong doings and make the cause of the punishment clear to him. From time to time young chickens would be missing, and all efforts to locate the guilty one were vain. The dog's yard was always scrutinized, but nothing found.

My best broilers were disappearing at a rapid rate, and I decided to have the dog watched. Soon he was caught in the act and the mystery solved. The moment the dog had finished his meal he scratched the feathers in a heap and carried them with his teeth to a corner of his yard, where he buried them. The dog had the most embarrassed and helpless expression at the time he was caught that I ever noticed on a dog. An extra severe punishment was dealt out, and I do not know if the mortification of being trapped or the punishment did the work, but the dog was cured from that moment on.

The related observations show reasoning in order to accomplish something for a set purpose. I believe most animals possess the quality in some degree, more or less, according to their mental development.

In the last case described the dog's instinct led him to catch and kill the chicken, but memory told him that punishment would follow if he found out. He reasoned that by hiding the evidence of his guilt he would escape punishment for his actions, which he understood to be wrong. The very fact of being able to discriminate between right and wrong and trying to check the consequences of the latter shows the necessity of thinking and therefore of reasoning power.—S. L. De Fabry in Outing.

The Steamboat and an "If."

If Robert Fulton had succeeded in proving to Napoleon that his steamboat was a revolutionary invention the history of the whole world might have been changed. A critic reasons as follows: "Fulton laid before the French emperor his plan for steam navigation. It might have appealed to Napoleon had he personally investigated it, but he preferred to leave the decision to a commission of wiseacres, who reported that navigation by the aid of steam was an obvious absurdity. That was two years before the battle of Trafalgar was fought. Had he accepted the advice of Fulton and gone at once to building, the great army massed at Boulogne might after all have landed in England and wrought its military miracles upon British soil instead of at Austerlitz, to which Trafalgar turned it."

He Relied on the Doctor.

While I was a student in the medical college I had a patient, an Irishman, with a broken leg. When the plaster bandage was removed and a lighter one put on in its place I noticed that one of the pins went in with great difficulty, and I could not understand it. A week afterward what was my astonishment to find that the pin had been run through the skin twice instead of through the cloth.

"Why, Pat," said I, "didn't you know the pin was sticking in you?" "To be sure I did," replied Pat, "but I thought you knew your business, so I hit me to the leg."

A CIVILIAN HERO.

He Served His Country as Truly as Any Soldier in Battle.

At the close of the Franco-Prussian war a hasty conference was held by the German leaders to decide upon the amount of indemnity which should be exacted from France. Bismarck, differing from Von Moltke, telegraphed to Berlin for a financier in whom he had unbounded confidence. The man was a Hebrew and was for some reason disliked by the great Prussian general. When, therefore, he gave his opinion that the amount demanded should be some many thousand million francs Von Moltke exclaimed impatiently:

"Absurd! It is too much!" "I know the resources of the French people," said the financier calmly. "They can pay it."

"It is a monstrous demand!" repeated Von Moltke angrily. "If a man had begun when the world was created to count he would not have reached that sum now."

"And that is the reason," interrupted Bismarck quickly, his eye twinkling, "that I got a man who counts—from Moses."

Von Moltke and the Hebrew tried to look grave, but both laughed, and the storm was averted.

The sequel to the anecdote has a deeper meaning. The financier, when he received the summons to the conference, was undergoing treatment for some affection of the eyes which required confinement to a dark chamber. His oculist warned him that if he obeyed the summons the exposure and delay in the treatment would almost inevitably result in loss of sight.

He was silent a moment and then said: "I think that I am needed. I have no right to consider my sight. I will go."

He went, and the results which the oculist had feared ensued. He became blind for life.

Von Moltke, when the story was told him, said briefly: "I wronged the man. He has served his country as truly as any soldier on the field."

Gold and Silver Bugs.

The most remarkable gold bugs in the world are found in Central America. They belong to the genus plusiotis, and one might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal. The head and wing cases are brilliantly polished, with a luster as of gold itself. To sight and touch they have all the seeming of metal, and it is hard to realize that the creature is a mere animal. Oddly enough, there is another species of plusiotis from the same region, which has the appearance of being wrought in solid silver, freshly burnished. One of the most beautiful bugs in the world is a small beetle known to science as the blue koplia. Its back is an exquisite iridescent sky blue, and the under part of its body is of a bright silver hue. The notion that it contains silver is widely entertained, and attempts have frequently been made to extract silver from it.

Don't Scowl.

Don't scowl. It spoils faces. Before you know it your forehead will resemble a small railroad map. There is a grand trunk line from your cowlick to the bridge of your nose, intersected by parallel lines running east and west, with curves arching your eyebrows, and, oh, how much sadder you look for it! Scowling is a habit that steals upon us unawares. We frown when the light is too strong and when it is too weak. We tie our brows into a knot when we are thinking and knit them even more tightly when we cannot think. There is no denying there are plenty of things to scowl about.

The Difficulty.

Two Irishmen driving through the country noticed that many of the barns had weathervanes in the shape of huge roosters.

"Pat," said one man to the other, "can you tell me why they always have a rooster on top of a hen or the top of a hen?"

"Sure," replied the other, "it must be because if a hen were to have a rooster on top of her head she'd have to collect her own eggs."—Chicago News.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The Vanishing Ball Trick and How It Is Performed.

With a sharp penknife whittle a large cork in the form of a ball about an inch in diameter. Take a human hair and form a loop in it about 1 1/2 inches long, affixing the ends to the ball with a little wax, or, better still, by forcing the ends into the cork. Now pass the forefinger of your right hand through the hair loop, letting the ball lie on the palm when you show it. Place your left hand over the right, and at the same time separate the forefinger from the second of your right. Quickly push the ball with the thumb of the right hand between the open fingers. The ball falls at the back of the hand, which you keep in such position that the company cannot see the ball hanging behind. Remove the left hand closed as if it contained the ball. Then open the hand and show it empty. With a little dexterity you may with a quick jerk throw the ball over your hand from the back into the palm and show that it has returned. For this you must make a movement as if catching it in the air. Now break off the hair and give the ball to the company for examination.

How Seaweeds Grow.

Those of you that are fortunate enough to get to the seashore this summer no doubt will gather some specimens of seaweeds. Do you know that they grow without roots? In this respect they are altogether different from plants that grow on land, obtaining their sustenance entirely from the water. Many of them float about in the water, but some are fastened to rocks and other things at the bottom of the sea by means of a stem with a sticky surface. Deep sea explorers tell us that some of the weeds found at the bottom are larger than any of the trees that grow on land. They form great groves and woods, with their branches interlaced, making arches and grottoes of wonderful beauty and of many colors—yellow, different shades of brown, olive, pink, green and carmine.

A Boy and a Bird.

A Capitol Hill small boy received a pair of pet pigeons from his aunt. The youngster was very much interested in them and paid them much attention. He fed them a dozen times a day at least. He was very desirous that some eggs should be laid, but the hen pigeon did not seem inclined to please him in this respect. One day the little boy came running to his mother. He was excited.

"Mamma," he said, "I know why Mrs. Pigeon don't lay a egg!"

"Why?" asked his mother.
"Because her egg is stuck in her neck," he replied. He had felt the pigeon's full crop.—Denver Post.

A Weighty Consideration.

"I wish," said the bookkeeper discontentedly, "that I had taken up a scientific career. I've a great mind to be an astronomer yet."

"Are you tired of figures?"
"A little."

"But if you were an astronomer you would be obliged to make calculations on a scale that you never have to attempt now. You'd have to deal with millions and billions and quadrillions of miles, instead of hundreds and thousands of dollars, as you do now."

"That's very true. But I wouldn't be nearly so likely to lose my position if I made a mistake."

A Substitute For Teeth.

"I think the funniest experience I ever had," said a photographer, "was with an old lady of seventy years. She wanted a good looking picture because she'd got it into her head she wasn't going to live long and she wanted all her relatives unto her third and fourth cousin to have something by which to remember her. She couldn't bring herself to buy a set of false teeth, however, and her mouth fell in woefully without them. I was despairing of making an attractive picture of her when she suddenly produced some crusts of bread from her handbag and stuffed them into her mouth. When she'd put in enough to make her lips and cheeks fill out she explained to me rather thickly that the crusts would do just as well as false teeth. And the strangest thing was that they did do very well, and I got a good picture."

Fresh Air a Necessity.

Were the schoolrooms constantly freshened with the air so abundantly provided for our needs there would be fewer nervous, irritable and wornout teachers and more bright, clear eyed, clear brained, strong bodied, happy pupils. Fresh air in the homes both day and night, summer and winter, with the knowledge and practice of correct breathing and the partaking in sufficient quantities of wholesome food and pure water, would transform many a sickly, irritable family into a bright, healthy, happy household. I will go still further and say that sunshiny and airy business houses and offices would reduce defalcations and embezzlements to a minimum. Unnatural darkness breeds disorder and disease of mind, body and spirit and fathers desperate deeds, while air and sunlight produce hope, health, cheer and morality.—Suggestion.

The Latest City in the World.

Whether it be from laziness or the difficulty of reaching the business quarter, London is the latest city in the world to take down the shutters and start its day's work. In Paris you may find a bookshop open with all attendants ready at 7 in the morning. A New York business man will make you an appointment at 9 or even an hour earlier, but at 7 o'clock in the morning Bond street or Cornhill—an arctic explorer is required to describe their aspects. London is not really awake until 10 o'clock. Is it the atmosphere that compels sleep?—London Chronicle.

Speaking of the Baker.

"The baker," said the knowing youth, "is the happiest man ever. Everything he stirs up pans out well. All he kneads is his, he has dough to burn, and his stock is still rising. He certainly takes the cake. He's a stirring chap and does things up brown. Though he is well bred and somewhat of a high roller, he is not above mixing with his hands. Besides, he is pious and cheerfully gives his loaves for everybody. The baker is the original 'wise man of the yeast.'—Lippincott's Magazine.

MORE OF THE FINISHED TOWN.

A few days ago The Reflector discussed at some length the disposition manifested by some people of Greenville to make it a finished town. That is that some of every generation in the past took the idea that the town was large enough, did not need to reach any further, and could get along well enough without modern improvements.

There are those at this day that regard the business section of the town as finished. They think it may be all right for the residential sections to extend as more people come in, but no more business houses for stores or offices are needed, and even if they should be needed there is no location for them, without breaking away from the present business quarter. At first thought there seems to be some foundation for the latter suggestion and it is a solution to that The Reflector is going to offer.

To the casual observer it may appear that the business section of Greenville is finished. True that portion of Evans street devoted to business houses is built up almost as compactly as it can be, and it is also true that every one of these business houses is occupied. For a few years there have been no vacancies and the only opportunity for a new comer was to buy out, or go in business with, some one already established.

The population of the town cannot increase very rapidly unless there are opportunities for engaging in business. Some will argue that factories would bring a solution of this problem. That is true to a certain degree. Factories would help wonderfully, but they are the result of corporations or companies. The individual must also have opportunities for engaging in business.

Then where are the business houses going? Where is a good location for them. To go further southward on Evans street is out of the question. Neither is it plausible to think of going either way on the cross streets, for business houses there would not rent to advantage because they would be less desirable than those out on Evans street.

To our mind the only real advantageous opening for more business houses is northward from the court house and Third street. To make this more desirable the wharf should be changed from its present location to the end of Evans street. This could easily be done by interesting the government in cleaning out the river so steamers could reach the wharf at all stages of the water. Then Evans street should be paved from the wharf through the business section, and on to the depot.

With such a change as this the wharf would be brought close to the business portion of the town and on both sides of Evans street for two blocks northward from Third street would make ideal locations for business houses, with the court house about in the center.

Oh, that is more idle talk, the finished town folks may be ready to say, but the Reflector is not dreaming and thinks it nothing amiss to contemplate just such things taking place in Greenville. This town is going to surprise you yet.

The Pennsylvania railroad has of its own accord reduced passenger fares to 2 1-2 cents per mile, and thousand mile tickets at $20. If railroads generally will do the same thing they would save many combats with State legislatures and corporation commissions. They will all have to reduce rates sooner or later.

The list of newspapers in North Carolina that will not print whiskey advertisements grows larger. The Mount Olive Tribune is in that class and says "It is a matter of surprise to us that some men allow newspapers to go into their houses, and be read by their children, that carry whiskey advertisements."

The Democratic State Executive committee meets in Raleigh Monday night. Senator Simmons will likely succeed himself as chairman of the committee.

This month will mark the beginning of yearly meetings and candidates will be in their glory.

Every home in this land, where children are growing up, should be a reformatory; and if parents would discharge their full duty by their children, the home would be about all the reformatory needed. All this talk about State reformatories is calculated to make most parents tired, so long as shingles, old slippers and peach tree limbs are plentiful.—Waxhaw Enterprise.

HISTORIC OLD PUNCH BOWL.

Unique Relic of Old Virginia Colonial Days Found in Oklahoma.

When a seductive drink, called Jamestown punch, in honor of the great Jamestown exposition, was prepared for a visiting press association a few days ago, at Norfolk, it was not known that a Jamestown punch bowl is still in existence. A letter has just been received by Robert H. Sexton, chief of special events of the exposition, from one who possesses a punch bowl with a remarkable history, a quaint old relic of three centuries, and the only article saved from the historic old home of Col. Edward Ambler on Jamestown island, which was burned by the British during the war of 1812.

This old punch bowl remains as a connecting link between the past and the present. It occupied the place of prominence on merry occasions during the gay social hours of colonial times. It still remains in the family of its early possessors. In those old times part of Jamestown island belonged to the Jacqueslin Ambler descendants until the war of 1812, when it was sold by Col. Edward Ambler, a son of Col. John Ambler, of Jamestown. During the war, Col. Edward Ambler was stationed at Williamsburg, where he was joined by his wife

While Col. Ambler and his wife were at Williamsburg, leaving their home occupied only by a few negro slaves, some of the British warships ascended the James river and burned the Ambler home. A few days later when Mrs. Ambler returned and stood by the charred ruins of her beautiful home she inquired of the group of negroes around her: "Why, didn't you save anything at all?"

A little black urchin stepped forward and said: "Yes, Missus, I saved sumpin'." The little negro ran to the woods and soon returned with the beautiful cut glass punch bowl, the only thing saved, which he had hidden in the bushes from destruction. This interesting old relic will be exhibited at the Jamestown exposition. It is now in the possession of Mrs. Archilles Murat, a daughter of Col. Edward Ambler, who resides at Beaver, Oklahoma. It is interesting to note that this old punch bowl has traveled from the oldest of the American states to the youngest, and that the lusty infant commonwealth of Oklahoma will send it back to old Virginia.

Queen Victoria's Wit.

In a biography of Leech, the painter, who at one time acted as drawing master to Queen Victoria, Mr. W. P. Frith relates an amusing story, illustrating her majesty's wit.

One day in the course of a lesson the queen let her pencil fall to the ground. Both master and pupil stooped at the same moment to pick it up, when, to the horror of Leech, there was a collision, the master's head striking that of his royal pupil. Before he could stammer out an apology, however, the queen, smiling, said:

"Well, Mr. Leech, if we bring our heads together in this way I ought to improve rapidly."

Reciprocity.

As the desire to give advice to all persons and upon all occasions seems to be natural to most human beings, the following story told of a well known woman writer may not be without interest: While speaking at a working girls' club a writer of successful novels asked the members how much they earned and advised them to put aside a certain amount each week from their wages. A few nights later the novelist's doorbell rang, and one of the members of the club presented herself. She had come to ask what the income of her late adviser was and to suggest what percentage of the same ought to be put in the bank.

Ironing Colored Goods.

When ironing colored blouses, no matter of what materials, don't use a very hot iron. An overheated iron injures the colors, making them look dull and faded. All calicoes, gingham and chintzes should be ironed on the wrong side.

Cleaning Vegetables.

After washing green vegetables two or three teaspoonfuls of vinegar should be put into the next water. This not only makes the vegetables nice and crisp, but also draws out any insects that may be hidden in the leaves.

Cuban Coffee.

To serve coffee in Cuban fashion put three pints of sweet rich milk into the brightest of new coffee-pot and let it come to a boil. Put in teaspoonful of ground coffee and boil five minutes. Strain and serve.

The Beaver's Tooth.

No carpenter's chisel can do more effective work than is turned out with ease and neatness by the beaver's tooth. This is the principal tool with which these patient, clever builders construct their dams. The outer surface of the tooth is a scale of very hard enamel, while the body of it is of softer dentine. As the softer substance wears away in use the end of the tooth takes a chisel-like bevel, leaving a thin, slightly projecting edge of hard enamel as sharp as any carpenter's tool fresh from the oilstone. The thin scale of enamel gives keenness, the softer dentine supplies strength, and thus the combination forms a formidable tool, which actually sharpens itself by use.

Hook's Fishy Compliment.

It was Theodore Hook's good or evil fortune to find himself one night at a musical "party," says a biographer. In the course of the evening's entertainment a young lady attacked a very difficult song, which she gave with exaggerated expression and a great many blunders. Next to Hook sat an elderly lady, as decided an amateur in criticism as the songstress was in singing, overflowing with gushing ignorance and sparkling superlatives.

"Oh, Mr. Hook," she murmured. "Don't you adore singing? It's so full of soul!"

"Well, madam," replied the famous English humorist, "for my part I think there is more of the blunder than the soul about it."

Badly Mixed.

The following extracts from speeches made by vestrymen are given in a local English paper:

Mr. H. D.—If I paid a man to do a job and he did not do it, I would not pay him.

Mr. G. C.—Is Mr. St. C. in order in introducing fresh matter that has already been decided?

Mr. D.—I move that we have survey on this day (Thursday) fortnight, on a Saturday.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Survivor's Story of a Most Remarkable Meal.

"The most remarkable meal I ever ate," the man in the mackintosh was saying, "was given by a retiring showman."

"The only square meal you ever had, perhaps," suggested the man with the white spot in his mustache.

"How did you happen to get an invitation?" asked the man with the baggy kneed trousers. "In order to make the number of guests fourteen?"

"He had invited a lot of us to partake of a little supper," said the first speaker, paying no attention to the interruptions. "He said there would be the usual large cold bottle and small hot bird. When we sat down at the table and the beverages were brought on—"

"What were the beverages?" demanded the others, with one voice.

"A small cold bottle of beer at each plate. And when the cover was lifted from the dish in the center of the table we found the bird to be—"

"Well, what was the bird?"

"A large, hot, juicy young ostrich with enough meat on it for a regiment. I give you my word, gentlemen—"

"Oh, shucks!"

Then they rose as one man and ejected him. He had told the biggest lie.—Chicago Tribune.

Water With Meals.

Water taken with meals should be sipped as well as taken sparingly. Ice water should be taken as seldom as possible—never would be a better rule—and the habit of putting chipped ice in the drinking water is to be avoided, as one never knows what may be taken into the stomach through this medium. The better way is to fill bottles with water and allow them to stand beside ice-chill.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Very Near to a Cash Was Little Lucile.

Little Lucile was not very fond of her morning bath and exercised all of her childish ingenuity to escape it whenever she could. Sometimes her mother was too busy to look after all the children, and Lucile was allowed to take her own bath, although a suspicion flourished in the family that this consisted of passing the damp end of a towel over those portions of her little anatomy that would be visible when she was dressed. On one particular morning, after an extremely quiet session in the bathroom, the little girl emerged looking rather dry.

"Lucile, did you take a bath?" asked her mother.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the youngster, hustling into her clothes.

"Did you get into the tub?" persisted the relentless parent.

Lucile stopped with one little stocking in her hand. Equivocation is one thing and deliberate falsehood another. "Well, mamma," confessed the young diplomat, "I got most in!"—New York Press.

Some Helpful Rules to Observe When Making Jam.

Skim the jam well and often. Use good, dry, not overripe fruit. The preserving pan should not be more than three parts full at the most.

The jam should be allowed to boil quickly the whole time; otherwise it will be a bad color.

When the jam begins to get decidedly less and to change color pour a little on to a plate and let it get cold. If it then forms a jelly it is done.

A copper preserving pan is best, but, failing that, a cast iron enameled stewpan does excellently. Tin pans should be avoided, as they spoil the color of the jam.

If you wish to keep the fruit whole boil the sugar and water first to a sirup and then put it in the fruit.

Coffee Jelly.

To one quart of coffee (as prepared for the table) one-half box of gelatin. Soak the gelatin in two-thirds of a cup of cold water for one-half hour or longer, then set the cup in hot water until the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Add one-half cup of sugar to the quart of hot coffee and stir in the melted gelatin and a little vanilla before the whole thickens. Set in a cool place to mold and serve with cream and sugar.

To Restore Oilcloth.

When oilcloth begins to lose its shiny surface it can be improved in appearance and made to last much longer by being varnished with glue. Wash the oilcloth thoroughly and let it dry. At night, when the traffic of the day is done, go over it with a piece of flannel dipped in glue water. Choose a nice dry day for this, and then the glue will be quite hard by morning, and the oilcloth will look like new.

How to See the Wind.

Take a polished metal surface of two feet or more and with a straight edge. A large handsaw will answer the purpose. Take a windy day on which to make the experiment, paying no attention to atmospheric conditions, for such an experiment can be as successfully made on a clear day as it can on a cloudy one, and the results will be equally good in summer and winter. The only thing you need to look out for is that you do not attempt to "see the wind" on a rainy or murky day, as conditions are then very unfavorable. When everything is in readiness, hold the metallic surface at right angles to the direction of the wind—i. e., if the wind is in the north hold the metal east and west, but instead of holding it vertical incline it about 42 degrees to the horizon. When this has been done sight carefully along the edge of a sharply defined object for some moments and you will see the wind pouring over in graceful curves almost like water.

The Juvenile Way.

Children are the real humorists. They never rack their brains to say something funny. Here is a small boy's ingenuous "composition" on politeness:

"Never eat quickly, or you might get bones in your throat. My father knows of a boy who got killed over his Sunday dinner. The greedy boy was picking a rabbit's head in a hurry and swallowed one jaw of it, and my father says he was choked to death there and then. Be very polite over your meals, then, especially when it's rabbits. Since my father told me that I have always felt rather queer over a rabbit dinner. I don't talk much and don't ask for any more."

A definition that won a little girl praise despite its strangeness was "Turf, sir, is grass and clean dirt stuck together by God."

The Retort Caustic.

An American in Devonshire, according to the London Tribune, had been told he must not miss seeing a certain peculiar rock formation known locally as "Satan's Stool." While leisurely examining the curiosity he was accosted by an irate military looking man, who demanded in unprintable language what he meant by trespassing on private property. "Waal," said the Yankee, "I was told I should make a point of seeing 'Satan's Stool,' but I never guessed I should have the pleasure of meeting the owner."

Saved His Comrades Life.

"While returning from the Grand Army Encampment at Washington City a comrade from Elgin, Ill. was taken with cholera morbus and was in a critical condition," says Mr. J. E. Thompson, of Eldon, Iowa. I gave him Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and believe saved his life. I have been engaged ten years in immigration work and consulted many parties to the south and west. I always carry this remedy, and I have used it successfully on many occasions." Sold by J. L. Wooten.

A Tragic Finish

A watchman's neglect permitted a Jew at the great North Seadyke, which his finger could have stopped, to have a ruinous break, devastating the entire province of Holland. In like manner Kenneth McIver, of Vandebolt, Me., permitted a little cold to go unchecked until a tragic finish was ordered by Dr. King's New Discovery. As he writes "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflammation, caused by a neglected cold" but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life. Guaranteed best cough and cold cure at J. L. Wooten's drug store. 50 cent and 1.00 bottle free.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor replaced his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the material was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by J. L. Wooten.
