WHAT THE ODD FELLOWS

Say About Their Trip to Aurora.

On Aug. 9th at 4:48 a. m. the little ship Myrtie, manned by that excellent gentleman, Capt. W. E. Proctor and his well trained crew, set sail for the city of Aurora with 20 Odd Fellows on board, 10 from Greenville and 10 from our sister town, Ayden. The purpose of our trip was to attend the district meeting of Odd Fellows of District No. 3, which was scheduled to meet with Aurora Lodge No. 138 on the above date. They asked for it, they got it, they have had it and if ever they ask here is 10 to one they will get it again.

To begin with, the day was fine, the way was pleasant and nothing whatever happened to mar the pleasure of the cracker jack delegation on board.

On arrival at Washington 7:30 the boys struck a bee line for breakfast, spending a little more than an hour in the up-to-date town of Washington. Promptly at 8:50 the little craft shoved off, leaving instructions should any one inquire for us, just say Bro. Ephraim got de coon and gone. For several hours we smoothly sailed on the beautiful waters of the Pamlico river, but when abreast of that stream of water that flows through God's country, South Creek, a powerful magnet drew the little Myrtie into its waters and gently led her through her various windings safe into port. Then it was that our delegation beheld a splendid town, full of splendid people, whose every thought seemed to be for our happiness and pleasure. They thoroughly succeeded in every way. The hospitality extended us by the people of Aurora both ladies and gentlemen cannot be excelled. We fully realize that we made a mistake in not going prepared to stay a week.

Much more could be said about the trip but for lack of space we are compelled to cut it short. We had a delightful trip coming home, arriving here at 8 o'clock Friday a. m. Brothers of Aurora, we will never forget you. We want the boys of Aurora Lodge No. 138 to accept with the compliments of Covenant Lodge No. 17 and Ayden Lodge No. 208, a year's subscription to our home paper, Eastern Reflector.

Let us hear from you occasionally, just drop a line to the editor and he will do the rest. Remember Dec. 6th we shall meet again in Ayden. We know Ayden is alright, but the pace set for her is enough to jar the Grand Lodge.

The proceedings of the district meeting will be published in a later issue.

With best wishes for the future success of our meetings, we are yours in F. L. and T. The boys of Greenville and Ayden.

E. E. Griffin,
Sec. District No. 3.

The ice plant has begun operations.

The bath houses and pavilion ought to be built on the river front before another summer comes.

FARMERS INSTITUTE.

Several Practical Topics Discussed.

Notwithstanding the swelteringly hot weather Friday, Aug. 10, there was a very large crowd of farmers in the court house to attend the farmer's Institute held that day. If the institute could have been held at some later date after the farmers were through curing tobacco and saving fodder, a much larger number would have attended. The large crowd Friday, however, is an indication of the growing interest in the better methods of farming.

No State has a better director of farmer's institutes than North Carolina, Dr. Tait Butler, whose special office is State Veterinarian but who is at home discussing and handling of any topic connected with farm life and is an able worker. A little man in stature but with a head full of common sound brains that bespeak their soundness from the practical common sense talks that he makes. He had with him this time quite an able corps of assistants.

The speech on cotton culture from the preparation of the land to the packing of the bale was exhaustively discussed by Dr. D. J. McLendon, of Anson county. Dr. McLendon made one of the most practicable, common sense, plain every day talks that the farmers of this section ever had the pleasure of listening to. He is a successful farmer himself and in his discussion of cotton culture he showed conclusively that he knew thoroughly what he was talking about. Dr. Butler's idea in holding these institutes is to get practicable farmers to talk to practicable farmers.

The feeding of live stock and the dairy interest in the South were touched upon in a short address delivered by Prof. B. H. Rawl, who is connected with the United States department of agriculture. This gentleman is thoroughly familiar with all the details of feeding stock, but the farmers in this section being more largely interested in the growing of cotton, corn and tobacco, he only consumed a short time for the purpose of saying to the farmers of this county that they ought to engage more largely in stock raising, that no country ever became great as an agricultural country that did not have as one of its leading features the raising of live stock.

In the afternoon the culture of tobacco was discussed by Mr. A. J. Moye of this county. Mr. Moye consumed only a short time in speaking but his remarks were plain and to the point. He talked upon the culture of tobacco from the preparation of the plant bed to the time it was placed in the pack house. He spoke of the various varieties with which our farmers all are familiar; and showed the cost of growing a crop of tobacco properly managed on an economical basis to be about $50 per acre, differing of course with the different farmers and their particular circumstances and surroundings.

The selection of seed corn was another topic that came in for considerable interest and was discussed by Mr. C. B. Williams, of North Carolina department of agriculture. There is no topic in which our farmers should have a greater interest than the proper selection of seed corn. This county already has corn growers association and will have an exhibit here in October. The farmers of the county should take a greater interest in seed selection and proper method of corn culture.

Dr. Butler urged rotation of crops and diversification. He only spoke about 30 minutes but every word he said was chock full of good common sense.

The farmers of this county should take a greater interest in these farmer's institutes. They cost nothing and numerous practical ideas can be gathered even though you may not agree with the ideas advanced. At the same time this coming together and discussing the phases of farm life by men who have made a life study of this work will always prove beneficial to those who attend these meetings. While they may not realize a direct benefit, every one of them will go home carrying ideas and methods that they never thought of before and which they will unconsciously apply to their own conditions with increasing benefits.

Let the farmers right now make up their mind that when the next institute is held in Pitt county, they will avail themselves of the opportunity, and as many of them as possible come out and encourage their neighbors and the gentlemen who are holding the institute by giving them a large and interested crowd.

ICE PLANT AT WORK.

Important Enterprise for Greenville.

The ice plant that has been installed by Mr. E. Green on Fifth street, has been completed and is now in operation. Greenville can now enjoy more ice and cheaper ice than ever before.

The ice factory has a capacity of about six tons a day and the storage will hold 50 tons. It occupies a building 30x85 feet, and the plant represents an outlay of about $12,000. The water from which the ice is made is pumped from two wells 150 feet deep that are sunk in the building. This passes through several processes so that it is distilled, filtered and made absolutely pure before reaching the freezing tanks.

The plant is complete in every detail, and is equipped with up to date machinery. Mr. Greene is to be congratulated for his enterprise and the people of the community owe him a liberal patronage.

The plant will be in operation day and night, and ice can be had at any hour. Mr. Greene will give his personal attention to the business department of the plant, and Mr. Davis, a skilled machinist and engineer, will have charge of the manufacturing rooms.

of troubles that robbed E. H. Wolfe, of Bear Grove, Ia., of all usefulness, came when he began taking Electric Bitters. "Make Hay While the Sun Shines."

There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day, and he prepares for the shadows which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhoea and cholera morbus may attack some member of the home without warning. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which is the best known medicine for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, as immediate treatment is necessary, and delay may prove fatal. For sale by J. L. Wooten's, druggist.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by J. L. Wooten

Homemade Cement For Mending Broken Glassware.

The best kind of glue for clear glass is made from a solution of two ounces of isinglass and half a pint of gin poured into an open mouthed bottle and set in the sun until it dissolves. It should be shaken well every day and before being used should be strained through a clean lawn cloth. When ready for the gluing the broken glass pieces should be well washed in hot suds, especially on the edges, dried, and then with a small camel's hair brush the cement should be put on the edges of both pieces, and when they are nicely fitted together rubber bands or clean strips of cloth should be bandaged tightly around them to hold the edges well together until the glue dries. If the cement has been properly made the break should really not be visible when dry, for the reason many cracks look jagged when mended is because the edges have not been well joined and, bubbles of air getting in, reflect the light, making the ragged, broken lines glaringly apparent.—Boston Traveler.

Care of Linoleum.

To keep linoleum nicely have a pint bottle, in it put a quarter of a pint of turpentine and three-quarters of a pint of linseed oil; mix both together thoroughly and always shake the bottle before using. Apply a very little of this to the linoleum and rub it in thoroughly. Then polish with dry, clean dusters. Constantly wash out the cloth used for applying the oil or there will be no polish. Never wash linoleum. If it gets dirty, rub it over with a damp flannel only.

Polish For Steel.

One tablespoonful of turpentine, one tablespoonful of sweet oil; mix the turpentine and sweet oil together, stirring in sufficient emery powder to make the mixture of the thickness of cream. Put it on the article with a piece of soft flannel, rub off quickly with another piece, then polish with a little emery powder and clean leather.

Points on a Point.

A student undergoing examination in the principles of mechanics was asked, "Why will not a pin stand on its point?" He returned the following answer: "In the first place, a point is defined by Euclid as that which has no parts and no magnitude, and how can a pin stand on that which has no parts and no magnitude? In the second place, a pin will not stand on its head; such feet, therefore, will it stand on its point. Thirdly and lastly, it will not stick in its head and so it will not stand on its point."

Jas F Davenport,

A Rustic Critic.

One day while Millais was engaged in painting his famous picture, "Chill October," among the reeds and rushes on the banks of the Tay, near Perth, a voice came from over the hedge:

"Man, did ye never try photography?"

"No, never," replied Millais, painting slowly.

A pause.

"It's a hantle quicker," said the voice.

"Ye-es, I suppose so."

Another pause. The final thrust was:

"An' it's mair liker the place."

A Poor Passport.

A sheriff of Edinburgh had forgotten his twopenny ticket. Asked for fare, he said, "I have paid it." "Then where's your ticket?" "I have lost it." "Then you must pay again." "Come, now, my friend," said the sheriff, "just look into my face and tell me do I look like a man who would tell you a lie for such a trifle as twopenny?" The cash taker inspected the countenance thus offered as a guarantee for its owner's integrity and then dryly said, "I'll just thank you for the twopenny."

According Himself.

"I'm anxious to get the names of all present," said the reporter. "Will you oblige me?"

"Oh," said the meek little man, "you may put down Mrs. Henry Peck and husband."

"You mean Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peck, don't you?"

"I would prefer that," he replied, with a furtive glance over his shoulder, "but for goodness' sake don't say I gave it to you that way."

And He Lost Out.

It had been all over between them for nearly thirty-seven seconds.

"Well," he queried, "why don't you give back the ring?"

"Oh," she answered, "I shall retain it just to keep my hand in."

Parental Consideration.

"Bliggins says he values his opinions because they are the children of his brain."

"Well, in that case he should realize the impropriety of trying to get everybody he meets to adopt them." —Washington Star.

CHOOSING A BRIDE.

A Gay Custom in Russia That Has Its Merry and Sad Aspects.

An ancient custom is yet maintained in Russia at the Christmas season, in which the festivities of the day are made to play a permanent part in the lives of those who are chief in the frolicking.

Some person of importance in the district announces that the annual fete will be held at his house. Thither, at the appointed time, hasten the young men of the countryside; thither come, no less eagerly, but with decorous tardiness, the maidens of the place. There are dances and songs, games and feasting, but all else is but the prelude to the great event, when chance is made the handmaid of love. At the arrival of the proper hour the hostess gives a signal and withdraws into an apartment, accompanied by all the girls. The lasses are ranged upon long benches, where they pose, a tittering phalanx of freshness and beauty, with naught in their smiling affability to suggest that a scratch on blooming cheek might reveal the tartar.

The hostess is supplied with long strips of broad cloth, and with this she straightway muffles each and every maiden. She twists it deftly over and about the head until hair and features are hopelessly veiled; she winds it about the neck, the shoulders, the waist and on until the sprightly and lissom figure of the girl is merged in the rude outlines of a papoose.

This is the preparation. The action follows, when one by one, in an order determined by lot, the young men of the party enter the room. Each in turn approaches the veiled row of loveliness and examines it. Eyes and ears are useless; touch is everything. The puzzled suitor seeks to penetrate the baffling folds and locate the personality of his idol. When at last he has made his choice he is privileged to remove the swaddling clothes and behold the identity of his prize. Then is the commination—the moment of rapture or despair when soul answers soul in the love light of the eyes or when disappointment speaks in the stifled sigh or shows in the averted eye.

It is the law of custom that this twin should become man and wife. If the custom is broken a heavy forfeit must be paid by the unwilling person. But it is rarely that happiness fails in the result. Chance, it is well known, is open to a bribe. And the lovers who would fail to offer her bribes would hardly deserve happiness. In their whisper before the hour of trial another consideration for the cheating of ill fortune are made, and the lover may depend upon his fingers' ends to carry to him the coveted bride who will be his through her identity and their mutual desire.

Gold and Silver Bugs.

The most remarkable gold bugs in the world are found in Central America. They belong to the genus plusiotis, and one might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal. The head and wing cases are brilliantly polished, with a luster as of gold itself. To sight and touch they have all the seeming of metal, and it is hard to realize that the creature is a mere animal. Oddly enough, there is another species of plusiotis from the same region, which has the appearance of being wrought in solid silver, freshly burnished. One of the most beautiful bugs in the world is a small beetle known to science as the blue hoplia. Its back is an exquisite iridescent sky blue, and the under part of its body is of a bright silver hue. The notion that it contains silver is widely entertained, and attempts have frequently been made to extract silver from it.

Don't scowl.

Don't scowl. It spoils faces. Before you know it your forehead will resemble a small railroad map. There is a grand trunk line from your cowlick to the bridge of your nose, intersected by parallel lines running east and west, with curves arching your eyebrows, and, oh, how much older you look for it! Scowling is a habit that steals upon us unawares. We frown when the light is too strong and when it is too weak. We tie our brows into a knot when we are thinking and knit them even more tightly when we cannot think. There is no denying there are plenty of things to scowl

REPUGNANT MEALS.

What People Can Live on Under the Stress of Circumstances.

The inhabitants of Paris once lived under Henry IV. during a siege on the most repugnant meals. All grass which could be found, even that growing between the stones of the pavement, was put into a mortar in a field over the city, and made into a paste of ground bread, which was eaten during a period of several months, and the necessity of such food obtained from the city.

What occurred during the siege of Paris in 1871 is still in mind. People ate almost all the animals of the zoological garden. One of the butchers sold a monkey and urchin meat, and canal rat as well as dog meat became "classified." A baker's family consumed during the siege their entire shop—i. e., all their goods—and an aged tradeswoman stayed in her basement for 143 days, living during all that time on nothing but cheese. The polar explorers knew even worse meals. The pioneers of the pole considered raw fish and polar bear meat delicacies, and Napoleon's authority for the statement that he and his men were exceedingly delighted when they succeeded in baking cakes with illuminating oil. From tarred rigging of the ship and from the lichens which were found on the desolate rocks not infrequently the strangest soups were made.

In the year 1901 the well digger Simon of Bonneval, near Chartres, was entombed by fallen sand and remained so for five days, having nothing to eat or to drink. In 1897 some miners in Wales were rescued from an entirely flooded mine after ten days, still alive. The water had already risen to their chins.

There are, however, still more remarkable cases. The London Philosophical Transactions told of a man who had stayed in a cellar, covered by the debris of the building, twenty-four days without eating and drinking. Italy, too, presents an instance. It is reported by Somio, the physician of the king of Sardinia. In Piedmont three women had been overtaken by an avalanche and had been living, when they were rescued on March 19, 1755, under the debris of a stable for thirty-seven days.—Harper's Weekly.

Well Set Up.

"So you're going to be married, Jenny?" said the village philanthropist to one of her favorites.

"Yes, mum," said Jenny, all smiles and blushes; "the wedding day is fixed, and we are looking forward to a happy and prosperous future."

"Well, my girl, I trust you realize what it means. I hope your young man is careful and has saved up a little money to set up house-keeping."

"Oh, yes, mum; he's been most careful about 'aving somethin' to fall back upon in case of a rainy day. Why, mum," she went on, with an air of conscious pride, "I've got a pair of ornaments, and Bill, why, Bill's got a clock what he won for runnin'. I think me and my young man are very lucky. We ain't got nothin' to fear."—London Answers.

What a happy thought that $1. subscription plan was. Here's a Miracle.

Spencer, N. C., Aug. 10.—Passenger train No. 12, northbound, on the Southern railway, struck an open switch as it was leaving the yards here about 10 o'clock tonight. The three Pullman sleepers which the locomotive was pulling turned over, but strange to relate not a single person was injured.

An unusual feature of the accident was the fact that the sleepers, which were in the middle of the train, were overturned, while the two day coaches in front, and two in the rear remained on the track as did the locomotive. The sleepers were well loaded with passengers and that nobody was hurt seems little short of miraculous.

CROPSEY STILL LIVES.

Report That Father of Murdered Girl Died and Confessed.

There has been a persistent rumor here and elsewhere during the past several days that the father of Nell Cropsey for whose murder Jim Wilcox is serving a sentence in the penitentiary after a sensational trial at Elizabeth City, had died and on his death bed had confessed that it was he who had murdered his daughter. There is no foundation for the report as will be seen from the following dispatch from Elizabeth City.

"In some unaccountable way a report has been circulated of the death of W. H. Cropsey, father of Nell Cropsey, for whose murder Jim Wilcox is now serving a 30-year sentence in the penitentiary. Mr. Cropsey is now on his way home after chatting for a few minutes with a party of friends in one of the stores. People here cannot understand how the rumor got out, for he is in good health.—Wilmington Star.

WHAT THE RAILROADS DID.

On the occasion of the great San Francisco disaster the entire resources of the Southern Pacific Company were employed to their utmost in saving and relieving the people. They were the first to order by wire, from adjacent cities, car-loads of food supplies for free distribution. They threw wide open their gates, and passengers were carried free on their Ferry Steamers, which never stopped running from San Francisco to Oakland Pier. They ran steamers around the water front picking up all refugees congregated on the wharves for safety. From Oakland Pier the people were carried free to whatever point they could care for themselves or be cared for—whether it was Berkeley, Cal., or Boston, Mass.; Portland, Ore., or Portland, Maine. Within ten days the Southern Pacific Company carried free 224,069 passengers. The value of which computed at lowest rates for the class of service rendered, amounted to $540,082,69, and this covers only the earnings of the line west of El Paso.

The transportation of relief supplies from April 18 to May 23rd, computed at lowest tariff rates over the Southern Pacific Company, Union Pacific Railroad Company, Oregon Short Line Railroad and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, amounted to $445,400 00 representing 1603 full car-loads, in addition to a great many less than car-load shipments. This does not include business handled by the express companies, of which there were quite a good many cars on which the railroad company received no compensation.

Much more than this has been done by the Southern Pacific Company since dates named, so that their entire contribution runs way beyond $1,000,000.

USE CHRISTMAN'S OINTMENT

For all Skin Diseases on Man or Beast.

This Ointment has been used nearly two hundred years with the most wonderful success in the treatment of nearly every form of Skin disease, and in many instances, it has effected cures where other remedies had failed. While we do not claim that this Ointment will cure everything, we say a fair trial will convince any reasonable person that it is equal to any, and superior to most of the remedies for skin diseases on the market. This Ointment is made by the Christman Ointment Co. Greenville, N. C. and is for sale by druggists at 25 and 50 cts per bottle.

The Industrial News of Greensboro, referring to the preparations made for an expected assault, Tuesday night, upon the jail of Guilford county, says. "It was not that Greensboro cared particularly to defend Bohannon and the two Crutchfields. It was not for them that men turned from their rest to guard the jail. They were guarding the law." That is the idea exactly. And it is not, except incidentally, that the two Gillespies and Dillingham were lynched at Salisbury Monday night, that men lift up their voices and cry out their indignation, but that the court of justice was defied and treaded contemptuously and that the law was spat upon and trampled under foot. The law! the law! The ark of the covenant of the people's liberties! Shall we have in North Carolina the rule of the law or the lynchers?—Charlotte Observer

To Soothe the Hands.

To make a mixture for the hands take equal parts of rosewater and glycerin, mix well warm and keep firmly corked. The bottle should be shaken before using. If the hands are rough it is best to put two-thirds of alcohol to one of rosewater, and rub over the hands after washing with soap before retiring for the night.

Picked North China Seed.

After the flowers have dried from the nasturtium plant lay the seed in salt and water for two days; then drain and lay in fresh cold water. Drain and pack in jars. Bring vinegar to the boiling point and season it with more and peppercorns and a little white sugar. Fill jars to overflowing and seal.

Flowers In Rooms.

Growing plants and cut flowers in profusion should never be permitted in bedrooms, for these exhaust the air which is required by the sleeper. Many a headache or attack of nausea in the morning may be attributed for by plants and flowers being allowed to remain in the room at night.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Spiders Are Intelligent Insects—How They Spin Webs.

Spiders are not only among the most poisonous insects, but they are seemingly the most intelligent. There are very many varieties of them. They have eight legs and generally eight eyes. Some say they can be educated. They display wonderful strategy in trapping and carrying off their prey and in building their nests. The silk they spin is formed by an apparatus situated in the back part of the undersurface of their bodies, which consists of several vessels twisted together and ending in very little openings (so small they have to be seen with a microscope) at the end of the tail. The gluey matter thrown out by these pores hardens in the air, forming threads of the finest description. It takes many of these to form a single strand of a spider's web. Different spiders have different colored webs. A Mexican spider has a beautiful web of red, yellow and black threads. It is said that 10,000 threads of a common garden spider would not be as thick as a single human hair, while others form threads so strong they will catch birds.

What is an American?

The term American is used to designate, specifically, a citizen of the United States, and yet some strict constructionists hold that it might just as reasonably be applied to citizens of South America or of Central America, as they are Americans too. And they say the same of the two countries. To call the United States America, however, and its citizens Americans is so well established as a custom that the terms would not be understood if you used them in any other way. There has been some discussion of this question recently looking to the selection of a better specific term for citizens of the United States, but it is not likely that a change will ever be made.

Celluloid Not Explosive.

There is a widespread belief that celluloid is explosive, but it is not, in spite of the fact that it is made largely of gun cotton. The material is the cellulose of cotton cloth, or raw cotton, which is treated to a weak solution of nitric acid. This has the effect of making a cotton pulp much like paper pulp. The acid is then washed out by a water bath, and after the pulp has been partially dried gum camphor is mixed with it. The final step is to roll it into sheets and dry it on hot cylinders, when it is ready for the market. Steam softens it, but it hardens again when dry. If flame be applied to it it will burn about like sealing wax.

OLD STREET CRIES.
The Din That Deafened London in Days of Long Ago.

Somewhere about a score of years ago there was published in London a tiny volume of most unusual interest to students of old time manners and customs. It was called "Old London Street Cries" and contained several hundred familiar calls, beginning with the middle of the fifteenth century, in which, as in a mirror, one can see reflected the life of the common people through the years—what they ate and drank and wore, their furniture and amusements, the toys their children played with and their luxuries, long since become commonest necessities.

A walk through London streets in those days must have been a veritable running of the gantlet. A few specimens of the calls which besieged the traveler's ears will suffice.

"Buy my dish of great eels!" "Buy a fine singing bird!" "Buy my wax or wafers!" "Hot baked worders (stewed pears)!" "Knives or scissors to grind!" "Buy my four ropes of onions!" "Buy a footstool!" "Ribbons a groat a yard!" "Buy a horn book!" "Songs, three yards a penny!" "Holly and mistletoe!" "London's Gazette here!" "Buy my nice drops, twenty a penny, peppermint drops!" "Troop every one (toy hobby horses)!" "Three rows a penny pins, short whites and middle-ings!"

Nor were the eager merchants content with verbal solicitation. The bewildered wayfarer was often so "pull-hauled" by one after another that resistance must have been well nigh impossible.

But times change and street life with them. A generation ago a few lineal descendants of the old London hucksters called up and down our streets. Now the rags and bottle men have disappeared, the "cissars grinder" merely rings a bell, vendors of fruit and vegetables have been silenced by law in many cities, and save for the sidewalk toys and the holly and mistletoe of Christmas time the newsboy is sole inheritor of all the street cries.

Less picturesque? Possibly. But one has only to spend an hour among the fakirs of a country fair to realize that even the strenuous life of the twentieth century has its advantages.

AN INCIDENT OF WATERLOO.

Its Effect Upon the Shovel Making Industry in England.

A millionaire shovel maker as he sat in the smoking room of an Atlantic liner said:

"I have been over to England trying to sell shovels to the British government. I failed. I didn't sell a shovel. And a dead man named Jones was the cause of my failure.

"Jones was alive, very much alive, during the battle of Waterloo. He sat on horseback near Wellington's tent. Wellington, seeing him there in civilian's dress, said angrily:

"Who are you?"
"I am a shovel salesman," said Jones, "and I came here from Brussels to see the battle."

"Now you are here," said Wellington, "are you willing to carry a message for me to one of my generals? It will be a dangerous errand, but just now I have no one else to send."

"I'll carry your message," said Jones, "and as for danger, one part of this battlefield is no more dangerous than another part today."

"So Wellington gave him the message, and Jones delivered it, but failed to return. The duke thought him slain, but one day eight or nine years later a man accosted the duke in London.

"Do you remember me?" he said.
"I do," said Wellington, shaking the man's hand warmly. "You saved two regiments of mine by the delivery of that message. Why didn't you return to me?"

"Jones said his horse had been killed by a cannon ball as he was returning, and he himself had been shot in the side, but not badly. A few days abed had brought him round.

"Well, said the duke, what can I do for you?"

"I am a partner in that shovel house of yours now," said Jones. "The firm name is Smith, Jenkins & Jones, and I'd like to get a government contract."

"He got it," the millionaire ended sadly. "From that day to this all the shovels used in the British army and navy have been supplied by the house of Smith, Jenkins & Jones. I wasted my time trying to compete with that firm."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Latest Arithmetic.

A tramp hires out to a farmer for $14 per month. He gets a boss dinner, works for an hour and then skips out. Counting the dinner worth 30 cents, did he make or lose? Counting the three bites he got from the farmer's dog while making his skate at 20 cents a bite, was the dog, the farmer or the tramp ahead?

A father pays $250 to educate his daughter in music, $50 to enable her to say "good day" in French, $150 to give her lessons in printing and $100 to teach her how to dance. She then marries a young man getting a salary of $2 per week. How much will she save by doing her own kitchen work for the next five years, paying herself at the rate of $3 per week?

It takes twenty blows of a hammer in the hands of a woman to drive a tenpenny nail one inch, and she misses the nail three times where she hits it once. In striking 500 blows, how far in is the nail driven and how far can she be heard when she strikes her thumb instead of the nail?—Chicago News.

A Wily Answer.

Sir Acquin Martin was at the head of a firm of civil engineers in Calcutta, a post which eventually led to a business trip to Kabul and to an intimate friendship with the late Ameer Abdurrahman. His highness, who had a low opinion of the truthfulness of the average man and woman, was greatly impressed by the Englishman's frank manners. "Did I ever tell you a lie?" Sir Acquin once asked the ameer. The potentate rolled his eyes and replied, "I never found you out in one."—London Tit-Bits.

Sociable Spiders.

Spiders are not always solitary creatures. A scientist has lately found in southern India a species of spider that builds spongy nests with outlying webs, each nest being occupied by forty to a hundred spiders, with a large excess of females. Sometimes five or six nests are clustered together. The spiders not only live and work together, but they share with one another any prey that may be captured, and some even show maternal affection approaching self sacrifice.

CONDENSED STORIES.

A Characteristic Story of the Great French Diplomatist.

Talleyrand, the illustrious diplomatist, one day found himself between Mme. de Stael and Mme. Recamier, both intimate friends, both celebrated.

"You say charming things to us both, but which do you prefer?" said Mme. de Stael suddenly.

"Madame, such a question is a veritable ambush. Take care, the penal code!"

"Prince, no subterfuge here! Which do you prefer—my friend or myself? Come, speak, is it the brunette or blond?"

"It will be her who will deign to honor me with a look."

"What, still diplomat! Well, I will put the question in another form. Suppose while sailing on the

in the greatest danger."

"But, monseigneur, be frank for once in your life! Suppose the peril be equally imminent?"

"Well, I would give my right hand to you, baroness, and the left to Mme. Recamier."

"But if you could save only one—only one—do you understand?"

"Oh, madame, you who know so many things, I suppose you can swim," replied Talleyrand.

Senator Bate's Rules.

The late Senator William B. Bate of Tennessee was a major general in the Confederate army and never quite reconciled himself to the defeat of the south.

Soon after he came to the senate he formulated a set of rules which he called "Rules For My Proper Legislative Guidance." Whenever a proposition came up about which he was undecided he would take the printed slip containing these rules from his pocket and study it carefully.

"Bate," said a colleague one day, "what is that slip of paper to which you refer so frequently?"

"That," said Senator Bate, "is a little reminder of my beliefs on constitutional questions."

"Where did you get it? Think it out yourself?"

"No, suh," replied Bate with much dignity; "I found most of those immortal truths in the constitution of the Confederate States of America."—Saturday Evening Post.

His Client's Weakness.

When President Hadley of Yale was professor of political science there a student once offered him a poor excuse for a bad examination paper, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Professor Hadley listened to the excuse in silence. Then he said with a grim smile:

"That excuse is about as poor as the one a criminal lawyer offered for his client in a case that had gone hard with him.

"Gentlemen of the jury," cried this lawyer eloquently, "remember that my client is hard of hearing, and that therefore the voice of conscience appeals to him in vain."

"SUPPOSE THE PERIL TO BE EQUALLY IMMINENT."

Seize this evening the boat should upset and we should be in danger of drowning, which one would you help?"

A Cautious Widow.

Sanitary caution is not new, though doubtless it has grown. An eighteenth century rector was burying one of his parishioners in the churchyard when he was interrupted by a woman who demanded immediate speech with him. "You must wait until I have finished," said he. "No, sir; I must speak at once." "Well, then, what's the matter?" he inquired. "Why, sir," exclaimed the poor woman, "you are burying a man who died of the smallpox next my poor husband, who never had it."

Origin of a Much Quoted Saw.

The origin of "A fool and his money are soon parted" has not been ascertained with certainty, but the following story is sometimes told: "George Buchanan, tutor to James IV. of Scotland, made a bet with a courtier that he (Buchanan) could make a coarser verse than the courtier. Buchanan rose and, picking up the courtier's money, walked off with the remark, 'A fool and his money are soon parted.'"

His Health Was Good.

Mark Twain has handed out a story about a physician friend of his who not long ago had to engage a new chauffeur. A big, strapping fellow applied and was questioned as to his technical ability, his size and strength appearing wholly satisfactory. "What is the first thing you do when you find that your carburetor is out of order?" asked the doctor. "Well, I tell ye," replied the applicant, "I honestly don't never have no trouble with it. It never gets out of order. I ain't been sick one day for the last two year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Can Opener Versus Corkscrew.

"It seems quite evident," remarked the observer of events and things, "that the can opener has revealed more deadly stuff than the corkscrew."—Yonkers Stateman.

A GREAT MAN'S SILENCE.

Calmly Dignified Under the Most Trying Circumstances.

A great man whose wife was devoted to him, but was subject to insane attacks of jealousy and resentment, was once visited at his country house by two old time friends. He welcomed them with marked cordiality, and, seating himself between them on the piazza, was soon deep in confidential conversation. While he was listening to what they had to say and occasionally replying to an argument which seemed to him more plausible than logical the door behind him was suddenly opened, and from it emerged his wife, with an angry face and a pail of water.

Without a word she deliberately upset the pail and drenched him from head to foot. The two friends sprang to their feet in astonishment and caught sight of the resentful woman retreating into the house with a triumphant air.

The man who had been subjected to this shower bath arose without a word, went into the house and in ten minutes returned to the piazza, having made a complete change of dress.

His friends were still in the yard and were wishing that they could be transported by balloon or magic carpet to their own homes, where they would not be witnesses of strange and embarrassing domestic scenes.

Their host called to them and placed the chairs on the piazza. When they were all seated he resumed the conversation with the simple remark, "As I was saying, my friends," and then went on with the discussion, picking up the thread where it had been dropped and making no reference to what had happened.

He was quiet and dignified and did not betray in his manner a trace of the mortification and annoyance which his wife's exasperating attack must have caused.

A weaker man would either have appealed to his friends for sympathy or striven to apologize for the strange and irrational conduct of the woman. He had neither accusations to make nor excuses to offer. He strove to put his friends at ease by diverting their attention from the painful exhibition of his wife's infirmity by engaging them in animated conversation.

So successful was he that the three were soon laughing, chatting and arguing together as though nothing unpleasant had happened.

When the time came for the two visitors to drive to the station to take a train their host said goodby to them at the gate with the remark that they had had a delightful afternoon together.

The great man loved his wife and knew that she was not responsible at all times for her caprices and resentments. Unwilling to talk about her infirmities, even with old and trusted friends, he acted with rare self possession and good taste in maintaining rigid silence and leaving them to infer for themselves the reasons for his reserve.—Glasgow Times.

A Ride For His Temper.

A certain farmer living near the town of Derby having got himself disliked on account of his quarrelsome habits, the other farmers decided one night to cool him down a bit. At midnight the farmer was disturbed by a voice shouting, "Your horse is stolen!"

The irate farmer hurried on his clothes and, hastening to the door, asked, "Which way has he gone?"

"Toward H.," replied one of the farmers.

Another offered the loan of a horse he bestrode, which offer the sleepy farmer accepted. After riding all night he found himself at daylight next morning riding his own horse.—London Tit-Bits.

An Impossible Photograph.

Business was not booming at the little studio.

"Only one order yesterday," said the photographer, "and that was an impossible one. A lady came in with her little daughter. She had seen, she said, my famous photograph of a little girl kissing herself on the mouth in a mirror, and she wanted her child taken likewise, only she had scrapes against kissing on the mouth on account of germs, and so she wanted me to photograph the youngster kissing itself in the mirror on the forehead."
