NOVEL DAMAGE SUITS.

Editor to be Sued for Failing to Announce a Man's Candidacy for Coroner.

There are some rocks in the road for Editor Clegg Ashcraft now. Damage suits are to be piled upon him for the next two years with smothering effect. These suits are to be entirely novel, something new under the sun. When the fellow on the excursion down near Fayetteville killed a man who was preparing to shoot the car full, his feelings were so mortified over it that he wheeled in and sued the railroad to soothe his feelings, saying that the company was negligent in having a passenger so report himself that another passenger was under the compulsion of shooting him. That case was thought to be pretty novel and quite rough on the railroad, but those to come against Editor Ashcraft are more novel and not half so smooth. Editors have often been sued for what they put in the papers, but never before for what they left out. The story is very brief, but pointed. Here is Mr. Jack Williams, a citizen of this good town, who desired to run for the office of high coroner of this county. Having made up his mind to run, it was obviously necessary to let the voters know of this frame of mind. There was no other way made and provided except through the newspapers, and so Mr. Williams calls upon Editor Ashcraft—but enough of our weak words, let Mr. Williams himself tell what happened in this famous interview which is to be made prominent in so many damage suits.

"I went to him," said Mr. Williams, indignantly, "and told him I wanted to have myself announced for coroner. I wanted it in all the papers, but as I didn't have time to see all the others, just get him to put it in his and all the others too. I made the contract to get all the announcements I needed for five dollars. Well, I didn't pay any more attention to it until I see that I was getting no votes, and I didn't know what was the matter. Then, right on election day I found out that I hadn't been announced." Here somebody asked Mr. Williams if he had paid the five dollars, and with a perished-thought wave of his hand he said that the "money wasn't no hunt," and continued:

"Now, I am going to sue that editor; I have already got my lawyer. Every time a man is found dead and the coroner gets to sit on him he gets ten dollars. So every time the coroner sets that means I have lost ten dollars. Every time I am going to sue that editor who kept me from being elected."—Mauroe Journal.

Our home merchant takes the farmer's produce. With them he finds a ready market for his butter and eggs, his potatoes and apples. These department stores take only his money. Our home merchants, not for profit but for accommodation and to assist the farmers, buy his produce. They sell it in a majority of cases for less than they pay for it and handle it at a loss, yet some far-

SOUTHERN COTTON ASSOCIATION TO MEET SEPT. 1.

The Pitt county division of the Southern Cotton Association will meet at the court house in Greenville at eleven o'clock, a. m., Saturday, September 1st, 1906. It is very important that the township organizations be fully represented at this meeting, and it is hoped that each will send delegates and assist in the transaction of business demanding attention.

Baptist Services Resumed.

The Baptist church was opened Sunday after an absence of the pastor, Rev. J. E. Ayscue, four weeks on a vacation, and large congregations heard him both morning and night. Though hoarse from cold taken while traveling, Mr. Ayscue returns strengthened and prepared to vigorously take up his work for the fall and winter, and urged his congregation to unite their efforts in the spread of the gospel. He prefaced his morning sermon with some remarks about his trip in the west and comparisons of people, and said none were more earnest or more consecrated than the people of Greenville.

Office Improved.

When the share holders of The Home Building and Loan Association called around at the office of the secretary and treasurer Saturday to pay their weekly dues, they were struck with the improved appearance of things. A combination desk and counter has been built across the office and this is surmounted with metal railing with a wicket through which persons can transact business with the secretary. The arrangement is very convenient and gives the office much the appearance of a bank. The building and loan association has quarters in H. A. White's insurance office and he is to be congratulated upon this improvement in fitting up his office so handsomely.

No Licenses Last Week.

Register of Deeds R. Williams made a water haul in the marriage license line last week. He had only one application during the week, but the party applying could not testify as the age of the bride-to-be and had to depart without the license.

THE WEATHER.

Showers and cooler tonight. Tuesday fair in west, showers in east portions.

Another crew of hands from Louisiana arrived here Sunday evening to work on the Raleigh & Pamlico Sound railroad.

Fair play is a jewel, and that is the reason, probably, why it is so uncommon.

Merchants do not appreciate this and take this very same money and send it to a department store when they could get better bargains right home—Louisburg Times.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Republican County Executive Committee for Pitt county, a convention of the people of Pitt county is hereby called to assemble in the court house in Greenville Saturday Sept. 15th, 1906 at 12 o'clock for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various county offices and to transact such other business as may come before the convention. The people are requested to meet at the several voting precincts of the county on Saturday the 8th day of September, 1906, at 3 p. m. to nominate candidates for Justices of the Peace and Constables for their respective townships and to appoint delegates to attend the county convention. It is suggested that all citizens who desire to affiliate with the Republican party in this campaign, and see to a good opposition county ticket in the field, be invited and requested to act as delegates from their respective townships to the county convention.

The time has come, when two well organized and active political parties in Pitt county is essential to the proper administration of public affairs and the preservation of the independence and rights of the people. Prominent speaker will address the convention,

R. C. Flanagan,
Chm. Rep. Ex. Com.

Announcement to New Subscribers.

Those who in the last few days have subscribed for the Daily Reflector a month in order to get the proceedings of the special term of court, need not be disappointed because the special term could not be held. The regular term of court begins September 17th, and the months subscription will carry them through that court and give the proceedings. Besides they will get all the good reading that comes along between now and then. There are a few who ordered the paper sent them only one week, and if these desire it they can by sending us 15 cents more get the paper on from now through September court. We make this announcement that none who subscribed to get the court proceedings may be disappointed.

Postponement Unavoidable.

There is much regret that Judge Shaw could not get here to hold the special term of court that had been ordered for this county. Many people were interested in it, especially in what is known as the white cap case, and were anxious for it to be tried. Sickness cannot be avoided, however, and is just as apt to occur in a judge's family as any other. Judge Shaw was on his way to Greenville, having left a sick child, when he was called back by a telegram advising that the condition of his child was worse, and on getting back to its bedside found it too sick for him to leave again.

Air castles ought to be cool, at least.

Lovesick couples should take theirs from a spoon.

NO SPECIAL COURT.

Judge Shaw Detained by Sickness in Family.

Today was the time for the special term of Pitt Superior court to begin, but owing to the inability of Judge T. J. Shaw to get here no court was held. Judge Shaw was on his way here Sunday and at Goldsboro received a telegram advising him of the sickness of his baby and had to turn back home. He wired Solicitor Moore to have court adjourned until 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by which time he expected to be here.

An unusually large crowd was here and when the court house bell rang the building was soon thronged. Sheriff Tucker made the announcement that there would be no court until Tuesday morning and the building was soon emptied.

LATER.

About noon the court house bell rang again calling the crowd together. Solicitor Moore had received another telegram from Judge Shaw stating that his baby was too sick for him to leave and asking that the court adjourn for the term. Solicitor Moore gave an order to Sheriff Tucker which was read to the crowd. This order adjourned the court for the term and directed all defendants and witnesses at this special term to appear at the regular term which begins September 17th.

The Most Important Duty of All.

The Mecklenburg Democrats in their convention Saturday passed one of the most important resolutions that any political gathering has considered this year in North Carolina, and it is a pity that other conventions did not pass the same sort of a resolution. Those that have not yet been held may follow a good example. The resolution requested Mecklenburg's representatives to vote for appropriations sufficient to make State hospitals for the insane large enough to admit all the insane people in the State. The time has arrived when this must be done. The people all over the State would approve of the expenditure of no public money as they would of money for this purpose. They are unanimously in favor of it, even to the event of robbing some other State institutions to bring the above condition about. This sentiment has been expressed already, but it is unwise. All our institutions need assistance, and none should be curtailed, but the hospitals must be provided for.—Davidson Dispatch.

List Growing.

During the past week more subscribers have been enrolled for The Daily Reflector than were ever added in one week before. We call the attention of the advertisers to this fact. Their announcement in this paper goes to more people than any other means they can use for advertising. With the fall trade now close at hand business men should advertise liberally.

We get some rain if nothing else.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements, what they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. THE REFUGEES

By A. CONAN DOYLE, Author of "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS.

"I have brought Captain de Catinat, madame," said she. "Then let the captain step in."

Obeying the command, De Catinat found himself in a room which was no larger and but little better furnished than that which was allotted to his own use. Yet, though simple, everything in the chamber was scrupulously neat and clean, betraying the dainty taste of a refined woman.

On each side of the empty fireplace was a little green covered armchair, the one for madame and the other reserved for the use of the king. A small three legged stool between them was heaped with her workbasket and her tapestry.

him and seemed to be reading his thoughts as they had never been read before.

"I think that I have already seen you, sir. Have I not?" "Yes, madame. I have once or twice had the honor of attending upon you, though it may not have been my good fortune to address you."

"My life is so quiet and retired that I fear that much of what is best and worthiest at the court is unknown to me. You have served, monsieur?"

"Yes, madame. In the Lowlands, on the Rhine and in Canada." "In Canada! Ah! What nobler ambition could woman have than to be a member of that sweet sisterhood which was founded by the holy Marie de l'Incarnation and the sainted Jeanne le Ber at Montreal? And doubtless you have had the privilege also of seeing the holy Bishop Laval?"

"Yes, madame, I have seen Bishop Laval." "And I trust that the Sulpicians still hold their own against the Jesuits?"

"I have heard, madame, that the Jesuits are the stronger at Quebec and the others at Montreal."

"And who is your own director, monsieur?"

De Catinat felt that the worst had come upon him. "I have none, madame."

"Ah, it is too common to dispense with a director, and yet I know not how I could guide my steps in the difficult path which I tread if it were not for mine. Who is your confessor, then?"

"I have none. I am of the Reformed church."

The lady gave a gesture of horror, and a sudden hardening showed itself in mouth and eye. "What, in the court itself," she cried, "and in the neighborhood of the king's own person?"

"You will find, madame," said De Catinat sternly, "that members of my faith have not only stood around the throne of France, but have even seated themselves upon it."

"God has for his own all wise purposes permitted it, and none should know it better than I, whose grand-sire, Theodore d'Aubigny, did so much to place a crown upon the head of the great Henry. But Henry's eyes were opened ere his end came, and I pray—oh, from my heart I pray—that yours may be also."

She rose and, throwing herself down upon the prie-dieu, sunk her face in her hands for some few minutes. A tap at the door brought the lady back to this world again, and her devoted attendant answered her summons to enter.

"The king is in the Hall of Victories, madame," said she. "He will be here in five minutes."

"Very well. Stand outside and let me know when he comes. Now, sir," she continued when they were alone once more, "you gave a note of mine to the king this morning?"

"I did, madame." "And, as I understand, Mme. de Montespan was refused admittance to the grand lever?"

"She was, madame." "But she waited for the king in the passage and wrung from him a promise that he would see her today?"

"Yes, madame." "I would not have you tell me that which it may seem to you a breach of your duty to tell. But I am fighting now against a terrible foe and for a great stake. Tell me, then, at what hour was the king to meet the marquise in her room?"

"At 4, madame."

"I thank you. You have done me a service, and I shall not forget it. Now you must go, captain. Pass through the other room and so into the outer passage. And take this. It is Bossuet's statement of the Catholic faith. It has softened the hearts of others and may yours. Now, good night."

De Catinat passed out through another door, and as he did so he glanced back. The lady had her back to him, and her hand was raised to the mantelpiece. At the instant that he looked she moved her neck, and he could see what she was doing. She was pushing back the long hand of the clock.

Captain de Catinat had hardly vanished through the one door before the other was thrown open by Mlle. Nanon, and the king entered the room. Mme. de Maintenon rose with a pleasant smile and condescended deeply, but there was no answering light upon her visitor's face, and he threw himself down upon the vacant armchair with a pouting lip and a frown upon his forehead.

"Nay, now this is a very bad compliment," she cried, with the gayety which she would assume whenever it was necessary to draw the king from his blacker humors. "My poor little dark-room has already cast a shadow over you."

"Nay; it is Father la Chaise and the bishop of Meaux, who have been after me all day like two hounds on a stag, with talk of my duty and my position and my sins, with judgment and hell fire ever at the end of their exhortations."

"And what would they have your majesty do?"

"Break the promise which I made when I came upon the throne, and which my grandfather made before me. They wish me to recall the edict of Nantes, and drive the Huguenots from the kingdom. You would not have me do it, madame?"

"Not if it is to be a grief to your majesty. Bethink you, sire, that the Almighty can himself incline their hearts to better things if he is so minded, even as mine was inclined. May you not leave it in his hands?"

"On my word," said Louis, brightening, "it is well put. I shall see if Father la Chaise can find an answer to that. It is hard to be threatened with eternal flames because one will not ruin one's kingdom."

"Why should you think of such things, sire?" said the lady in her rich, soothing voice. "What have you to fear, you who have been the first son of the church?"

"You think that I am safe, then? But I have erred and erred deeply. You have yourself said as much."

"But that is all over, sire. Who is there who is without stain? You have turned away from temptation. Surely, then, you have earned your forgiveness."

"I would that the queen were living once more. She would find me a better man."

"I would that she were, sire."

"And she should know that it was to you that she owed the change! Oh, Francoise, you are surely my guardian angel, who has taken bodily form! How can I thank you for what you have done for me?" He leaned forward and took her hand, but at the touch a sudden fire sprang into his eyes, and he would have passed his other arm round her had she not risen hurriedly to avoid the embrace.

"Sire," said she, with a rigid face and one finger upraised.

"You are right; you are right, Francoise. Sit down, and I will control myself. But how is it, Francoise, that you have such a heart of ice?"

"I would it were so, sire."

"No. But surely no man's love has ever stirred you! And yet you have been a wife. You did not love this Scarron?" he persisted, "He was old, I have heard, and as lame as some of his verses."

"Do not speak lightly of him, sire. I was grateful to him; I honored him; I liked him."

"You did not love him, Francoise?"

"At least I did my duty toward him."

"Has that nun's heart never yet been touched by love, then?"

"Spare me, sire, I beg of you."

"But I must ask, for my own peace hangs upon your answer."

"Your words pain me to the soul."

"Have you never, Francoise, felt in your heart some little flicker of the love which glows in mine?" He rose with his hands outstretched, a pleading monarch, but she, with half turned head, still shrank away from him.

"Be assured of one thing, sire," said she, "that even if I loved you as no woman ever loved a man, yet I should rather spring from that window on to the stone terraces beneath than ever by word or sign confess as much to you."

"And why, Francoise?"

"You have wasted too much of your life and of your thoughts upon woman's love. And now, sire, the years steal on, and the day is coming when even you will be called upon to give an account of your actions and of the innermost thoughts of your heart. I would see you spend the time that is left to you, sire, in building up the church, in showing a noble example to your subjects."

The king sank back into his chair with a groan. "Forever the same," said he. "Why, you are worse than Father la Chaise and Bossuet."

"Nay, nay," said she gayly, with the quick tact in which she never failed.

"I have wearied you when you have stooped to honor my little room with your presence. That is indeed ingratitude, and it were a just punishment if you were to leave me in solitude tomorrow and so cut off all the light of my day. And why have you not ridden today, sire?"

"Pah! It brings me no pleasure. There was a time when my blood was stirred by the blare of the horn and the

PRECIPITATION FOR JULY

The average precipitation for the State was 9.23 inches, or 3.38 inches above the normal. The average for the eastern district was 10.13 inches, 3.75 inches above the normal; for the central district, 8.81 inches, or 2.50 inches above the normal; and for the western district, 8.69 inches, or 3.89 inches, above the normal.

The greatest monthly amount was 17.15 inches at Selma, closely followed by 16.32 inches at Greenville and by 16.18 inches at Edenton.

The least monthly amount was 4.60 inches at Asheville.

The greatest amount in 24 hours was 5.26 inches at Sloan on the 23 closely followed by 5.25 inches at Southport on the 24th.

Except at Hatteras, Louisburg, Asheville, and Morganton, there was an excess at every station, the greatest excess being 10.57 inches at Selma.

The average number of rainy days was 16.

The average precipitation for the State, 9.23 inches, is the greatest on record. The greatest previous State average was 8.19 inches in 1896; the least was 2.74 inches in 1902—From N. C. Report.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE SOUTH.

The Manufacturers Record of Baltimore says:

"Coal and iron, the foundations of the world's chief industries, the basis of the vast wealth of Great Britain, Germany and Pennsylvania, the moving forces of all civilization, are found in the South in quantity, proximity and cheapness of production on a scale not elsewhere duplicated in the world. Of coal the South has nearly three times as much in area and many times as much in quantity as Great Britain, Germany and Pennsylvania combined. Of iron ore the South has certainly one half of all the known ore of the entire country. Measure if you can the limitless possibilities, the vast wealth of the future of this section."

We want to say a good word for the man who meets his small obligations promptly. They are not as plentiful as they should be and the man needs encouraging. Most men will pay but fewer will pay promptly. Almost any firm will testify that, counting the time, postage, booking, and the like, it costs all some accounts are worth to collect them, and still the man owing it to them is perfectly responsible in a financial way. It very often happens that the worst sinner in this particular is the man best able to pay.

REPUGNIANT MEALS.

What People Can Live on Under the Straces of Circumstances.

The inhabitants of Paris once lived under Henry IV. during a siege on the most repugnant meals. All grass which could be found, even that growing between the stones of the pavement, was cooked into soups. In a field oven erected especially for this purpose "delicious" pastries of ground bones were made up during a period of three weeks, and the bones were obtained from a nearby cemetery.

What occurred during the siege of Paris in 1871 is still in mind. People ate almost all the animals of the zoological garden. One of the butchers sold monkey and urbane meat, and canal rat as well as dog meat became "classical." A baker's family consumed during the siege their entire shop—i. e., all their goods—and an aged tradeswoman stayed in her basement for 143 days, living during all that time on nothing but cheese. The polar explorers knew even worse meals. The pioneers of the pole considered raw fish and polar bear meat delicacies, and Nansen is authority for the statement that he and his men were exceedingly delighted when they succeeded in baking cakes with illuminating oil. From tarred rigging of the ship and from the lichens which were found on the desolate rocks not infrequently the strangest soups were made.

In the year 1901 the well digger Simon of Bonneval, near Chartres, was entombed by fallen sand and remained so for five days, having nothing to eat or to drink. In 1897 some miners in Wales were rescued from an entirely flooded mine after ten days, still alive. The water had already risen to their chins.

There are, however, still more remarkable cases. The London Philosophical Transactions told of a man who had stayed in a cellar, covered by the debris of the building, twenty-four days without eating and drinking. Italy, too, presents an instance. It is reported by Somio, the physician of the king of Sardinia. In Piedmont three women had been overtaken by an avalanche and had been living, when they were rescued on March 19, 1755, under the debris of a stable for thirty-seven days.—Harper's Weekly.

Well Set Up.

"So you're going to be married, Jenny?" said the village philanthropist to one of her favorites.

"Yes, mum," said Jenny, all smiles and blushes; "the wedding day is fixed, and we are looking forward to a happy and prosperous future."

"Well, my girl, I trust you realize what it means. I hope your young man is careful and has saved up a little money to set up house-keeping."

"Oh, yes, mum; he's been most careful about 'aving somethin' to fall back upon in case of a rainy day. Why, mum," she went on, with an air of conscious pride, "I've got a pair of ornaments, and Bill, why, Bill's got a clock what he won for runnin'. I think me, and my young man are very lucky. We ain't got nothin' to fear."—London Answers rush of the roofs, but now it is all wearisome to me.

 "And hawking too?"
 "Yes; I shall hawk no more."
 "But, sire, you must have amusement."
 "What is so dull as an amusement which has ceased to amuse? I know not how it is. When I was but a lad, and my mother and I were driven from place to place, with the Fronde at war with us and Paris in revolt, with our throne and even our lives in danger, all life seemed to be so bright, so new and so full of interest. Now that there is no shadow and that my voice is the first in France, as France's is in Europe, all is dull and lacking in flavor.

He bowed profoundly three times.
 What use is it to have all pleasure before me when it turns to wormwood when it is tasted?
 "True pleasure, sire, lies rather in the inward life, the serene mind, the easy conscience. And then, as we grow older is it not natural that our minds should take a graver bent? We might well reproach ourselves if it were not so, for it would show that we had not learned the lesson of life."
 "It may be so, and yet it is sad and weary when nothing amuses. Who is that knocking?" asked the king.
 "It is my companion," said madame.
 "What is it, mademoiselle?"
 "M. Cornelle, to read to the king," said the young lady, opening the door.
 "Ah, yes, sire; I know how foolish is a woman's tongue, and so I have brought a wiser one than mine here to charm you. M. Racine was to have come, but I hear that he has had a fall from his horse, and he sends his friend in his place. Shall I admit him?"
 "Oh, as you like, madame, as you like," said the king listlessly. At a sign from Mlle. Nanon a little peaky man with a shrewd, petulant face and long gray hair falling back over his shoulders entered the room. He bowed profoundly three times and then seated himself nervously on the very edge of the stool, from which the lady had removed her workbasket.
 "Shall it be a comedy, or a tragedy, or a burlesque pastoral?" Corneille asked timidly. "There is my 'Pretended Astrologer.'"
 "Yes, that will do."
 Corneille commenced to read his comedy, while Mme. de Maintenon's white and delicate fingers picked among the many colored silks which she was weaving into her tapestry. From time to time she glanced across, first at the clock and then at the king, who was leaning back with his lace handkerchief thrown over his face. It was twenty minutes to 4 now, but she knew that she had put it back half an hour and that the true time was ten minutes past.
 "Tut, tut!" cried the king suddenly. "There is something amiss there. The second last line has a limp in it surely." It was one of his foibles to pose as a critic, and the wise poet would fall in with his corrections, however unreasonable they might be.
 "Your majesty is perfectly right," said Corneille unblushingly. "I shall mark the passage and see that it is corrected." He picked up his book again and was about to resume his reading when the king said:
 "M. Corneille, I am obliged to you for what you have read, and I regret that I must now interrupt your comedy. Some other day perhaps I may have the pleasure of hearing the rest of it." He smiled in the gracious fashion which made all who came within his personal influence forget his faults and remember him only as the impersonation of dignity and of courtesy.
 The poet, with his book under his arm, slipped out, while his majesty said to madame:

Don't you think you'd better let it
 When it is raining, rain away,
 For the sun will be shining bright
 If you take Rocky Mountain Tea tonight.

DOES THE DOG REASON?

Authentic Instances That Seem to Warrant That Conclusion.

A dog I owned suffered a great deal with indigestion. The least indiscreet diet would bring on these attacks, and as they occurred very frequently I had a large bottle of medicine always on hand and kept it on a shelf in his kennel. The dog seemed to have acquired a thorough comprehension as to the relief bringing quality of that bottle: Whenever he was ill and food was placed before him he would scent it, walk away without touching it, then turn to the shelf and, gazing steadily at the bottle, indicate plainly his wants. He took the medicine without the slightest balking, which is rather exceptional, as any one who ever tried to dose a dog will agree.

This dog when let out would never disturb anything in the poultry yard, but the moment a stray chick lost her way into his yard the savage got the better of him. He would catch the unfortunate straggler, kill and devour it, leaving only a few feathers as evidence of the "murder." Punishment always followed. The remnants of feathers were shown to the dog so as to impress on him his wrong doings and make the cause of the punishment clear to him. From time to time young chickens would be missing, and all efforts to locate the guilty one were vain. The dog's yard was always scrutinized, but nothing found.

My best broilers were disappearing at a rapid rate, and I decided to have the dog watched. Soon he was caught in the act and the mystery solved. The moment the dog had finished his meal he scratched the feathers in a heap and carried them with his teeth to a corner of his yard, where he buried them. The dog had the most embarrassed and helpless expression at the time he was caught that I ever noticed on a dog. An extra severe punishment was dealt out, and I do not know if the mortification of being trapped or the punishment did the work, but the dog was cured from that moment on.

The related observations show reasoning in order to accomplish something for a set purpose. I believe most animals possess the quality in some degree, more or less, according to their mental development.

In the last case described the dog's instinct led him to catch and kill the chicken, but memory told him that punishment would follow if found out. He reasoned that by hiding the evidence of his guilt he would escape punishment for his actions, which he understood to be wrong. The very fact of being able to do this shows a certain amount of reasoning and a sense of right and wrong. The dog's behavior is a consequence of his intelligence. It shows the need of a higher mental power to reason of the consequences of his actions.
