FIRE AT GRIFTON

Several Buildings, Including the Dispensary, Destroyed.

A block of wooden stores in one of which was the Grifton dispensary, and the stocks of goods, fixtures and a pool room, were burned early Sunday morning at Grifton entailing a property loss of $8,000 or $10,000 with insurance to cover about two-thirds of the amount. The fire broke out at 2 o'clock Sunday morning at the pool room and many express the opinion that it was of incendiary origin. The glass fronts to the more pretentious stores of brick across the street were all broken and the goods and buildings damaged to the amount of $500 or more, fully covered by insurance. Among these losers are J. R. Harvey & Co., J. Z. Brooks, McCotter Bros, and A. L. Jackson & Co., who lost small amounts each.

Grifton hasn't any organized fire department nor equipment and though the citizens responded quickly to the alarm and fought heroically the wooden structures were quickly swallowed in insatiable maw of the fire demon. A good part of the $2,500 stock of liquors in the Grifton dispensary was removed from the building but was destroyed or drunk and only $700 worth was finally saved. There was $2,000 insurance and the dispensary will not lose. Mr. Heber Gaskins' handsome soda fountain was removed from the building but damaged in removal. His stock was practically destroyed with building. The pool room, including tables and building was destroyed with an estimated loss of $1,000 and insurance on all amounting to $600 was carried. Several had no insurance.

The losers are:

E. E. Rouse, building valued at $1,000; insurance, $750.

C. H. Gaskins, building, $750; insurance, $500; stock, $1,000; insurance, $750; fixtures, including handsome soda fountain, damaged $500; insurance, $250.

Grifton dispensary, stock damaged, $1,700; insurance, $2,000.

A. L. Jackson, building, dispensary, $750; insurance, $500.

Robert Murphy, building, $600; no insurance.

A. D. Thomas, stock, $500; no insurance.

W. R. Johnson, stock, $400; insurance, $250.

Freeman, pool room and building, $1,000; insurance, $600.

The damage to stores and stocks across the street from the fire and to J. Z. Brooks's stables, amounts to about $400, fully covered by insurance. All of the insurance except the stock of the Grifton dispensary was carried with Rountree & LaRoque, agents of this city, and Mr. E. C. Rountree went to the scene of the fire this morning to reckon the losses.—Kinston Free Press.

THE WEATHER.

Showers tonight and Wednesday.

Anyway it's just as cheap to raise a veretable garden as to try to pick out safe investments.

Mr. Laughinghouse Appointed.

Governor Glenn has appointed Representative J. J. Laughinghouse a member of the committee to investigate the general fishing industries of the State. The committee meets at Morehead Sept. 3rd, and will make recommendations to the next legislature regarding laws for the protection and building up of our fishing industries.

The appointment of our countyman on this committee is a fitting recognition of his work in the last legislature. Mr. Laughinghouse, in the face of an adverse committee report of 13 to 3 against him, got his dutch net bill through the House by an overwhelming majority, and showed his interest in the fishing industry by the strong fight he made for the measure. He will do excellent service on the committee.

Hardly anybody has a good enough disposition to be glad when he has to subscribe for repairing the church.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town.

Ayden, N. C. Aug. 27, 1906

Last Sunday out in the country near here Gat Morris and Church Morris during a fight with Henry Cox cut him right severely, one cut being diagonally across the nose and mouth, and several slashes were made over the body. Henry was brought here late in the afternoon and his wounds dressed by Dr. L. C. Skinner. The parties to the affray were all colored and hailed from Swift Creek township.

Pupils are beginning to arrive for the fall session of the Free Will Seminary. From present indications the prospect for a large attendance is the best in the history of the school. This institution ought easily to have 300 pupils considering the large membership of the denomination in this section of the State. It is a good school, ably conducted and deserves the best of success.

The family of Elias McLawhorn have gone to Florida to make their home.

Mrs. E. T. Brown left Friday to visit friends at Hobgood.

Miss Nina Cannon has gone to Fremont for a visit.

Miss Miriam Johnson, of Winterville, who has been visiting Miss Gay Johnson, near here, has returned to her home.

The colored Masons had a big day here Friday. A parade, a brass band, barbecue, speech making &c., were some of the features of the occasion.

Mrs. Cason came home Friday from Panacea Springs.

If it was Greenville's third team which played our boys on the 24th then surely Greenville's first team must be a cracker jack. Full grown at least. Let us say three hundred pounders. Our kids are not so big.

Mrs. J. W. Quinerly and Miss Helen Quinerly have returned from a lengthy visit to Grifton.

Marcellus Smith, of South Carolina, is on a visit to the family of his father, Ben Smith, near here.

Miss Eula Flanagan came up on the train Monday from Kinston, where she has been attending a teachers meeting, on her way home at Farmville.

Miss Freddie Tucker, of Centerville, has been visiting Miss Sallie Bet Quinerly.

Misses Gladys, Ruth and Helen Chapman, of Centerville, were with Mrs. J. B. Gardener a portion of the past week.

Mrs. Dr. Blount and sister, of Standard, have been visiting friends here.

Jack Chapman, of Grifton, has been in Ayden on a visit.

H. L. Coward and W. B. Greene, were in Ayden yesterday.

Miss Lide Morrison who has conducted a millinery store here is now with the J. B. Smith Mercantile Company. The store she occupied formerly is advertised for rent by R. C. Cannon.

DOINGS OF CANDIDATES.

Vice-President Fairbanks finds making hay, with an automobile for a hay rake, rather too exciting, so he will take a small swing around the circle and try and puncture the rubber tires of Speaker Cannon and other receptive candidates for the Republican nomination for president. As nothing better offers he will speak at the opening of the Ohio State colored educational and industrial exposition at Columbus, Ohio. Its always well for Republican candidates for president to keep on the blind side of the colored brethren and such delegates to national conventions notoriously need watching. Unless Cannon and Taft are willing to open their barrels they had better keep an eye on Fairbanks.

Roosevelt has paid his dollar to the Republican fund and son-in-law Longworth has now paid his, so the Roosevelt family, that are Republicans, are accounted for. Why does not Cannon, and Fairbanks and the other standpatters come down, or do they think that as the glory of the campaign is to rest on the Roosevelt brow, that the expense of producing the result should rest there also?

Strange that no one has suggested christening the North Carolina with a bottle of turpentine, says the Newport News Times-Herald. It has been suggested that her speed might be more or less affected by the fact as to which end of the boat the application is made.—Greensboro Record.

The Democrats are going to have a great time when Bryan comes marching home. But when they go down the Bay to meet him, they'll not have the Yacht Sylph to use at Government expense. Longworth has the advantage of Bryan as a traveler, after all.

A farmer in Missouri has been arrested for swindling a lawyer. It is not stated how he did it, but other farmers would like to know.—Wilmington Star.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. what they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. (CONTINUED FROM YESTERDAY)

"I see by your clock that it is 4 o'clock. I must go."

"My clock, sire, is half an hour slow."

"Half an hour!" The king looked dismayed for an instant and then began to laugh. "Nay, in that case," said he, "I had best remain where I am, for it is too late to go, and I can say with a clear conscience that it was the clock's fault rather than mine."

"I trust that it was nothing of very great importance, sire," said the lady, with a look of demure triumph in her eyes.

"By no means."

"No state affair?"

"No, no; it was only that it was the hour at which I had intended to rebuke the conduct of a presumptuous person. But perhaps it is better as it is. My absence will in itself convey my message and in such a sort that I trust I may never see that person's face more at my court. But, ah, what is this?"

The door had been flung open, and Mme. de Montespan, beautiful and furious, was standing before them.

CHAPTER VII.

MME. DE MAINTENON was a woman who was always full of self-restraint and of cool resource. With a frank smile of greeting she advanced with outstretched hand.

"This is indeed a pleasure," said she. But Mme. de Montespan was very angry, so angry that she was evidently making strong efforts to keep herself within control and to avoid breaking into a furious outburst. She disregarded her rival's outstretched hand and turned toward the king, who had been looking at her with a darkening face.

"I fear that I intrude, sire."

"Your entrance, madame, is certainly somewhat abrupt."

"I must crave pardon if it is so. Since this lady has been the governess of my children I have been in the habit of coming into her room unannounced."

"As far as I am concerned, you are most welcome to do so," said her rival, with perfect composure.

"I confess that I had not even thought it necessary to ask your permission, madame," the other answered coldly.

"Then you shall certainly do so in the future, madame," said the king sternly. "It is my express order to you that every possible respect is to be shown in every way to this lady."

"Oh, to this lady!" with a wave of her hand in her direction. "Your majesty's commands are of course our laws. But I must remember that it is this lady, for sometimes one may get confused as to which name it is that your majesty has picked out for honor."

She was superb in her pride and her fearlessness as she stood, with her sparkling blue eyes and her heaving bosom, looking down upon her royal lover. Angry as he was, his gaze lost something of its sternness as it rested upon her round full throat and the delicate lines of her shapely shoulders.

"There is nothing to be gained, madame, by being insolent," said he.

"Truth is always mistaken for insolence, sire, at the court of France."

"You forget yourself, madame. I beg that you will leave the room."

"I must first remind your majesty that I was so far honored as to have an appointment this afternoon. At 4 o'clock I had your royal promise that you would come to me. I cannot doubt that your majesty will keep that promise in spite of the fascinations which you may find here."

"I should have come, madame, but the clock, as you may observe, is half an hour slow, and the time had passed before I was aware of it."

"I beg, sire, that you will not let that distress you. I am returning to my chamber, and 5 o'clock will suit me as well as 4."

"I thank you, madame, but I have not found this interview so pleasant that I should seek another."

"Then your majesty will break your word!"

"Silence, madame! This is intolerable!"

"It is indeed intolerable!" cried the angry lady, throwing all discretion to the winds. "Oh, I am not afraid of you, sire. I have loved you, but I have never feared you. I leave you here, I leave you with your conscience and your—your lady confessor. But one word of truth you shall hear before I go. You have been false to your wife, and you have been false to your mistress, but it is only now that I find that you can be false also to your word." She swept him an indignant courtesy and glided with head erect out of the room.

The king sprang from his chair as if he had been stung. Accustomed as he was to his gentle little wife and the even gentler La Valliere, such language as this had never before intruded itself upon the royal ears. And then his whole soul rose up in anger at her, at the woman who had dared to raise her voice against him. He gave an inarticulate cry of rage and rushed to the door.

"Sire!" Mme. de Maintenon, who had watched keenly the swift play of his emotions over his expressive face, took two quick steps forward and laid her hand upon his arm.

"I will go after her."

"And why, sire?"

"To forbid her the court."

"But, sire—"

"You heard her! It is infamous! I shall go."

"But, sire, could you not write?"

"No, no; I shall see her." He pulled open the door.

"Oh, sire, be firm, then!" It was with an anxious face that she watched him start off, walking rapidly, with angry gestures, down the corridor. Then she turned back and, dropping upon her knees on the prie-dieu, bowed her head in prayer for the king, for herself and for France.

De Catinat, the guardsman, had employed himself in showing his young friend from over the water all the wonders of the great palace.

De Catinat had arranged that the American should remain with his friend Major de Brissac, as the time had come round for his own second turn of guard. He had hardly stationed himself in the corridor when he was astonished to see the king, without escort or attendants, walking swiftly down the passage. His delicate face was disfigured with anger, and his mouth was set grimly, like that of a man who had taken a momentous resolution.

"Officer of the guard," said he shortly.

"Yes, sire."

"I wish your assistance."

"I am at your command, sire."

"Is there a subaltern here?"

"Lieutenant de la Tremouille is at the side guard."

"Very well. You will place him in command. You will yourself go to the apartment of M. de Vivonne. If he is not there you must go and seek him.

Wherever he is, you must find him within the hour."

"Yes, sire."

"You will give him an order from me. At 6 o'clock he is to be in his carriage at the east gate of the palace. His sister, Mme. de Montespan, will await him there, and he is charged by me to drive her to the chateau of Petit Bourg. You will tell him that he is answerable to me for her arrival there."

"Yes, sire." De Catinat raised his sword in salute and started upon his mission.

The king passed on down the corridor and opened a door which led him into a magnificent anteroom, all one blaze of mirrors and gold, furnished to a marvel with the most delicate ebony and silver suit, on a deep red carpet of Aleppo, as soft and yielding as the moss of a forest.

Without knocking, he opened the door farther and passed on into the lady's boudoir.

It was a large and lofty room, very different from that from which he had just come. Three long windows from ceiling to floor took up one side, and through the delicate pink tinted blinds the evening sun cast a subdued and dainty light. At the farther side, prone upon an ottoman, her face buried in the cushion, her beautiful white arms thrown over it, the rich coils of her brown hair hanging in disorder across the long curve of her ivory neck, lay, like a drooping flower, the woman whom he had come to discard.

"All is over forever between us," he cried harshly.

At the sound of the closing door she had glanced up, and then, at sight of the king, she sprang to her feet and ran toward him, her hands out, her blue eyes bedimmed with tears.

"Ah, sire," she cried, with a pretty little sunburst of joy through her tears, "then I have wronged you! I have wronged you cruelly! But you have come after me to tell me that you have forgiven me!" She put her arms forward with the trusting air of a pretty child who claims an embrace as her due, but the king stepped swiftly back from her.

"All is over forever between us," he cried harshly. "Your brother will await you at the east gate at 6 o'clock, and it is my command that you wait there until you receive my further orders."

She staggered back as if he had struck her. "Leave you!" she cried.

"You must leave the court."

"The court! Aye, willingly; this instant! But you! Ah, sire, you ask what is impossible."

"I do not ask, madame; I order. Since you have learned to abuse your position, your presence has become intolerable. The united kings of Europe have never dared to speak to me as you have spoken today. Such things are not done twice, madame. You see your mistake now. At 6 o'clock you leave Versailles forever." His eyes flashed and his small upright figure seemed to swell in the violence of his indignation, while she leaned away

Durham permits some other things but draws the line on pictures.

Louisiana has followed in the lynching line. That State pulled off one Sunday.

Looks like Uncle Sam will have to take charge of Cuba again to make her behave.

They have not quit going crazy yet over what they lost in that busted Chicago bank.

The reform spelling craze has received the president's sanction and that will make it go.

His boom for the presidency has not yet reached sufficient proportions to make Speaker Cannon feel very elated.

Some may leave the Democratic party and join the Republicans, but it is hard to surmise what they expect when they get there.

The finish of the dog, or at least a majority of his tribe, is looming in sight, and some of these days there will be a legislature bold enough to curtail the canine's liberties. A movement has started among the farmers of Mecklenburg county and sportsmen of Charlotte to make a determined effort to have the next legislature enact a dog tax law for that county. Every other county in the State should join this movement.

The administration is having some bother over the old question of 16 to 2, now it is buying silver to coin.

Can President Roosevelt or any other Republican mention a trust that can be labeled as a "good" or even a "decent" trust.

If the steel trust were to hire a gang of thugs to kill or maim everybody that is opposed to its business methods, as the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railroad does, wouldn't the coffin trust thrive?

The Washington Post has discovered where part of the balance of trade goes to, for it declares that a New York syndicate has gone to Europe to borrow lack $200,000,000 which Americans lost at Monte Carlo.

Those Chicago girls whose diplomas claim they can keep house and maintain a family on $10 a week, must be missaries of the trusts to try and prove that tariff protected high prices help the working man and those with small income.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Directions For Making Dill or Dutch Pickles.

Take a big stone jar that will hold at least four gallons, or a keg without a head. Select cucumbers from six to eight inches in length, wash and wipe carefully so as not to bruise. Add two pounds coarse salt to three gallons of water, boil and skim, replacing the water that evaporates so as to keep the same quantity. Put a layer of cucumbers in the bottom of the jar, with one small African red pepper, a bunch of dill seed in stalk and a layer of green grape leaves to cover. Proceed in this way until the vessel is filled. Then cover with a layer of cabbage leaves. On the very top put a good, big flat stone. Pour in the hot salt and water and let the vessel stand while a quiet fermentation takes place. In two or three weeks the cucumbers are done and should be transparent like amber, with a subacid flavor.

The Kitchen Sink.

Whether a kitchen sink be iron, enamel or stone it should stand on four legs with all its drainpipes exposed to full view. A very clever physician once said, "If I am called in to a case of diphtheria the first thing I look at is the kitchen sink." The danger arising from a badly kept sink cannot be exaggerated, nor can any degree of care in avoiding it be considered extreme. The waste pipe from a kitchen sink should have boiled water and ammonia or washing soda poured down it each day. At least once a week it should be treated to a dose of some good disinfectant, such as chloride of lime.

Apple Chutney.

Put into the preserving kettle one quart of vinegar, one cup of seeded raisins, two green peppers and two onions minced fine, rejecting the seeds of the peppers. Two cups of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls each of mustard seed, ground ginger and salt should then be added. Simmer two hours, then add sixteen tart green apples peeled and chopped and cook gently another hour. Put into small bottles and seal.

A New Window Screen.

It is said that a fly never walks downward. Acting on this hint, a clever housekeeper has devised a window screen designed to conduct all the flies out of doors. The screen is divided in two halves and the upper laps over the lower with an inch space between. A fly lights on the screen and travels upward till he walks outdoors. Not being able to walk down, he has no way of re-entering the room.

Callouses on the Feet.

Put a good handful of dry mustard into your foot tub and dissolve in cold water, then put in hot water until it is hot as the feet can bear it. Keep the feet in until the water becomes quite cool, then the hard part of callous can be pared off little by little, taking off a little more each time until it is all gone. If ever recurring, take more foot-bath, and it will soon disappear again.

To Toughen Glass.

When you buy new tumblers, decanters, etc., you should never use them until you have "toughened" them as follows: Place the tumblers, etc., in a large pan, pack them round with hay and then fill with cold water. Put the pan on the fire and bring it slowly to the boiling point; then remove from the fire and stand aside until cold.

from him, one hand across her eyes. "Oh, I have been wicked!" she cried. "I know it; I know it! How could I speak to you so! How could I! Oh, that some blight may come upon this unhappy tongue! I, who have had nothing but good from you! I to insult you, who are the author of all my happiness! Oh, sire, forgive me, forgive me; for pity's sake forgive me!"

Louis was by nature a kind hearted man. His feelings were touched, and his pride also was flattered by the abasement of this beautiful and haughty woman. His face softened somewhat in its expression as he glanced at her, but he shook his head, and his voice was as firm as ever as he answered.

"It is useless, madame," said he. "I have thought this matter over for a long time, and your madness today has only hurried what must in any case have taken place. You must leave the palace."

"I will leave the palace. Say only that you forgive me. Oh, sire, I cannot bear your anger. It crushes me down. I am not strong enough. It is not banishment, it is death to which you sentence me. Think of our long years of love, sire, and say that you forgive me. Oh, will you not give your anger up for mine? My God, he weeps! Oh, I am saved; I am saved!"

"No, no, madame," cried the king, dashing his hand across his eyes. "You see the weakness of the man, but you shall also see the firmness of the king. As to your insults today, I forgive them freely, if that will make you more happy in your retirement. But a time has come when it is necessary to review our past life and to prepare for that which is to come."

"Ah, sire, you pain me. You are not yet in the prime of your years, and you speak as if old age were upon you. In a score of years from now it may be time for folks to say that age has made a change in your life."

The king winced. "Who say so?" he cried angrily.

"Oh, sire, it slipped from me unawares. Think no more of it. Nobody says so. Nobody."

"You are hiding something from me. Who is it who says this?"

"Oh, sire, it was but foolish court gossip, all unworthy of your attention. To me, sire, you are as pleasing and as gracious as when you first won the heart of Mlle. Tonnay-Charente."

The king smiled as he looked at the beautiful woman before him.

"In very truth," said he, "I can say that there has been no such great changes in Mlle. Tonnay-Charente either. But still it is best that we should part, Françoise."

"You have but to name the place, sire—Petit Bourg, Chagny or my own convent of St. Joseph in the Faubourg St. Germain. What matter where the flower withers when once the sun has forever turned from it? At least the past is my own, and I shall live in the remembrance of the days when none had come between us and when your sweet love was all my own. Be happy, sire, be happy, and think no more of what I said about the foolish gossip of the court. Your life lies in the future. Mine is in the past. Adieu, dear sire, adieu!" She threw forward her arms, her eyes dimmed over, and she would have fallen had Louis not sprung forward and caught her in his arms. Her beautiful head drooped upon his shoulder, her breath was warm upon his cheek, and the subtle scent of her hair was in his nostrils. Her broad white throat was thrown back, her eyes almost closed, her lips just parted enough to show the line of pearly teeth, her beautiful face not three inches from his own. And then suddenly the eyelids quivered, and the great blue eyes looked up at him lovingly, appealingly, half deprecating, half challenging, her whole soul in a glance. Did he move? Or was it she? Who could tell? But their lips had met in a long kiss and then in another, and plans and resolutions were streaming away from Louis like autumn leaves in the west wind.

"Then I am not to go! You would not have the heart to send me away, would you?"

"No, no; but you must not annoy me, Françoise."

"I had rather die than cause you an instant of grief. Oh, sire, I have seen so little of you lately! And I love you so! It has maddened me. And then that dreadful woman—"

"Who, then?"

"Oh, I must not speak against her. I will be civil for your sake even to her, the widow of old Scarron."

"Yes, yes, you must be civil. I cannot have any unpleasantness."

"But you will stay with me, sire?"

Her supple arms coiled themselves round his neck. Then she held him for an instant at arm's length to feast her eyes upon his face, and then drew him once more toward her. "You will not
