BEWARE OF WALL STREET.

That financial buccaneer Hariman and others, is making it entirely too dangerous for ordinary folk to sail the Wall street sea. If you want to keep your money in your pocket, or prevent is being picked, keep out of Wall street until the pirates there have made each other "walk the plank," which in turn they will do.

The racing touts and sharpers would be skinned alive by the Wall street sharks, so what chance has the ordinary man of keeping even with this game, much less coming out ahead.

This fall is especially dangerous for Wall street and the banks and trust companies it controls, will be running close to the wind,—financially and are liable to do just what the public think they won't do.

Invest your money in something you can control, instead of in the stocks of corporations that are notoriously used for stock-jobbing operations of which only the insiders have any definite knowledge.

This advice is for Democrats. Let the Democrats monkey with the Wall street buzz-saw, if they wait to, as they have friendly co-operations with the corporations.

Mrs. Mary Hurley died Thursday near Roanoke, Va., at the age of 106. She was a native of North Carolina, having been born at Guilford Court House in 1800.

John M. Branch, of Wake county, committed suicide at Newport News, Va., by shooting himself. Financial trouble is thought to be the cause of his self-destruction.

Both President Roosevelt and Andrew Carnegie refuse to stand pat on spelling, but they agree to stand pat on the steel trust tariff protection that plunders the people of the United states of untold millions.

The Ohio Republicans seem to be in the hands of the boss and at the mercy of the political machine, for Senator Dick declares that he wants the platform to be the product of the entire coming convention. He must know he has a firm grip on the delegates:

When the president declares in one breath that he is unequivocally for a protective tariff, and in the next that he favors the bill to reduce the Philippine tariff, it looks as if he were still a Republican first and a free trader afterwards—a Republican from expediency and a free trader in principle.

Grading Begun

Five more car loads of stock and tools reached here Saturday for use on the Raleigh and Pamlico Sound railroad. There are now several camps in this section and the work of grading the road bed is being pushed.

September has started dry but is making it warm enough.

A Leading Question.

You sometimes hear or read of a lawyer asking a witness a "leading question," and perhaps you wonder what that term means. It does not mean a question that is first in order or in importance, as many persons think it does, but a question that leads the witness to answer as the lawyer wishes him to answer. For example, if it should be of importance to prove what kind of hat the accused was wearing the lawyer, if a leading question were allowed, might say, "Did he have on a black hat?" That would naturally lead to an affirmative answer, just what the lawyer desired.

The Whirlwind.

A game played by any number of persons, all but one sitting in chairs placed close together in a circle, is called the whirlwind. The players face inward and one stands in the center of the circle, leaving the chair unoccupied. At a signal each player changes to the chair next on his right and then to the next one, the whole circle moving around thus as fast as possible. The player in the middle tries to secure a chair, and when he does the person on his right must take his place in the center and the game begins again.

SHOT AT HIS DESK.

Brother of Greenville Man Killed.

Saturday morning at 2:15 o'clock Mr. A. P. Hyman, of Rocky Mount, was shot while at work at a desk in his office. The ball came through an open window striking in the side. It is thought that some one shot him from the top of a passing train. Mr. Hyman was a brother of Mr. E. Hyman, of Greenville, and the latter went to Rocky Mount upon learning of the tragedy.

TRADE MUST BE RECIPROCAL.

Barter is the basis of all trade. If we would sell, we must also buy. This is true of all nations and men. A tariff is "protective" only to the same extent to which it is prohibitive of trade, and is injurious to both buyer and seller and to the extent to which it is prohibitive.

It gives an unjust advantage to one class, that is to those who have a monopoly in the exclusive market and against all who use horses or commodities within the "protected" zone. It is the very quintessence of dishonesty; and to advocate such a policy in the name of labor is the very quintessence of hypocrisy.

Horse Runs Away.

This morning Mr. R. J. Cobb's driver took his horse and buggy to the ice factory to get ice. The negro very foolishly left the horse standing while he went to get the ice, and in attempting to dump a block of ice in the buggy. This frightened the animal and he ran away, coming through Evans street with the umbrella top of the buggy dragging behind. Both the horse and buggy were injured slightly.

Pitt Girls at N. & I.

Among the students who represent Pitt county at the State Normal & Industrial College this fall are Misses Clyde and Christine Stancill, of Hill, Jennie Carson, of Bethel, Allie G. Little, of Parmele, Bessie Brooks, of Grifton, and Fannie Moore, of Greenville.

A horse belonging to S. J. Harire, who lives near Wadesboro, met its death in a peculiar manner a few days ago. It was grazing in a gully which ran through a pasture. It went up the gully until it reached a point too narrow for it to turn around. When found the horse's head was caught in the forks of a tree beside the gully and it was dead.

It is supposed that in trying to free itself from the gully the horse caught its head in the tree and was choked to death.

WHEN TEXAS HAD A NAVY.

Interesting Times Recalled by Proposed Exhibition of Texas War Vessels at Jamestown Exposition.

(By S. E. Snyder)

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 1.—That Texas ever had such a thing as a navy will be news to almost everybody except of course some of the older Texans.

The Republic of Texas has not been so long a thing of history but that there are still men living who have seen the ensign of that nation flying at the peak of the flagship of her fleet. This is recalled because an effort now being made to exhibit one of these old ships at the great world's navy rendezvous at the Jamestown exposition in 1907.

The Texas navy was created in 1835, when Henry Smith was provisional president of the republic. There were three armed schooners in the little flotilla, but they made the Mexicans tired of life along the gulf coast. They preyed upon Mexican commerce, raided coast settlements, and with their captured booty and supplies did much to maintain the Texas military establishment aside from supporting themselves.

This navy was gradually strengthened until in 1840 it numbered six good staunch fighting ships. The flagship was the Austin, carrying the ensign of Commodore Edwin Warde Moore. The others were Zarala, San Antonio, the San Jacinto, the San Bernard and the brig Dolphin. It was the mission of that fleet to make as much trouble for Mexico as possible, and when in 1840 the province of Yucatan went into revolt President Lamar, of Texas, ordered Commodore Moore to help the revolutionists, and if the Yucatan soldiery had done their part Mexico would probably have lost another slice of territory, for the Texas fleet certainly did create some excitement wherever the enemy happened to be.

After two years of this sort of warfare the fleet sailed up the Mississippi and laid up for repairs at New Orleans. Here it remained so long a time that Gen. Sam Houston, then president of Texas, ordered it to Galveston, but Commodore Moore refused, on the ground that most of his private fortune had been expended in repairing and maintaining the fleet. Very soon after this the Texas congress decided that it did not need any navy and the entire outfit was sold.

It is understood that at least two of these historical craft are in good repair and may be had for exhibition purposes at the Jamestown exposition. An antiquated schooner of war would be a strange sight flying the flag of the Republic of Texas among the powerful fighting machines of today, which will be gathered in Hampton Roads next year as a spectacle of the Jamestown exposition.

Saved His Comrades Life.

"While returning from the Grand Army Encampment at Washington City, a comrade from Elgin, Ill., was taken with Cholera Morbus and was in a critical condition," says Mr. J. E. Houghland, of Eldon, Iowa. I gave him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and believe saved his life. I have been engaged ten years in immigration work and conducted many parties to the south and west. I always carry this remedy and have used it successfully on many occasions. Sold by J. L. Wooten.

Summer Diarrhoea in Children.

During the hot weather of the summer months the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention, so as to check the disease before it becomes serious. All that is necessary is a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy followed by a dose of castor oil to cleanse the system. Rev. M. H. Stockland, pastor of the first M. E. church, Little Falls, Minn., writes: "We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for several years and find it a very valuable remedy, especially for summer disorders in children." cited now. "Well?" he cried, gripping the other's arm.

"Well, when we send a scout into the woods, if the matter is worth it, we send a second one at another hour, and so one or other comes back with his hair on. That's the Iroquois fashion, and a good fashion too."

"My God, I believe that you have saved me!"

"I went back to the major then, and I asked him when he was in Paris to pass by the archbishop's door. I showed him this lump of chalk. 'If we've been there,' said I, 'you'll see a great cross on the left side of the doorpost. If there's no cross, then pull the latch and ask the bishop if he'll come up to the palace as quick as his horses can bring him.' The major started an hour after us. He would be in Paris by half past 10; the bishop would be in his carriage by 11, and he would reach Versailles half an hour ago—that is to say, about half past 12. By the Lord, I think I've driven him off his head!"

De Catinat spun round the cell now, waving his arms and his legs, with his shadow capering up the wall behind him, all distorted in the moonlight.

"Oh, if I could but do something for you!" he exclaimed.

"You can, then. Lie down on that straw and go to sleep."

By persuasions and a little pushing he got his delighted companion on to his couch again and heaped the straw over him to serve as a blanket.

So weary was the young guardsman that it was long past noon and the sun was shining out of a cloudless blue sky before he awoke. For a moment, enveloped as he was in straw, and with the rude arch of the dungeon meeting in four rough hewn grommings above his head, he stared about him in bewilderment. Then in an instant the doings of the day before, his mission, the ambuscade, his imprisonment, all flashed back to him, and he sprang to his feet. His comrade, who had been dozing in the corner, jumped up also at the first movement, with his hand on his knife and a sinister glance directed toward the door.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" said he. "I thought it was the man. They brought those two loaves and a jug of water just about dawn, when I was settling down for a rest."

"And did he say anything?"

"No; it was the little black one."

"Simon, they called him."

"The same. He laid the things down and was gone. I thought that maybe if he came again we might get him to stop. Maybe if we got these stirrup leathers round his ankles he would tell us where we are and what is to be done with us."

"Pshaw! What does it matter since our mission is done?"

"It may not matter to you—there's no accounting for tastes—but it matters a good deal to me. I'm not used to sitting in a hole, like a bear in a trap, waiting for what other folks choose to do with me."

"There's no help but patience, my friend."

"I don't know that. I'd get more help out of a bar and a few pegs." He opened his coat and took out a short piece of rusted iron and three small, thick pieces of wood, sharpened at one end.

"Where did you get those, then?"

"These are my night's work. The bar is the top one of the grate. I had a job to loosen it, but there it is. The pegs I whittled out of that log. You see, peg number one goes in here, where I have picked a hole between the stones. Then I've made this other log into a mallet, and with two cracks there it is firm fixed so that you can put your weight on it. Now these two go in the same way into the holes above here. So! Now, you see, you can stand up there and look out of that window without asking too much of your toe joint. Try it."

De Catinat sprang up and looked eagerly out between the bars.

"I do not know the place," said he, shaking his head. "It may be any one of thirty castles which lie upon the south side of Paris and within six or seven leagues of it."

He was dropping back to the floor and put his weight upon the bar. To his amazement it came away in his hand.

"Look, Amos; look!" he cried.

"Ah, you've found it out! Well, I did that during the night. I could make no way with my knife, but when I got the bar out of the grate I managed faster. I'll put this one back now, or some of those folk down below may notice that we have got it loose."

"Are they all loose?"

"Only the one at present, but we'll get the other two out during the night. You can take that bar out and work with it while I use my own picker at the other. You see, the stone is soft, and by grinding it you soon make a groove along which you can slip the bar. It will be mighty queer if we can't clear a road for ourselves before morning."

"Well, but even if we could get out into the courtyard where could we turn to then?"

they should be surprised by the jailer or observed from without. The instant that night fell they were both up upon the pegs, grinding away at the hard stone and tugging at the bars. It was a rainy night, and there was a sharp thunderstorm, but they could see very well, while the shadow of the arched window prevented their being seen. Before midnight they had loosened one bar, and the other was just beginning to give when some slight noise made them turn their heads, and there was their jailer standing, open mouthed, in the middle of the cell, staring up at them.

It was De Catinat who observed him first, and he sprang down at him in an instant with his bar, but at the movement the man rushed for the door and drew it after him just as the American's tool whizzed past his ear and down the passage.

"It is scarce worth while to go on," said De Catinat.

THE BOW AND ARROW.

Archery is a Recreation of Great Physical Value.

In the choice of a man's recreation one should choose that which not only gives him sufficient muscular exercise and full respiration, but which will give him also as large an amount of pleasure as possible, for the pleasurable of an exercise is one test of its value. During his period of recreation a man's care and worry should be completely submerged by the gush of youthful enthusiasm. Only under these conditions does physical exercise yield even its full physical value. But there should be more than the physical consideration entering into the matter of recreation. One's recreation should possess something of an artistic and aesthetic value. It should be of such a nature that through participating in it and through love for it one will become a more cultured gentleman.

All of these requirements are ideally met in the most historic of games, archery. As to muscular exercise and respiration archery is fully adequate, and especially so because it can be followed to old age. As the muscles strengthen the bow can be adjusted to the increasing strength. As old age approaches and the muscles begin to tire under the arduous work of the younger man the bow can again be fitted to the man, while the muscles themselves and the eye need not lose their cunning. Indeed, it is a noteworthy fact that many of the leading archers of all times have been men of advanced years. In fact, the fascination of the long bow seems to grow stronger in the faithful archer as his years advance, even as Robin Hood, through the lattice of his chamber, shot his last arrow to mark the spot of his grave.

But to illustrate the nature of the physical exercise which is involved in the pursuit of archery it might be said that in shooting a single York round, which is seventy-two arrows at 100 yards, forty-eight arrows at eighty yards, and twenty-four arrows at sixty yards, the archer must walk 2,080 yards. If he use two targets and twice that if he has only one target. If he uses a bow which will draw 60 pounds

COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Republican County Executive Committee for Pitt county, a convention of the people of Pitt county is hereby called to assemble in the court house in Greenville Saturday Sept.
15th, 1906 at 12 o'clock for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various county offices and to transact such other business as may come before the convention.

The people are requested to meet at the several voting precincts of the county on Saturday the 8th day of September, 1906, at 3 p. m.
to nominate candidates for Justices of the Peace and Constables for their respective townships and to appoint delegates to attend the county convention. It is suggested that all citizens who desire to affiliate with the Republican party in this campaign, and see to a good opposition county ticket in the field, be invited and requested to act as delegates from their respective townships to the county convention.

The time has come, when two well organized and active political parties in Pitt county is essential to the proper administration of public affairs and the preservation of the independence and rights of the people. Prominent speakers will address the convention,

Chapter 21, Revisal of 1905, entitled "Corporations," preliminary to the issuing of this Certificate of Dissolution.

Now, Therefore, I, J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of the State of North Carolina, do hereby certify that the said corporation did, on the 9th day of August, 1906, file in my office a duly executed and attested consent in writing to the dissolution of said corporation, executed by all the stockholders thereof,
which said consent and the record of the proceedings aforesaid are now on file in my said office as provided by law.
In Testimony Whereof, I have hereto set my hand and affixed my official seal, at Raleigh, this 9th day of August A. D. 1906.

Admin. of H. G. NOBLES.

which is the ordinary weight for men, he has drawn in all 6,480 pounds. This work has been done by a direct pull across the chest, an exercise which puts all the muscles of the back and shoulders in most perfect tonus and forces the most perfect respiration. In fact, no form of exercise could surpass archery for the purpose of straightening up stooped shoulders and expanding the collapsed chest and lungs. Nothing can take the place of archery for the man who is confined over a desk in his daily work.

But there are other important features of archery from the purely physical point of view. To make a successful shot with the bow one must bring every muscle of the body under most perfect control and into most perfect co-ordination with the eye. This factor itself is of important educational significance—the factor of self control at a trying moment. When the bow is full drawn every muscle must be in the highest tension, the body in absolute equilibrium, the bow held as if in a vise and the point of the arrow on the mark. Then the string must bound from the fingers without a waver or jerk. These are only some of the elements of archery, and there is a lifetime of study in them.—Dr. George E. Coghill in Recreation.

Affected the Verdict.

"You see, gentlemen," said the counsel for the defendant complacently—it was a compensation case
—"I have got the plaintiff into a very nice dilemma. If he went there seeing that the place was dangerous, there was contributory negligence, and, as his lordship will tell you, he can't recover. If he did not see it was dangerous, neither could my client have seen it, and there was no negligence on his part. In either case I am entitled to your verdict." The jury retired. "Well, gentlemen," said the foreman, "I think we must give him £300." All agreed except a stout, ruddy gentleman in the corner, who cried hoarsely, "Give him another £50, gemmen, for getting into the dilemma!" Verdict accordingly.—London Graphic.

The First Pins.

Thorns were originally used in fastening garments together. Pins did not immediately succeed thorns as fasteners, but different appliances were used, such as hooks, buckles and laces. It was the latter half of the fifteenth century before pins were used in Great Britain.
When first manufactured in England the iron wire, of the proper length, was filed to a point and the other extremity twisted into a head.
This was a slow process, and 400 or 500 pins was a good day's work for an expert hand.

Three Minutes' Light a Year.

Arrangements were made to take a sunlight photograph at the bottom of the shaft of a mine 2,000 feet deep at Sombretete, in Mexico.
The town is on the tropic of Cancer,
and the sun's rays at the meridian on June 21 fall vertically and illuminate the shaft brightly to its lowest depths. The sunlight lasts about three minutes and then disappears for a year.

MONDAY, SEPT. 3, 1906

Today was Labor Day, and most of us stuck to it.

High Point is going to have a soap factory. Maybe the town can keep clean.

Break the News! Durham is going to have a hanging if a cog don't slip. A man there has been convicted of burglary and the death sentence pronounced.

Next week, 9th to 16th, Baltimore will have a jubilee and Maryland home coming week. It will be a celebration of the rebuilding of the city since the destructive fire in February 1904. One hundred millions in splendid modern structures have taken the place of the sixty-five millions destroyed by the fire. An elaborate program has been arranged covering the entire jubilee week and the railroads will give special rates.

Uncle Joe Cannon who is reputed to swear like a pirate, will find it difficult to sit up and look good for the next two years.

The candidates for admission to the civil service, if rejected for phonetic spelling, will be able to cite the president as their authority instead of the dictionary.

The editors of the country seem to think the law is on the president, but those who want to be Republican postmasters will have to change their tune.

A good many Republican congressmen who refused to vote for free hides, will find their own political hide hanging on the Democratic fence this fall.

If the republicans claim, that the tariff protects the farmer was honest the tariff duty of 25 cents a bushel on wheat should keep the price up instead of gradually falling as it now is.

The Great Northern Railroad has yielded 900 per cent in 23 years in dividends and "rights" and yet the railroads kick because the people want reduced rates.

There are two kinds of girls in the world, the girl who works and the girl who gads. Commend us to the former. Work lends dignity to a pretty girl, is an added charm to her. The girl who works, God bless her, combines the useful and ornamental. She might gad about roll on sofas, gossip and read story books, but she prefers to be of some account in the world and goes out stenographer, teacher, saleslady or housekeeper bravely make her own way. Such are the salt of the earth and of such is the kingdom of heaven.—Louisburg Times.

Senator Beveridge throws up his hands and surrenders on every issue and makes the endorsement of the president the only thing left the Republicans. The Democrats have always claimed that Republican policies will not bear inspection and nothing but a Democratic congress will relieve the people from trust tariff protection and corporation plundering.

In the small part of the speech, — about one-tenth. — made by Senator Beveridge, reported by the Associated Press, he mentions President Roosevelt eighteen times, so that the average mention of the president in the whole speech must have been about 180 times. This is rather tough on the Maine voters who are intent on measures more than men. Will Republican issues not bear talking about?

A state of anarchy exists in the northern part of Santo Domingo. The Jimenez faction has raised the flag of revolution; The Americans who have been sent there by the Roosevelt administration contrary to law are being killed. The German government which our government is supporting there, is too weak to protect life and property on the island. What is Mr. Roosevelt going to do about it?

It will strike dismay into thousands of poor homes, that are compelled to use kerosene for heating cooking and lighting, to know that Mr. Rockefeller announces that he intends to "get closer to the people." The fear that their pocket books will undoubtedly suffer, as he snuggles up to them, is a matter of experience since the Standard oil trust started to monopolize a great necessity.

Men have various ways of carrying money. Grocers butcher and millers carrying it in a wad. Bankers in clean bills, laid full length in a pocketbook. Brokers only fold the money as it were. The young business man carries it in his vest pocket. Farmers and drovers, in their inside pocket, whether $50 or 15 cents. Printers usually carry their money in other people's pockets.—Louisburg Times.

A NATURAL MISTAKE.

The Man's Theory Was Right Even if He Did Blunder.

"Is this the way to the handkerchief counter?" asked one man of another in a department store.

The man who asked the question wore a hat, and the man of whom the question was asked did not. In the momentary pause which ensued the man with the hat observed that the man without a hat really carried a hat in his hand.

"I don't know the way to the handkerchief counter," rejoined the man without a hat, "but will you be good enough to tell me why you took me for a floorwalker? I have been taken for a waiter at dinners and receptions because I carry a smoothly shaved face, but the floorwalker's stunt gets me. What's about me that gave you the impression? Why didn't you speak to some other chap?"

The man with the hat was quietly and critically taking in the other man during the firing off of this problem in physiognomy study. Then he said:

"Because of the law of association, which psychologists tell us is as certain as the law of attraction. You should have risen to the occasion and, under the application of the principle of incongruities, replied, 'Fourth aisle, second counter to the right.' Then you would have had the laugh on me, as the probability of your hazard in correctly establishing a location concerning which you had no personal knowledge would have been one in a thousand.

J. F. May, Greenville, N. C.

"I took you for a floorwalker upon the same principle that one man at a reception will ask another man in a dress suit to bring him some ices, provided the other man has a smoothly shaved face, for the first man knows that all waiters are smoothly shaved, but all gentlemen are not, and waiters often have better manners, if not better birth, than the men they may serve.

"There is usually a hall mark which distinguishes one man from another or one class of men from others. In stores customers of both sexes wear hats. Floorwalkers and salespeople do not. In addressing you I was following a common impulse. You were the one hatless man moving among other men who wore hats. Naturally the prompting impulse and my eye singled you out as the proper individual to whom an inquiry might be addressed as to a location concerning which the men with hats were unlikely to be acquainted with.

"It is the same at receptions. The average smooth faced man in a dress suit looks like his neighbor—he may be a little taller or shorter or have a little more or a little less hair on his head, but the deadly sameness of facial construction and the identical cut of the dress suit level them all. The man with a mustache is never the victim of the 'guest-waiter mixup' by reason of the operation of the same law of association, because no one ever associates the waiter with the mustache. If waiters are to wear dress suits they should be required to wear bright metal buttons.

"Then floorwalkers should be required to wear uniforms," remarked the man without a hat, replacing his headpiece to prevent another instance of mistaken identity.—Washington Star.

THE REFUGEES

"At the horse, Despard; at the horse!"

them, not a hundred paces away, was the scene, running cold and still in the moonshine. The bank on either side of the highway ran straight down without any break to the water's edge. There was no sign of a bridge, and a black shadow in the center of the stream showed where the ferryboat was returning after conveying some belated travelers across. The driver never hesitated, but, gathering up the reins, he urged the frightened creatures into the river. They hesitated, however, when they first felt the cold water about their hocks, and even as they did so one of them, with a low moan, fell over upon her side. Despard's bullet had found its mark. Like a flash the coachman hurled himself from the box and plunged into the stream, but the pursuing horsemen were all round him before this, and half a dozen hands had seized him ere he could reach deep water and had dragged him to the bank. His broad hat had been struck off in the struggle, and De Catinat saw his face in the moonshine. Great heavens! It was Amos Green.

CHAPTER XII.

The desperadoes were as much astonished as was De Catinat when they found that they had recaptured in this extraordinary manner the messenger whom they had given up for lost.

"A thousand thunders!" cried one. "And this is the man whom that devil's lord In our would make out to be dead!"

"And how came he here?"

"And where is Etienne Arnaud?"

"He has stabbed Etienne, and taken his coat and hat."

"What! While we were all within stone's cast?"

"Aye, there is no other way out of it."

"By my soul," cried old Despard, "I had never much love for old Etienne, but I have emptied a cup of wine with him before now, and I shall see that he has justice. Let us cast these reins round the fellow's neck and hang him upon this tree."

Several pairs of hands were already unbuckling the harness of the dead horse when De Vivonne pushed his way into the little group.

"It is as much as your lives are worth to touch him," said he.

"But he has slain Etienne Arnaud."

"That score may be settled afterward. Tonight he is the king's messenger. Is the other all safe?"

"Yes, he is here."

"Tie this man and put him in beside him. Unbuckle the traces of the dead horse. So! Now, De Carnac, put your own into the harness. You can mount the box and drive, for we have not very far to go."

The changes were rapidly made. Amos Green was thrust in beside De Catinat, and the carriage was soon toiling up the steep incline which it had come down so precipitately. The American had said not a word since his capture and had remained absolutely stolid, with his hands crossed over his chest while his fate was under discussion. Now that he was alone once more with his comrade, however, he frowned and muttered.

"Those infernal horses!" he grumbled. "Why, an American horse would have taken to the water like a duck. Once over the river, we should have had a clear lead to Paris."

"My dear friend," said De Catinat, laying his hands upon those of his comrade, "do you have stood by me in a low case you there? I never in my life have I been so astonished as when I saw your face."

Amos Green chuckled to himself. "I thought, though, it would be a surprise to you if you knew who was driving you," said he. "When I was thrown from my horse I lay quiet, partly because it seemed to me to be more healthy to lie than to stand with all those swords clinking in my ears. Then they all got round you, and I tumbled into the ditch, crept along it, got on the crossroad in the shadow of the trees and was beside the carriage before ever they knew that I was gone. I saw in a flash that there was only one way by which I could be of use to you. The coachman was leaning round, with his head turned, to see what was going on behind him. I cut with my knife, sprang up on the front wheel and stopped his tongue."

"And then?"

"I pulled him down into the ditch, and I got into his coat and his hat. I had hardly got the reins before they were all back and bundled you into the coach. I was not afraid of their seeing me, but I was scared lest I should not know which road to take, and so set them on the trail. But they made it easy to me by sending some of their riders in front, so I did well until I saw that by-track and made a run for it."

The guardsman again pressed his comrade's hands. "You have been as true to me as hilt to blade," said he. "It was a bold thought and a bold deed."

"And what now?" asked the American.

"I do not know who these men are, and I do not know whether they are taking us. I fancy that they are taking us to some place where they can shut us up until this business blows over."

"Well, they'll need to be smart about it."

"Why?"

"Else maybe they won't find us when they want us."

"What do you mean?"

For answer the American, with a twist and a wriggle, drew his two hands apart and held them in front of his comrade's face.

"Bless you, it's the first thing they teach the paposes in an Indian wigwam! Put your hands out." With a few dexterous twists he loosened De Catinat's bonds until he also was able to slip his hands free. "Now for your feet, if you'll put them up. They'll find that we are easier to catch than to hold."

But at that moment the carriage began to slow down, and the clank of the hoofs of the riders in front of them died suddenly away. Peeping through the windows, the prisoners saw a huge, dark building stretching in front of them, so high and so broad that the night shrouded it in upon every side. A great archway hung above them, and the lamps shone on the rude wooden gate studded with ponderous clamps and nails. In the upper part of the door was a small square iron grating, and through this they could catch a glimpse of the gleam of a lantern and of a bearded face which looked out at them. De Vivonne, standing in his stirrups, craned his head up toward the grating, so that the two men most interested could hear little of the conversation which followed. They saw only that the horseman held a gold ring up in the air and that the face above, which had begun by shaking and frowning, was now nodding and smiling. An instant later the head disappeared, the door swung open upon screaming hinges, and the carriage drove on into the courtyard beyond, leaving the escort, with the exception of De Vivonne, outside. As the horses pulled up, a knot of rough fellows clustered round, and the two prisoners were dragged roughly out. In the light of the torches which flared around them they could see that they were hemmed in by high turreted walls upon every side. A bulky man with a bearded face, the same whom they had seen at the grating, was standing in the center of the group of armed men issuing his orders.

"To the upper dungeon, Simon!" he cried. "And see that they have two bundles of straw and a loaf of bread until we learn our master's will."

"I know not who your master may be," said De Catinat, "but I would ask you by what warrant he dares to stop two messengers of the king while traveling in his service?"

"By St. Denis, if my master play the king a trick, it will be but tie and grin. You may see it. Away with them, Simon, and you answer to me for their safe keeping."

It was in vain that De Catinat raved and the rough fellows, for the most terrible menaces upon all who were concerned in detaining him. Two stout knaves thrusting him from behind and one dragging in front forced him through a narrow gate and along a stone flagged passage. They made their way down three successive corridors and through three doors, each of which was locked and barred behind them. Then they ascended a winding stone stair, and finally they were thrust into a small square dungeon, and two trusses of straw were thrown in after them. An instant later a heavy key turned in the lock, and they were left to their own meditations.

Very grim and dark those meditations were in the case of De Catinat. A stroke of good luck had made him at court, and now this other of ill fortune had destroyed him. There were his people in Paris, too—his sweet Adele, his old uncle, who had been as good as a father to him. What protector would they have in their troubles now that he had lost the power that might have shielded them?

But his comrade had yielded to no feeling of despondency. The instant that the clank of the prison door had assured him that he was safe from interruption he had felt all round the walls and flooring to see what manner of place this might be. His search had ended in the discovery of a small fire place at one corner and of two great clumsy billets of wood, which seemed to have been left there to serve as pillows for the prisoners. Having satisfied himself that the chimney was so small that it was utterly impossible to pass even his head up it, he drew the two blocks of wood over to the window and was able by placing one above the other and standing on tiptoe on the highest to reach the bars which guarded it. Drawing himself up and fixing one toe in an inequality of the wall, he managed to look out on to the courtyard which they had just quitted. The carriage and De Vivonne were passing out through the gate as he looked, and he heard a moment later the slam of the heavy door and the clatter of hoofs from the troop of horsemen outside. The seneschal and his retainers had disappeared; the torches, too, were gone, and save for the measured tread of a pair of sentinels in the yard twenty feet beneath him, all was silent throughout the great castle.

The window was large enough to pass his body through if it were not for those bars. He shook them and hung his weight upon them, but they were as thick as his thumb and firmly welded; then, getting some strong hold for his other foot, he supported himself by one hand, while he picked with his knife at the setting of the iron. It was cement, as smooth as glass and as hard as marble. His knife turned when he tried to loosen it. But there was still the stone. It was sandstone, not so very hard. If he could cut grooves in it he might be able to draw out bars, cement and all. He sprang down to the floor again and was thinking how he should best set to work when a groan drew his attention to his companion.

"Something on your mind?" said Amos Green, sitting down upon his billets of wood. "What was it, then?"

The guardsman here made a movement of impatience. "What was it? How can you ask me when you know as well as I do the wretched failure of my mission? It was the king's wish that the archbishop should marry them. The archbishop should have been at the palace by now. Ah, I can see the king's cabinet, I can see him waiting, I can see madame waiting, I can hear them speak of the unhappy De Catinat!"

"I see all that," said the American stolidly, "and I see something more."

"What then?"

"I see the archbishop tying them up together."

"He could not be at the palace."

"On the contrary, he reached the palace about half an hour ago."

De Catinat sprang to his feet. At the palace! he screamed. "Then who gave him the message?"

"I did," said Amos Green.

If the American had expected to surprise or delight his companion by this curt announcement he was woefully disappointed, for De Catinat approached him with a face which was full of sympathy and trouble.

"My dear friend," said he, "I have been selfish and thoughtless. That fall from your horse has shaken you more than you think. Lie down upon this straw and see if a little sleep may not—"

"I tell you that the bishop is there!" cried Amos Green.

"He is, he is," said De Catinat soothingly. "He is most certainly there. I trust that you have no pain?"

The American raved in the air with his knotted fists. "You think that I'm crazed," he cried, "and, by the eternal, you are enough to make me so! When I say that I sent the bishop I mean that I saw to the job. You remember when I stepped back to your friend the major?"

It was the soldier's turn to grow excited.

Proclamation by the Governor

$100.00 REWARD

State of North Carolina Executive Department

Whereas official information has been received at this department that W. H. Harrington Jr. late of the County of Pitt stands charged with conspiracy and assault upon W. J. Tell, and whereas, it appears that the said W. H. Harrington Jr. has fled the State, or so conceals himself that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him.

Now, therefore, I, R. B. Glenn, Governor of the State of North Carolina, by virtue of authority in me vested by law, do issue this my proclamation, offering a reward of One hundred Dollars for the apprehension and delivery of the said W. H. Harrington Jr. to the Sheriff of Pitt County at the Courthouse in Greenville, N. C. and I do enjoin all officers of the State and all good citizens to assist in bringing said criminal to justice.

Done at our City of Raleigh the 16th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and six and in the one hundred and thirty-first year of our American Independence

Homemade Cement For Mending Broken Glassware.

The best kind of glue for clear glass is made from a solution of two ounces of isinglass and half a pint of gin poured into an open mouthed bottle and set in the sun until it dissolves. It should be shaken well every day and before being used should be strained through a clean lawn cloth. When ready for the gluing the broken glass pieces should be well washed in hot suds, especially on the edges, dried, and then with a small camel's hair brush the cement should be put on the edges of both pieces, and when they are nicely fitted together rubber bands or clean strips of cloth should be bandaged tightly around them to hold the edges well together until the glue dries. If the cement has been properly made the break should really not be visible when dry, for the reason many cracks look jagged when mended is because the edges have not been well joined and, bubbles of air getting in, reflect the light, making the ragged, broken lines glaringly apparent.—Boston Traveler.

Care of Linoleum.

To keep linoleum nicely have a pint bottle, in it put a quarter of a pint of turpentine and three-quarters of a pint of linseed oil; mix both together thoroughly and always shake the bottle before using. Apply a very little of this to the linoleum and rub it in thoroughly. Then polish with dry, clean dusters. Constantly wash out the cloth used for applying the oil or there will be no polish. Never wash linoleum. If it gets dirty, rub it over with a damp flannel only.

Polish For Steel.

One tablespoonful of turpentine, one tablespoonful of sweet oil; mix the turpentine and sweet oil together, stirring in sufficient emery powder to make the mixture of the thickness of cream. Put it on the article with a piece of soft flannel, rub off quickly with another piece, then polish with a little emery powder and clean leather.

Can Opener Versus Corkscrew.

"It seems quite evident," remarked the observer of events and things, "that the can opener has revealed more deadly stuff than the corkscrew."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Playwright.

Hi Tragedy—Did they call for the author?

Vil Ayne—Call for him? Why, they came up on the stage after him.—Judge.

She is the pick of prettiness. Girls be careful of your complexions. None should believe in "make up." Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea; 'saves make-up.' Tea or Tablets, 35 cts. Wooten's Drug Store.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by J. L. Wooten.

Do you think you'd better let it rain when it is raining, rain away. For the sun will be shining bright if you take Rocky Mountain Tea tonight.
