Reported for Reflector

One of the most delightful dances of the season was given Friday evening in Perkins Opera House complimentary to Misses Pattie B. Barden, of Edenton, Eva Hassell, of Washington and Olive Morrill, of Snow Hill, N. C. It being a card dance the couples were early and the German began at nine thirty led by Walter Wilson Jr., with Miss Morrill. Many new figures were introduced which were very beautiful. The young ladies were in full evening dress and the gentlemen in black suits, and it being the last dance before the big Christmas Hop was immensely enjoyed by all.

The following couples were present.

Chaperones: Mesdames J. W. Aycock, W. B. Wilson, C. S. Carr.
Music furnished by the Greenville String Orchestra.

Louisburg, Sept. 8.—Thought at 7 o'clock one of the tracks usually meeting trains ran over and, it is feared, fatally injured the little son of J. A. Cast. The driver, Sterling Freeman, has been arrested and locked up.

This is going to be another big week on the tobacco market, judging from the size of the breaks so far.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN

Met Tuesday night in Adjourned Session.

The Board of Aldermen met in adjourned session, Monday night. Those present were Mayor Wooten, Aldermen Carr, Hooker, Spain, Mosley, McGowan and Taft. The regular committees made their monthly report. The streets recommended that Atlantic street be accepted when deed for it is tendered—which was accepted. The committee on water and lights recommended that suggestion made by the finance committee, that the sum paid for water and lights be reduced from a $400.00 to $350.00 per month, which was adopted. The cemetery committee reported that much work had been done in the cemetery since the last report, and that it would be continued until the cemetery is in good condition, which the Board approves, all the members showing interest in that work.

Aldermen D. S. Spain, B. W. Mosley and Mayor Wooten, a committee appointed to advise the Board as to sewerage.

We, D. S. Spain, B. W. Mosely and F. M. Wooten, your committee appointed for the purpose of advising you as to what Board should undertake and build for the town a Sewerage System, make the following report: That the Board of Aldermen should have this work done under its own direction, it representing the town as a whole, also for the reason this Board is looked to for the finances with which to build the sewerage system.

Also, we advise first that the Board advertise for contractors to bid on the system as a whole, to turn over to the town a system complete reserving the right to reject all bids.

3rd. That the Board advertise for the material needed with the view of making purchases for the system direct.

2d. That the Board advertise for contractors to lay the pipe and to do the other work necessary for building the system, the town furnishing all the material, and the committee further recommends that Mr. J. E. Ludlow be employed by the town to superintend the construction of this system and be instructed that the town is now ready to proceed with the work and that his service as designated by the contract which the town has with him is now needed.

Neg'o Had Leg Cut Off.

Will McKay, a young negro emplaced in a wrecking crew of the Atlantic Coast Line under Capt. Maultsby and at work yesterday morning on the debris of the freight wreck, near Ivanhoe, on the A. & Y. railroad, attempted to get up between two flat cars while the train was in motion and fell between. His right leg was cut off and he suffered other slight bruises. The injured man was brought to Wilmington last night for treatment.—Morning Star.

The Ladies Missionary Society of the Baptist church will meet Friday evening at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. B. E. Parham.

Greenville, N. C., Sept. 12th, 1906.

In a statement issued by the Liberty warehouse and published in the Reflector of Sept. 10th this house claims to have made an average of 13 1-8 cents above the average of the market. This average also left out the good sales made by the Liberty.

The Consolidated as published some days ago averaged 15 cents a hundred more than the market including its own average as well as the average of the Liberty.

These facts and these figures are not of our own make but are sworn to by the secretary of the board of trade from whom we got them. We would like to inquire also where the Liberty warehouse or Mr. S. I. Hooker got his information from which he drew the conclusion and stated as a fact that his house, the Liberty warehouse sold 17,627 pounds more tobacco than any firm on the market. The secretary of the board of trade when approached about this matter stated positively he had not given any such information and he is supposed to be the only person who knows what was sold by the other houses. The laws of the board of trade prohibit most positively the secretary divulging the amount of sales of any particular warehouse, we therefore should like to know the source of this information.

The Consolidated Tobacco Co.

In a railroad wreck on the Ohio River division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad two men were killed and five injured. The wreck occurred in a fog, the trains coming together on a bridge over Fish Creek. The cause is given as a misunderstanding of orders.

The Pickert Co. will arrive tomorrow from Norfolk.

LIVE MAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM MORGUE.

Washington, D. C. Sept. 9.—After being placed in the dead wagon and started on a journey to the District resting place of unknown and unclaimed dead, John Forsythe, 40 years old, who was apparently lifeless when fished from the water at the north end of the highway bridge Thursday afternoon, showed signs of life while on the way to the morgue.

By the merest chance Forsythe was saved from drowning, but when believed to be dead, another peculiar action of fate saved him from being placed alive among the corpse in the morgue. Instead he now lies unconscious on a cot in the Emergency Hospital, but has a fair chance of recovery.

Forsythe, who has not yet recovered sufficiently to allow his giving any explanation whatsoever was discovered in the river about 2:30 yesterday afternoon by John Striker, who was walking across the bridge. He saw what looked to be a corpse floating on the surface of the water, a few feet from the shore. He hurriedly obtained a rope and fished the man out of the water. The man had evidently jammed or fallen into the river a moment before.

An examination failed to disclose any signs of life, and Striker accordingly sent a call to the morgue. A few minutes later he decided that life might not be entirely extinct and sent another call for the ambulance of the Emergency Hospital.

Universalist Convention.

The Universalist State Convention will convene in the Delphia Moyer Chapel, in our city, on the 6th and 7th of October. The public is cordially invited to attend all the services. The Universalists desire us to say, they will appreciate assistance in entertaining the delegates. There will be about fifty of them. If you can help, phone to Mrs. W. M. King.

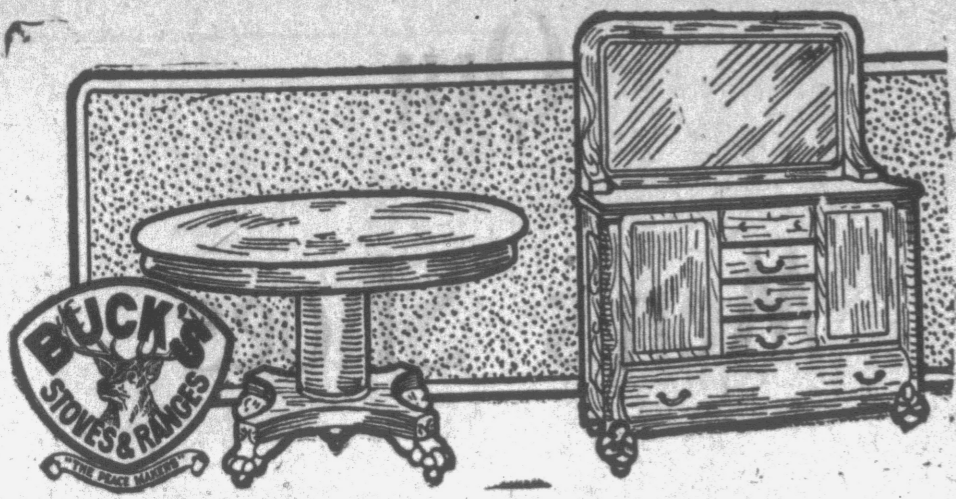

A Political Forecast.

There are strong indications that there will be a political revolution in 1908, the like of which has never been known, or even dreamed of, in this country. Already there are "Roosevelt Democrats" and "Bryan Republicans;" and two years hence there will probably be more political changes than in any campaign during the past quarter of a century. In many of the Northern States both parties are disorganized and demoralized; and no one is wise enough to forecast the alignment of parties in 1908.—Morning Star.

Rev. Mr. Viehe has been called to Washington to conduct a funeral, and on this account there will be no prayer meeting service in the Presbyterian church to night.

A HUMOROUS PATIENT.

Surgery has much to gain from spinal cocainization, says Robert Jones, a Liverpool surgeon, in the Medical Press. He advocates this process in cases where patients cannot or will not take other anaesthetics. The resulting insensibility to pain lasts more than an hour, but the patient often develops abnormal loquacity.

Mr. Jones tells of an operation in which he cocainized the spine. It was that of a big man, who as soon as he had taken two or three whiffs of chloroform jumped off the operating table and scampered away. This happened twice, and Mr. Jones tried cocainization, injecting cocaine into the cerebro spinal fluid. By this means a troublesome operation of cutting out bones in the leg was safely carried out. The man, an old poacher, meantime regaled the doctors with stories of his art, only once interrupting, when the surgeon was chiseling a bone, to ask, "What is that knocking?"—London Mail.

Fall of the Bicycle.

In one of the principal streets, where the tide of commerce flows strong, the sign "Bicycles Stored" stands out from the wall of a building where bicycles were much stored eight years ago. "Yes," said a man in charge, "there was a time when we kept the wheels of business men and clerks during the day, and it was a paying thing too. Our regular customers paid us by the month, and there were over 200 of them. Then every day we took care of the wheels of from twenty to fifty transients. How many do we have now? None—exactly none. The men who rode on bicycles to and from their offices never ride wheels downtown and, so far as that goes, rarely ride at all. It's all off; nothing doing."—Philadelphia Record.

FOR BRYAN AND AGAINST GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF RAILROADS.

In Sunday's Raleigh News and Observer, Capt. S. A. Ashe defines the best position on Mr. Bryan and government ownership of railroads that we have read. Capt. Ashe says:

Were the government to own all of the railroads, necessarily, no new lines could be built except by the government, with public money. There would be but one system of railroads throughout the United States.

Railroad construction has not been finished in this country. We will need many more lines. The location of these new roads must depend on the enterprise and demands of the growing towns and communities of every section of the Union. Under government ownership, we would have to apply to the Railroad Department, not for permission to build—but for the money to build.

If a desired road interfered with "the system," neither permission nor money would be given. In this aspect of the case it seems that the time has not come when it may be expedient for the government to own all the railroads.

There are several millions of voters connected with the railroads. They would be controlled by the administration.

Under government ownership an administration could perpetuate itself in power. Our government now is by parties, and the party in power, with the aid of the pensions, the postoffice, the National banks, and the railroads would be invincible. Our system of government would be changed to an oligarchy—dominated by the chiefs of the ruling party.

For these reasons I am unalterably opposed to government ownership—a though strenuously favoring governmental control, and the abolition of every free pass of every kind—except to an employee traveling on the business of his road on that particular road.

Mr. Bryan, I hope, will be our candidate for the Presidency; but the subject of government ownership is not involved in his candidacy. That is a matter outside of the office of President, nor is it imminent. To effect government ownership an amendment to the Federal Constitution would be necessary.

Bryan during his visit to North Carolina, will not come further east than Raleigh. He will speak in the following towns: Raleigh, Sept. 17th, Winston-Salem, Sept. 18th, Salisbury, Sept. 18th, Concord, Sept. 18th, Charlotte, Sept. 18th. If any of the Democrats of this section wish to hear him they will probably attend the speaking at Raleigh. If the new railroad were complete, doubtless a large number would go.

A CARD.

To the voters of the 3rd Judicial District of North Carolina.

The office of Solicitor has always been declared to be a non-political one.

The present incumbent, Hon. I. I. Moore, has held the office two terms, 8 years, and may seek to have the people elect him for another term of four years more.

To my mind, and the mind of a great mass of the people, he has by his own act, disqualified himself from holding this office longer and should resign. He has accepted the attorneyship of a Railroad corporation at a salary of three thousand dollars per year, to wit: The Raleigh and Pamlico Sound Rail Road. It is well known, that the interest of the state is often brought in conflict with the interests of railroads, and other corporations and no man can serve both as attorney, when these conflicts arise, with zeal and fidelity.

"No man can serve two masters for either he will hate the one and love the other or else he will hold to the one and despise the other." "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

For these reasons, and others I do hereby declare myself a candidate for the office of Solicitor of the 3rd Judicial District of North Carolina, and I ask all the right thinking voters, to vote for, and elect me to that position with the assurance on my part, that I will faithfully perform the duties of the office to the utmost of my ability.

Badly Out of Shape.

Eight-year-old Robert is very fond of using high sounding phrases, which he gleans from the conversation of grownups and stores in his mind until a suitable occasion arrives when he may spring them upon an admiring audience.

At breakfast he had heard his father read an extract from the morning paper, the phraseology of which had impressed itself upon his memory, as was evidenced by the announcement he made on his return from school.

"Mother," he said, "a poor pussy cat was run over by the Amsterdam avenue cars, and what do you think? It was crushed out of all likeness to humanity."—New York Press.

Why the Earth is Round.

It seems as if text books for children were now made so simple as to leave hardly any chance for misunderstanding, but the little folks still continue to commit to memory the words without much thought of their meaning. "How do we know that the earth is round?" asked a teacher of one of her boys. The pupil rose promptly and, with a perfectly stolid expression, answered glibly, "We learn that the earth is round from the following facts," and immediately sat down again, evidently feeling that he had given a full and most satisfactory reply.

Less Capacity For Suffering.

"I notice the soprano doesn't sing any more solos, Mr. Battong," said the Rev. Dr. Fourthly. "Why is that?"

"Because," answered the leader of the choir, "there's a lot of jealous, ill natured souls in the congregation that are always knocking her singing. They come to her and say it's 'such a pity she wasn't at her best when she sang that solo,' and they worry her so she can't do herself justice."

"She ought not to let that trouble her. Why, I never preach a sermon without displeasing a lot of people. They don't fail to let me hear of it either, but it doesn't bother me a particle."

"Yes, but it's different with you, doctor. You haven't the artistic temperament."—Chicago Tribune der and swung themselves down by a rope, while two Indians who held the paddles pushed silently off from the ship's side and shot swiftly up the stream. A minute later a dim loom behind them and the glimmer of two yellow lights were all that they could see of the St. Christophe.

"Take a paddle, Amos, and I'll take one," said Captain Savage, stripping off his monk's gown. "I felt safer in this on the deck of your ship, but it don't help in a boat."

"I hope, madame, that all is well with you," said Amos.

"Nay, I can hardly understand what has happened or where we are."

"Nor can I, Amos."

"Did you not expect us to come back or you, then?"

"I did not know what to expect."

"Well, now, surely you could not think that we would leave you without a word."

"I confess that I was cut to the heart by it."

"I feared that you were when I looked at you with the fall of my eye and saw you staring so blackly over the bulwarks at us. But if we had been seen talking or planning they would have been upon our trail at once."

"And what did you do?"

"We left the brig last night, got ashore on the Beupre side, arranged for this canoe and lay dark all day.
 Then tonight we got alongside and I roused you easily, for I knew where you slept. The friar nearly spoiled all when you were below, but we gagged him and passed him over the side."

"Ah, it is glorious to be free once more! And where are we going?"

"Ah, there you have me. It is this way or none, for we can't get down to the sea. We must make our way overland as best we can, and we must leave a good stretch between Quebec and us before the day breaks, for, from what I hear, they would rather have a Huguenot prisoner than an Iroquois sagamore. By the eternal, I cannot see why they should make such a fuss over how a man chooses to save his own soul."

All night they toiled up the great river, straining every nerve to place themselves beyond the reach of pursuit. By keeping well into the southern bank and so avoiding the force of the current they sped swiftly along, for both Amos and De Catinat were practiced hands with the paddle, and the two Indians worked as though they were wire and whiplcord instead of flesh and blood. When at last morning broke and the black shaded imperceptibly into gray they were far out of sight of the citadel and of all trace of man's handiwork. Virgin woods in their wonderful many colored autumn dress flowed right down to the river's edge on either side, and in the center was a little island.

"I've passed here before," said De Catinat. "I remember marking that great maple with the blaze on its trunk when last I went with the governor to Montreal. That was in Frontenac's day, when the king was first and the bishop second."

The redskins, who had sat like terra cotta figures, without a trace of expression upon their set, hard faces, picked up their ears at the sound of that name.

"My brother has spoken of the great Onontio," said one of them, glancing round. "We have listened to the whistling of evil birds who tell us that he will never come back."

"He is the great white father," answered De Catinat. "I have myself seen him in council, and he will as-surely give us the great water if his people are not of him."

The Indians looked at the French man with their eyes on his head.

"The great white father is past, my brother," said the Indian who had spoken French, "but the great white father's bird laying has said that there will be no white man upon this river save only behind stone walls."

"What mean you? You have heard little, have the great white father out so fiercely?"

The Indian waved his hand along the whole southern and western horizon.
 "Where are they not? The woods are rustling with them. They are like a fire among dry grass, so swift and so terrible."

"On my life," said De Catinat, "if these devils are indeed unchained they will need old Frontenac back if they are not to be swept into the river."

"He was an enemy of the church, and the right hand of the foul fiend in this country," said a voice from the bottom of the canoe.

It was the friar, who had succeeded in getting rid of the buckskin glove and belt with which the two Americans had gagged him.

"Why should we take him farther?" asked Amos. "He is but weight for us to carry, and I cannot see that we profit by his company. Let us put him out."

"And have him maybe in front of us, warning the blackjackets," said old Ephraim.

"On that island, then."

"Very good. He can halt the first of his folk who pass."

They shot over to the island and landed the friar, who said nothing, but cursed them with his eye. They left with him a small supply of biscuit and of flour to last him until he should be picked up. Then, having passed a bend in the river, they ran their canoe ashore in a little cove, where they laid out their small stock of provisions and ate a hearty breakfast while discussing what their plans should be for the future.

They were not badly provided for their journey. The captain of the Gloucester brig in which the Americans had started from Quebec knew Ephraim Savage well, as who did not upon the New England coast? He had accepted his bill, therefore, at three months' date, and he had let him have in return three excellent guns, a good supply of ammunition and enough money to provide for all his wants. In this way he had hired the canoe and the Indians and had fitted her with meat and biscuit to last them for ten days at the least.

"It's like the breath of life to me to feel the heft of a gun and to smell the trees round me," said Amos. "Why, it cannot be more than a hundred leagues from here to Albany or Schenectady right through the forest."

"Aye, lad, but how is the gal to walk a hundred leagues through a forest?
 No, no; let us keep water under our keel and lean on the Lord."

"Then there is only one way for it.
 We must make the Richelieu river and keep right along to Lake Champlain and Lake St. Sacrement. There we should be close by the headwaters of the Hudson."

"It is a dangerous road," said De Catinat, who understood the conversation of his companions even when he was unable to join in it. "We should need to skirt the country of the Monawks."

"It is the only one, I guess. It is that or nothing."

"And I have a friend upon the Richelieu river who, I am sure, would help us on our way," said De Catinat, with a smile. "You have heard me talk of Charles de la Noue, Seigneur de Ste.
 Marie. His seigneurie lies on the Richelieu, a little to the south of Fort St.
 Louis."

"Good!" cried Amos. "If we have a friend there we shall do well. That clinches it, then, and we shall hold fast by the river."

And so for a long week the little party toiled up the great waterway, keeping ever to the southern bank, where there were fewer clearings. The clearings radiated out from the villages, and every cottage was built with an eye to the military necessities of the whole, so that the defense might make a stand at all points and might finally center upon the stone manor house and the mill.

At every step in this country, whether the traveler were on the St.
 Lawrence or west upon the lakes or down upon the banks of the Mississippi or south in the country of the Cherokees and of the Creeks, he would still find the inhabitants in the same state of dreadful expectancy and from the same cause. The Iroquois, as they were named by the French, or the Five Nations, as they called themselves, hung like a cloud over the whole great continent.

For half a century these tribes had nursed a grudge toward the French since Champlain and some of his followers had taken part with their enemies against them. During all these years they had brooded in their forest villages, flashing out now and again in some border outrage, but waiting for the most part until their chance should come. And now it seemed to them that it had come. They had destroyed all the tribes who might have allied themselves with the white men.
 They had isolated them. They had supplied themselves with good guns and plenty of ammunition from the Dutch and English of New York. The long, thin line of French settlements lay naked before them.

Such was the situation as the little party of refugees paddled along the bank of the river, seeking the only path which could lead them to peace and to safety. Yet it was, as they well knew, a dangerous road to follow. All down the Richelieu were the outposts and blockhouses of the French. The blockhouses themselves might hold their own, but to the little party who had to travel down from one to the other the situation was full of deadly peril. It was true that the Iroquois were not at war with the English, but they would discriminate little when on the warpath, and the Americans, even had they wished to do so, could not separate their fate from that of their two French companions.

As they ascended the St. Lawrence they met many canoes coming down.
 More than once these wayfarers wished to have speech with the fugitives, but they pushed onward, disregarding their signs and halts. From below nothing overtook them, for they paddled from early morning until late at night.

On the seventh day they rested at a point but a few miles from the mouth of the Richelieu river, where a large blockhouse, Fort Richelieu, had been built by M. de Saurel. Once past this, they had no great distance to go to reach the seigneurie of De Catinat's friend of the noblesse, who would help them upon their way. They had spent the night upon a little island in midstream, and at early dawn they were about to thrust the canoe out again from the sand lined cove in which she lay when Ephraim Savage growled in his throat and pointed out across the water.

A large canoe was coming up the river, flying along as quick as a dozen arms could drive it. In the stern sat a dark figure, which bent forward with every swing of the paddles as though consumed by eagerness to push onward. Even at that distance there was no mistaking it. It was the fanatical monk whom they had left behind them.

Concealed among the brushwood, they watched their pursuers fly past and vanish round a curve in a stream.

"We'd have done better either to put him overboard or to take him as ballast," said Ephraim.

"Well, we can't take the back track, anyhow," said Amos.

"And yet how can we go on?" said De Catinat despondently. "This vindictive devil will give word at the fort and at every other point along the river."

"Let me cipher it out," Amos Green sat on a fallen maple with his head sunk upon his hands. "Well," said he presently, "if it's no good going on and no good going back, there's only one way, and that is to go to one side. We can't go to the north, so it follows that we must go to the south."

"Leave the canoe?"

"It's our only chance. We can cut through the woods and come out near this friendly house on the Richelieu.
 The friar will lose our trail then, and we'll have no more trouble with him if he stays on the St. Lawrence."

"There's nothing else for it," said Captain Ephraim ruefully. "It's not my way to go by land if I can get by water, so you must lay the course and keep her straight, Amos."

"It is not far, and it will not take us long. Let us get over to the southern bank, and we shall make a start.

 If madame tires, De Catinat, we shall take turns to carry her."

"Ah, monsieur, you can't think what a good walker I am. In this splendid air one might go on forever."

"We will cross, then," in a very few minutes they were at the other side and had landed at the edge of the forest. There the guns and ammunition were allotted to each man, and his share of provisions and of the scanty baggage. Then, having paid the Indians and having instructed them to say nothing of their movements, they turned their backs upon the river and plunged into the silent woods.

CHAPTER XX.

LEAVING Fort St. Louis upon their right, the travelers pushed onward as swiftly as they could, for the sun was so low in the heavens that the bushes in the clearings threw shadows like trees.

Then suddenly as they peered in front of them between the trunks the green of the sward turned to the blue of the water, and they saw a broad river running swiftly before them. Amos and De Catinat had both been upon the bosom of the Richelieu before, and their hearts bounded as they looked upon it, for they knew that this was the straight path which led them, the one to home and the other to peace and freedom.

As the river was the terrible Iroquois country, and at two points they could see the smoke of fires curling up into the evening air. They followed the bank which led down the eastern side, and as they pushed onward a stern challenge suddenly brought them to a stand, and they saw the muzzle of two musket barrels which pointed them from a thicket overlooking path.

"We are friends," cried De Catinat.
 "Come come you, then?" asked an Indian sentinel.

"Quebec?"

"Whither are you going?"

"To the seigneurie of M. Charles de la Noue, Seigneur de Ste. Marie."

"Very good. It is quite safe. Du Lhut."

Lhut. They have a lady with them too. I greet you, madame, in the name of my father."

Two men had emerged from the bushes, one of whom might have passed as a full blooded Indian had it not been for these courteous words, which he uttered in excellent French.
 He was a tall, slim young man, very dark, with piercing black eyes and a grim, square, relentless mouth which could only have come with Indian inheritance.

The other was undoubtedly a pure Frenchman, elderly, dark and wiry, with a bristling black beard and a fierce, eager face. Leaning upon his long brown gun, he stood watching the party, while his companion advanced toward them.

"You will excuse our precautions," said he. "We never know what device these rascals may adopt to entrap us.
 I fear, madame, that you have had a long and very tiring journey. My mother will be very glad to welcome you and to see to every want. But you, sir, I have surely seen you before."

"And I you," cried the guardsman.
 "My name is Amory de Catinat, once of the regiment of Picardy. Surely you are Achille de la Noue de Ste. Marie."

"Yes, it is I," the young man answered, holding out his hand and smiling in a somewhat constrained fashion. "I do not wonder that you should hesitate, for when you saw me last I was in a very different dress from this. We have one life for the forest and one for the cities, though, indeed, my good father will not have it so and carries Versailles with him wherever he goes. But it is time for our relief, and so we may guide you home."

Two men in the rude dress of Canadian censitaires, or farmers, but carrying their muskets in a fashion which

"Yes, it is I," the young man answered, told De Catinat's trained senses that these were disciplined soldiers, and suddenly appeared upon the scene. Young De la Noue gave them a few curt injunctions and then accompanied the refugees along the path.

"You may not know my friend here," said he, pointing to the other sentinel, "but I am quite sure that his name is not unfamiliar to you. This is Grey-solon du Lhut."

Both Amos and De Catinat looked with the deepest curiosity and interest at the famous leader of coureurs de bois, a man whose whole life had been spent in pushing westward, ever westward, saying little, writing nothing, but always the first wherever there was danger to meet or difficulty to overcome.

"What do you think of those fires over yonder, Du Lhut?" asked young De la Noue.

The adventurer glanced over at the two little plumes of smoke which stood straight up against the red evening sky. "I don't like them," said he.

"They are Iroquois, then?"

"Yes."

"Well, at least it proves that they are on the other side of the river."

Du Lhut lit his pipe from a tinder paper. "The Iroquois are on this side," said he. "They crossed to the south."

"And you never told us! How do you know that they crossed, and why did you not tell us?"

"I did not know until I saw the fires over yonder."

"And how did they tell you?"

"Tut! An Indian papoose could have told," said Du Lhut impatiently. "Iroquois on the trail do nothing without an object. They have an object, then, in showing that smoke. If their war parties were over yonder there would be no object. Therefore their braves must have crossed the river. And they could not get over to the north without being seen from the fort."

"Then they may be in the woods round us. We may be in danger!"
 cried De la Noue.

De Catinat cast a glance round him at the grand tree trunks, the fading foliage, the smooth sward underneath, with the long evening shadows barred across it. How difficult it was to realize that behind all this beauty there

INSANITY AND PROSPERITY.

In view of the oft repeated discussions on the questions whether insanity is more prevalent than formerly, and if so what are the causes for that condition, the statement made by Dr. Charles G. Hill, physician in charge at Mount Hope retreat, in the sixty-third annual report of that institution, is interesting. Dr. Hill in speaking of the reasons for any possible increase gives, among other things, "the prosperity of the period." He says: "If there is a marked increase of insanity at the present time I believe that by a thorough research, consisting not only of a survey of the mental symptoms, but an investigation with microscope and chemical retort of the tissues, fluids and secretions of the body, it could be traced in a great part to the prosperity of the period—the luxurious indulgence, the dissipations, the departure from the old standard of rectitude and the moral deterioration made possible in all conditions of society to a greater or lesser degree."—Baltimore American.

The Lazy Worm.

A large district in the middle of Porto Rico with a population of 100,000 is afflicted with "the lazy worm," and official efforts are being made to improve the inhabitants' condition. A hospital has been established at Albonito, with an endowment of $15,000, and will do what it can to check the ravages of this minute reptile, of the existence of which the old time native Porto Rican never had the slightest notion. Last year an American medical officer, Captain Ashford, treated 4,500 cases, and nearly all of them were cured. As a result the population are aroused to much enthusiasm, and the afflicted are applying in great numbers for treatment. Heretofore the malady has been deemed incurable.

The Spirit of the Times.

Two newsboys were standing in front of a Bowery tobacconist's window recently gazing with rapt admiration at the enticing display of "weed." "Ef I had 2 cents I'd treat to cigarettes," remarked one. His companion remained thoughtfully silent, then quietly sauntered into the store. In a few minutes he emerged, a cigarette between his lips and a self assertive air. "Two?" remarked the other. "Nope, one. I's been hit by de street." For a few moments there was silence. "Den where do I come in?" questioned the nonsmoker. "Youse de minority stockholder—do de spittin'."—New York Post.

Sidelights on Royalty.

What queer little sidelights on royal life come sometimes from the quaintest quarters. An old lady named Pike, who wanted to be discharged from Old Windsor workhouse, had accidentally that she had lost a pair of waist-coats, of which she had buttons, when his majesty was in k'lts, and that one should be 10 shillings for making up the handkerchiefs for Queen Victoria at Windsor on the 10th of June. She had a kind of a story to tell, and she had a demand for the most exacting.

The hearty bee is a honey maker. It "breezes" on one's thoughts; it sweetens one's life; its notes on one's words, and drops, sip into one's heart when the Hester's Rocky Mountain Tea is used. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Wootens Drug Store.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by J. L. Wootens.

The whole state will rejoice if the indictment of the man Harrison in Currituck will lead to the discovery of Mr. Beasley's little son who so mysteriously disappeared about a year and a half ago. If it can be proven that the child was kidnapped by Harrison there is no punishment too severe for the man. There are many people who have maintained all along that the child was still alive; that it had been kidnapped. Those who doubted this wanted to know what motive there could be for such a deed. It is now shown that Harrison harbored revenge against Mr. Beasley because of the latter's activity in putting down lawlessness in his county. Here you have the motive, and we hope there is sufficient evidence to saddle the crime upon the guilty parties.—Wilmington Messenger.
