

J. G. WHITE DIRECTS IMPORTANT WORK IN SOUTH.

J. G. White, self made engineer, organizer and financier, is the subject of an editorial biography that appears in Cassier's Magazine for September. Mr. White's life is chiefly interesting to readers of The Reflector, on account of the activities of his company in this territory. At present J. G. White & Co. are busy on important work railway work in Virginia and North Carolina, notably the Tidewater Railroad, the Virginia and Carolina Coast Railway, the Raleigh and Pamlico Sound Railway, and the Pamlico, Oriental and Western Railway. The company has almost completed a huge power plant for the Potomac Electric Co. of Washington, D. C., and, was only a few days ago appointed consulting engineers to the U. S. Government in connection with the new power plant for the Congressional buildings. The biography mentioned is interesting chiefly in showing what tremendous potentiality has been attained by a boy who has had no more advantages than the average boy of to-day. Following is an extract of the sketch.

James Gilbert White was born at Milroy, Pa., in 1861. His father was a clergyman, born in Western Pennsylvania, of Scotch, Irish and English stock. He was a man of high moral principles and living, more than usual intelligence, liberal ideas, and sturdy, independent thought.

In 1877, when he was 16 years of age, young White entered the Pennsylvania State College, taking the course in arts, and graduating the degree of A. B., in 1882. During the summer vacations of his college course he devoted a large portion of his time to such engineering work of one kind or another as would give him a better appreciation of his college work and enable him to more thoroughly understand and appreciate the bearing of his scientific studies upon industrial life. His most extensive summer work done in 1881, when he spent considerable time with a party engaged in surveying in Northern Pennsylvania, and later in the Civil Engineering department of the Cambria Iron Company, of Johnstown, Pa. After receiving the degree of A. B. he returned to the Pennsylvania State College and concentrated his time upon civil engineering. Immediately thereafter he tested his newly acquired knowledge by putting in a summer on the reconnaissance and location surveys of a steam railroad in central Pennsylvania.

In 1883, he entered Lehigh University with the intention of studying mining engineering. While there, and during the winter of 1883-1884, he became especially interested in electrical investigations, and finally determined upon making electrical engineering his life work. His final ambition, however, was not at once open to attainment; to his mind his ground work in both practical and theoretical engineering had not been made complete.

In 1884 Mr. White entered upon his final work as a student in college. After the summer spent in Johnstown he entered Cornell University, specializing in electrical engineering and physics.

His work while at Cornell was highly gratifying and successful; in fact, he received a fellowship in electrical engineering, followed by the degree of Phil., conferred at the commendation of 1865.

In a measure, Mr. White may be judged fortunate in having accepted, after his graduation from Cornell, the disposition of instructor in physics in the University of Nebraska. It led him for two years to give his attention to what was, in a great part, a careful review of much of the work he had gone over while in college, with the added value of the constant suggestion which comes to the instructor from his contact with the inquiring minds of the students. It is not astonishing, however, in view of the disposition had previously shown to make excursions into the field of practice, that he finally, in the spring of 1867, joined forces with others in originating the Western Engineering Company.

After the initial work in Nebraska and other Western States had developed considerable proportions, overtures were made by Eastern interests which resulted in the Western Engineering Co., being sold to the Edison-United Manufacturing Co., and Mr. White came to New York to take charge of the department of Electrical Railway Installation covering the entire United States in the consolidated organization. However, the formation of the Edison-Central Electric Co. followed soon after Mr. White's association with the Edison-United Manufacturing Co., and Mr. White resigned to develop an engineering and contracting business of his own under the firm name of J. G. White & Co.

In 1900, after having carried out from the New York office and by several previous trips to London, a considerable amount of engineering in Australia, Mr. White established an office in Australia, organizing for this purpose the English company, known as J. G. White & Co., Ltd.

During the engineering experience Mr. White has supervised the design and construction of a large number of power houses, both steam and water driven, as complete systems of track and overhead construction, bridges, electric light and railway distribution circuits, while a number of the more important installations have received his personal attention. Among these may be mentioned the Buffalo-Niagara Falls Street Railway, and the transmission line from Niagara Falls to Buffalo. The former was built in 1895, and was one of the first high speed interurban lines in America. It is believed to have been the first road to use the four motor equipment with series-multiple control now so commonly adopted for interurban service.

The transmission line to Buffalo was probably the first in America designed to carry so much as 5000 H. P. on one set of wires, and consequently presented some new and interesting problems.

Work in progress under Mr. White's general direction, also includes the construction of a large number of important buildings in Great Britain by the Waring-White & Co., Ltd., of London. These buildings include the Mercantile Marine Building, Ritz hotel, and the Waldorf hotel, in London, and the Royal Cotton Exchange, in Liverpool.

In South America, the activities now directed by Mr. White include the construction of rural tramways at Buenos Ayres, in the Argentine, the construction of a tramway system for Montevideo, in Uruguay, and the reconstruction of the city tramways and the erection of a modern power plant at Para, in Brazil. The White companies are also engaged in the construction and operation of electric light and tramway properties in Monterey, Mex.; Havana, Cuba, and Sao Juan, Porto Rico. The construction of the Virginia & North Carolina Coast railroad, which extends from Charleston, S. C.; to Norfolk, Va. is included in their contracts.

The White organizations consist of a number of companies independently organized, but closely allied. Of these, J. G. White & Co., Inc., of New York, may be regarded as the parent company. The development of allied companies has reduced the field of activity of this company until now J. G. White & Co., of New York, are engaged in an engineering, constructing, and operating business restricted to the United States and its dependencies, Mexico, and Central America.

J. G. White & Co., of London, are carrying out a variety of engineering and constructing work in parts of the world other than Canada, the United States, Mexico, Central America, and Chili. The field in Chili is covered by the Chillan Contracting Co., of which Mr. White is president. The Waring-White Co., of London, is responsible for the construction of the fine modern steel structures erected on modern American building lines, which have previously been referred to.

In Canada, the field is covered by the Canadian White Co., of Montreal. This company is very successfully inaugurating a general engineering business in the Dominion of Canada.

A great unanimity of purpose prevades the personnel of the White organizations. It is apparent, even to the casual observer. Mr. White is the source of this cohesive power. It resides in and emanates from him. He is a man of kind, helpful, and resourceful personality, of a type to be eminently responsible for the foundation of organized loyalty upon which the reputation of these companies has been built.

Mr. White is known to be a man in entire sympathy with all movements which look to the betterment of social conditions and the general uplifting of men, especially those of the younger generation. He is not a perfunctory member of clubs and other organizations, but takes an active interest in virtually all of those with which his name is associated. Among electrical engineers he is known as a man of generous impulses, and, in no small measure has lent active personal and financial support to important engineering movements.

WHITE CAP CASE.

Motion for Severance Allowed and J. K. Barnhill First Put on Trial.

There is such interest throughout the county in what is known as the white cap case, and the trial of it having been set for today, there was a large crowd in attendance and the court house was filled when court was called to order at 10 o'clock. Counsel for both sides were present, Solicitor L. I. Moore, Jarvis & Blow and ex-Gov. C. B. Aycock representing the State; Donnell Gilliam, H. W. Whedbee, F. G. James, Julius Brown, J. L. Fleming, I. A. Sugg, and S. C. Wooten representing the defendants.

When the Solicitor called the case there was some delay because of certain witnesses not answering to their names. He announced that with the presence of two more who were expected to arrive on the 11:18 train the State would be ready to proceed, and notice was given that he desired to try J. K. Barnhill first.

Mr. Gilliam for the defense wanted to be heard relative to such separation and trying only one defendant at the time, when they were included in one bill of indictment.

Solicitor Moore argued that the State had its witnesses and was ready to proceed as to J. K. Barnhill, but might not be ready to certain others of the defendants. It was a right of the State to try severally or jointly as desired, and such a course would work no injury to any defendant.

Mr. Whedbee argued that it would be very unjust and unfair at this late day to separate and try any one of the defendants; they had been indicted under one bill, had plead not guilty together and should be tried jointly.

Gov. Jarvis for the State argued that he did not see why the defense should raise any point as to how he should be tried. If he is innocent he should be acquitted, and if he is guilty should be convicted. Under our statutes the defense has every advantage of the State. If the defendants are tried together the defense will have twenty-four challenges and the State two, while if tried singly the defense will have four challenges and the State two. To try singly can work no hardship to defendant.

Gov. Aycock for State cited certain decisions that the State may of right ask for a severance. It is an injury to the State for the defense to have twenty four challenges with only two for the State, while with four for the defense and two for the State will enable the section of a fair jury and result in a fair trial which was all the State wanted.

Mr. Whedbee for defence stated that the only point made by the State was simply an objection to law as it existed and he thought it unjust to ask the court to rule against the defendants a law already existing. The Solicitor had sent the bill jointly and the defendants should be tried jointly. Solicitor Moore stated that the same law that gave authority to send in a bill jointly gave him authority to try any one or more of defendants as desired.

Judge Shaw stated that he could not see where any injustice whatever could be done the defendant and Barnhill by severance, and the only point on which he hesitated as regards the motion was the probable expense of two or more trials. He allowed the motion.

The State announced its readiness to proceed. In the regular jury for the week were some related to defendants and one to parties on both sides. These were excused. Another who had been subpoenaed as a character witness, and one who had formed and expressed his opinion that the defendant Barnhill were excused. It was nearly 12 o'clock when both sides expressed content with the jury and the following were empaneled: W. H. Porter, H. B. Smith, J. H. House, D. W. Beddard, A. O. Clark, Sylvester Boyd, J. B. Tripp, A. L. Thigpen, Adam Gaskins, J. W. Smith, N. R. Corey, Frank Hardee.

Just as the jury was empaneled J. H. Pou, of Raleigh, and A. B. Dunning, of Williamston, who are of course for defence arrived.

W. J. Teel, the man on whom the attack was made was the first witness introduced and testified as follows:

I live 3 miles southeast of Bethel, 2 miles from Grindool, 5 miles from Oakley, 6 or 7 miles from Stokes. Eight members of my family. About 2 o'clock third Sunday night in April last the door at my house entering bed room was broken open; my wife and four little girls were asleep in room with me. The crash of door made loud noise, I reached out for my pistol. A moment later a hand was placed in my face. I began shooting and fired several times rapidly. I was caught by elbows on each side. I put pistol against some one and fired. Some one grabbed my pistol. The parties then dragged me across room towards door. My wife jumped up and struck matches. I then saw two men in the room. I recognize one of them as J. K. Barnhill and am satisfied the other was William Briley. My wife said "what are you doing here, you scoundrels?" Barnhill shut his eyes to try to keep her from recognizing him. They dragged me on towards door and in putting my hands to brace against door post dropped my pistol. I called my boys from up stairs and one of them handed me gun already sprung. The two ran out of house and I fired at them down path. Sent one of my boys to ring farm bell and some one fired at him with pistol. I shot again with gun in direction from which pistol shots came.

Authentic Instances That Seem to Warrant That Conclusion.

A dog I owned suffered a great deal with indigestion. The least indiscreet diet would bring on these attacks, and as they occurred very frequently I had a large bottle of medicine always on hand and kept it on a shelf in his kennel. The dog seemed to have acquired a thorough comprehension as to the relief bringing quality of that bottle. Whenever he was ill and food was placed before him he would scent it, walk away without touching it, then turn to the shelf and, gazing steadily at the bottle, indicate plainly his wants. He took the medicine without the slightest balking, which is rather exceptional, as any one who ever tried to dose a dog will agree.

This dog when let out would never disturb anything in the poultry yard, but the moment a stray chick lost her way into his yard the savage got the better of him. He would catch the unfortunate straggler, kill and devour it, leaving only a few feathers as evidence of the "murder." Punishment always followed. The remnants of feathers were shown to the dog so as to impress on him his wrong doings and make the cause of the punishment clear to him. From time to time young chickens would be missing, and all efforts to locate the guilty one were vain. The dog's yard was always scrutinized, but nothing found.

My best broilers were disappearing at a rapid rate, and I decided to have the dog watched. Soon he was caught in the act and the mystery solved. The moment the dog had finished his meal he scratched the feathers in a heap and carried them with his teeth to a corner of his yard, where he buried them. The dog had the most embarrassed and helpless expression at the time he was caught that I ever noticed on a dog. An extra severe punishment was dealt out, and I do not know if the mortification of being trapped or the punishment did the work, but the dog was cured from that moment on.

The related observations show reasoning in order to accomplish something for a set purpose. I believe most animals possess the quality in some degree, more or less, according to their mental development.

In the last case described the dog's instinct led him to catch and kill the chicken, but memory told him that punishment would follow if found out. He reasoned that by hiding the evidence of his guilt he would escape punishment for his actions, which he understood to be wrong. The very fact of being able to discriminate between right and wrong and trying to check the consequences of the latter shows the necessity of thinking and therefore of reasoning power.—S. L. De Fabry in Outlook.

A Davitt Story.

The Tribune of London in speaking of Michael Davitt gives this characteristic story of the Irish patriot while in prison: "This high strung and keenly intelligent man was put to a task for which he was physically unfitted, that of pulling trolley loads of stone through the quarry, and many a time a poor wretched criminal, sympathizing with the one armed man, would give an extra pull to spare his disabled chum. A few months ago Davitt was passing down Ludgate hill and was startled to see this Christian criminal selling pennyworths at the kerb. Needless to say, Davitt bought his whole stock and a day or two later set him up in business with a new and better stock. 'I have kept straight, Mr. Davitt, so help me, God,' the poor fellow protested."

The Empress of Byzantium.

Apropos of the Spanish queen's new title, Queen of Jerusalem, there is a claimant to that designation living in London, Princess Christoforo. She lives quietly in West Kensington and is married to an Englishman and has sons in the English army. She calls herself Queen of Jerusalem and Empress of Byzantium. Although not rich, she keeps up a certain state and receives her adherents seated on a dais and with a canopy above her head. The members of the various royalist societies know her well. She attends the special services at the old chapel of St. Mary-in-the-Wardrobe, in the city, and heads the Jacobite procession, which once a year deposits wreaths on the statue of Charles I.

AN INCIDENT OF WATERLOO.

Its Effect Upon the Shovel Making Industry in England.

A millionaire shovel maker as he sat in the smoking room of an Atlantic liner said:

"I have been over to England trying to sell shovels to the British government. I failed. I didn't sell a shovel. And a dead man named Jones was the cause of my failure.

"Jones was alive, very much alive, during the battle of Waterloo. He sat on horseback near Wellington's tent. Wellington, seeing him there in civilian's dress, said angrily:

"Who are you?"
"I am a shovel salesman," said Jones, "and I came here from Brussels to see the battle."

"Now you are here," said Wellington, "are you willing to carry a message for me to one of my generals? It will be a dangerous errand, but just now I have no one else to send."

"I'll carry your message," said Jones, "and as for danger, one part of this battlefield is no more dangerous than another part today."

"So Wellington gave him the message, and Jones delivered it, but failed to return. The duke thought him slain, but one day eight or nine years later a man accosted the duke in London.

"Do you remember me?" he said.
"I do," said Wellington, shaking the man's hand warmly. "You saved two regiments of mine by the delivery of that message. Why didn't you return to me?"

"Jones said his horse had been killed by a cannon ball as he was returning, and he himself had been shot in the side, but not badly. A few days abed had brought him round.

"Well, said the duke, what can I do for you?"

"I am a partner in that shovel house of ours now," said Jones. "The firm name is Smith, Jenkins & Jones, and I'd like to get a government contract."

"He got it," the millionaire ended sadly. "From that day to this all the shovels used in the British army and navy have been supplied by the house of Smith, Jenkins & Jones. I wasted my time trying to compete with them."—St. Louis Globe

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1906.

Some people act as if they thought that other people whom they owe make out bills and hire collectors to take them around just for the fun of the thing. They seemingly never stop to consider the additional expense they are causing the man who has favored them with credit by making the collector call so many times before a bill is paid. In all business it is more or less necessary to extend credit, and it is the duty of every one who can do so to pay his bill promptly the first time it is presented. Of course it may not be convenient to do this every time, but when it is not the debtor should put the creditor to as little inconvenience as possible. The failure of one man to be prompt in meeting his obligations may be the cause of similar failure on the part of several others. Men to a certain extent are dependent upon each other in business and the breaking of one link may for a time render the whole chain useless.

Publish Shortcomings.

A traveling man, writing to the Charlotte Observer, suggests that the newspapers publish a daily bulletin of late trains showing how many trains were late and how late they were. The inconvenience to which the traveling public is subjected by the failure of the railroad companies to observe their schedules, and the annoyance of compulsory waiting imposed by their habit of marking up the lateness of trains in small installments have strained the patience of many people with railroad methods. The suggestion of the publication of these daily records of railroad delinquencies may have something in it. In a western state a few years ago, if we mistake not, the physicians resolved that advertising in the newspapers was imprudential, that it didn't do any good any way, that they would withdraw their cards from the public prints. The application of these resolves naturally created some friction between the doctors and the newspapers. The latter then did some resolving on their own account, with the result that the mortuary reports were published regularly in the newspaper columns, giving the name of the deceased person, the disease, and the name of the doctor who killed or failed to cure the patient. The physicians became so weary of seeing themselves advertised in the mortuary reports that they were glad to return to the good old way of inserting their professional cards in the advertising columns of the papers. If the publication of their daily shortcomings will work as well on the railroads, why it's just the thing—Gastonia Gazette.

NEW ENGLAND MILLS OUT-STRIPPED.

Much has been written and much has been said of the industrial development of the Southern States during the past few years, but still it is difficult to realize the extent and the amazing rapidity of the progress. Undoubtedly one of the fields in which we are meeting with the most successful results is that of the manufacture of cotton. Beginning with an output far behind that of the New England mills, the number of our spinning spindles increased so rapidly that we have pulled further and further to the front until today the number of bales handled by the Southern mills stands comfortably in advance of the New England mill consumption. Figures just issued by the secretary of the New Orleans cotton exchange, covering the year ending August 31, show that for the second time since the century began, the South outstripped the New England mills. Against 2,349,478 bales taken by New England mills, those of the South handle 2,374,225. This is more than twice the number handled in the South in 1897, and four times as great as in 1890. These facts speak for themselves.—Charlotte Observer.

What Dr. Carter Sought.

The eminent lecturer, Dr. L. Carter, self made and not wholly unconscious of the fact, was addressing the Somerville Y. M. C. A. "My dear young people," he began, "let me refer briefly to the humble auspices under which my start in life was made. Without a dollar in my pocket and with no worldly possessions of consequence, my indomitable nature and an in-born determination to utilize to the fullest advantage my abilities constituted my entire assets. But even with this modest beginning what do you suppose was the first thing I sought—that which at the very outset of my career I strove most earnestly to attain?"

For one second an awestricken silence fell over the audience as the speaker paused to allow the significance of these impressive words to permeate the youthful understanding. Then in a spontaneous outburst of juvenile enthusiasm came the answer as of one voice, "Milk!"

METHODIST SERVICES.

Large Congregations Hear Excellent Sermons and Unusually Good Music.

The regular Sunday services were held in the Methodist church yesterday, each service being interesting and well attended. The pastor preached two powerful sermons during the day to large and appreciative audiences.

The music at both morning and night was exceptionally good, and greatly pleased the large congregations, whose expressions of appreciation and delight were universal. In addition to the regular choir Messrs. John F. Evans and Alfred Forbes, Jr., assisted in the rendering of the music, the cornet having been added to the choir by Mr. Forbes.

From the many expressions of those attending these services yesterday it is conceded that the music furnished on these occasions is considered the best ever heard at a regular church service in our town.

Drew's Boarders Differed.

Under the proprietorship of L. S. Drew the old American House at Burlington was one of the most popular hotels in Vermont, and it was the scene of many a humorous episode. One night after supper Mr. Drew was welcoming a new arrival in the office when an extremely corpulent guest came out of the dining room. Pointing to the fat man, Mr. Drew said: "You can see how well we feed our guests. Just look at that man." It chanced that a permanent resident of the hotel overheard the remark. This man was extremely thin—just the opposite of the guest referred to by Mr. Drew. The thin boarder once spoke up, saying: "Yes, that fat man has been here three days. I have been here thirty years. Look at me!"

WHY WE DO SOME THINGS.

Certainly Not Because We Look Pretty When We Do Them.

A man does not take off his hat to a lady because he looks nicer without it. The instance of bald men would be alone sufficient to upset such an explanation.

He does it because you must positively do something when you meet a lady or your whole civilization goes to pieces, and taking off your hat is easier than taking off your necktie or lying face downward on the pavement.

The primary point is that you must do something, not that you must do something beautiful. And as long as cultivated people cannot grasp this fact they will find their efforts quite futile in dealing with what they often consider the dullness of the middle classes or the vulgarity and morbidity of the poor.

In so far as the bourgeois thinks it more important to wear a Sunday hat than a becoming hat he is perfectly right. It is more important; the religion of the tribe is more important than the pretty appearance of Mr. Jones.

In so far as the charwoman thinks it more important that her husband should have a "proper" funeral than a pretty funeral she is perfectly right. It is more important. Decorum is as permanent a human sentiment as art and a much more pressing one. Any healthy savage would understand the charwoman's sentiments exactly and perhaps alarm her with demonstrations of barbaric approval.

He would also understand perfectly the sentiment of a Sunday hat. I believe in savages myself. I think that in a great many matters they represent the enduring common sense and moral minimum of humanity. There is nothing which I so sincerely respect in savages as their widespread and generally ascertained disposition to wear top hats.—London Illustrated News.

A good story is told with reference to the publication of a certain Biblical dictionary. The editor is said to have given the article on the deluge to what he considered a safe hand, but when the article was sent in it was found to contain views which would certainly have shocked orthodox readers. What could be done? The volumes had to be published forthwith. In this dilemma he put in his dictionary, "Deluge—see flood." This, at any rate, postponed the difficulty, and the article on the flood was given out to a writer who it was thought could be better trusted. But when this second article came in it was found to be worse than the first, and another postponement was necessary. The new volume contained another reference, "Flood—see Noah," the bewildered editor trusting that by the time Noah was reached he would succeed in finding a man who would be able to mingle science and orthodoxy in due degrees.—London Tit-Bits.

Fancy Table Ways.

We are getting dead swell in this good town. We eat ice cream with a fork. Some time ago we learned to make salad at the dinner table. Then we served coffee in the library after dinner. We have had finger bowls some dozen years. We are beginning to use them even when there is no company. One family has finger bowls at breakfast, after fruit and before bacon, even when there is no guest at the house. That's dead swell. We have drunk soup out of a teacup and put grass on the fried chicken, and now we eat ice cream with a fork. Why not? These little evidences of social progress are commendable.—Columbia Herald.

Relic of the Constitution.

A valuable relic of the historic old frigate Constitution has been dug from the river bed of the Delaware by the crew of a clam dredger off New Castle, Del. It is a china water urn presented to the famous old fighting ship of the American navy by the city of Philadelphia in 1797 and long ago lost and forgotten. How the urn came to be at the bottom of the river is a mystery. On one side of the receptacle is the coat of arms of the state of Pennsylvania, while on the other side is the inscription, "Presented by the City of Philadelphia to the Constitution—1797."—Philadelphia Press

THE MOB OF 1848.

Dramatic Climax That Awed the King of Prussia.

When the disturbance of 1848 broke out in Prussia the king, Frederick William IV., issued many proclamations. They denounced those who protested against the old state of affairs and urged a constitution as "a band of miscreants, mostly foreigners," and informed "my dear Berliners" that he would never grant a constitution.

The actual fighting, however, when for days his troops took barrier after barrier, only to be opposed after each as resolutely half a block farther down the street, soon changed his attitude, and he announced concessions. The troops were sent from the city.

When the soldiers had marched away from all parts of the city solemn and silent processions moved toward the royal palace. They escorted the bodies of those who had fallen in the battle. The bodies of the slain were borne aloft on litters, their gaping wounds uncovered, their heads wreathed with laurels and immortelles. So the procession marched into the inner courtyard of the palace.

The litters were placed in rows on the courtyard floor, and around them stood the multitude of men with pallid faces, begrimed with powder, smoke and blood, many of them still carrying the weapons with which they had fought during the night, and between them women and children bemoaned their dead.

The king was loudly called for. He appeared in an open gallery, pale and dejected, by his side the weeping queen.

"Hat off!" the multitude shouted. And the king took off his hat to the dead below. Then a deep voice among the multitude intoned the old hymn, "Jesus, Mein Zuversicht" ("Jesus, My Refuge"), in which all joined. The chorus finished, the king withdrew, the corpses were lifted up again and the procession moved away in grim solemnity.

It was a terrible humiliation to the crown, at the same time a pointed answer to the king's address, in which the fighters had been denounced as a band of miscreants. Had there been such among them Frederick William IV. would hardly have survived that moment when he stood before them alone and defenseless and they fresh from the field of blood, with guns still in their hands. But at that moment their cry was not "Death to the king!" nor "Down with royalty!" but "Jesus, my refuge!" — Carl Schurz in McClure's Magazine.

Peace Overtures.

There was blood in the eyes of the two suburban housewives as they glared daggers at one another over the whitewashed fence.

"As for you," hissed the one in the red knit jacket, "I don't know what I could say that would be sufficiently severe. I hate you!"

"And you," retorted the one in the blue shawl, "are really not worth wasting breath over. So there!"

There was a painful pause, and then the one in the knit jacket continued:

"I would say a great deal more were it not for your sweet little baby."

"Do—do you really think he is sweet?"

"I do, and I am not backward about saying it, although I despise his mother. He is the prettiest little boy in twenty blocks."

"Then—then let's make up. Neighbors shouldn't be enemies. I'll hand you a dish of stewed prunes over the fence." — Chicago News.

The leany bee is a money maker. It "honeys" up one's thoughts; it sweetens one's life; its nectar on one's words, and drops, sip by sip, into one's heart when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is used. Teas or Tablets, 35 cents. Wooten's Drug Store.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statement. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diarrhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach, bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by J. L. Wooten.
