WHOLE WORLD TO SUFFER.

Twenty-Nine Of Most Important Cities of Earth Included in Great Upheaval.

A dispatch from Washington to the Richmond Times-Dispatch lays:

"Twenty-nine of the largest cities are doomed. Earthquake, flood and fire will wreak the vengeance of God on the cities and their inhabitants within the next twenty-four months. This wholesale destruction is to be God's judgment on four nations. The doomed cities in this country are New York, Albany, Buffalo, Detroit, Lansing, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Lebanon, Pa., Pittsburg, Columbus, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Nashville, Muskegon, Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Hannibal, Mo.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Denver."

The above prophecy is made by Edmund Scsibner Stevens, 72 years old, the well known prognosticator of events and an astrologer of no mean ability. For more than twelve years Mr. Stevens has been ardent student of the history of the world. Since last May he claims to have been the recipient of telegraphic messages and to have made several true prophecies.

Mr. Stevens said today:

"The world is in the throes of upheaval, which will eventually right the earth and make the North Pole North and the South Pole South, instead of having the earth's axis on a slant. That upheaval will cause flood, fire and earthquake, and most of the large cities of the world are going to suffer; some of them will be destroyed.

"Within the next two years twenty-six cities in the United States and London, Paris and Rome will be destroyed.

New York City, the aged oracle says, will be swallowed in the gaping maw of an earthquake crack, and Chicago and Milwaukee will be wiped off the map.

Boy on Bicycle Run Over on Streets by Mail Wagon.

Wiley Jones, aged about 12 years, son of Mr. Henry Jones, who lives in Greenville, was run down at the Citizens Bank corner, Tuesday evening at 6:45 by the mail wagon, which was being driven pretty fast to the post-office for the mail for the 7 o'clock western train. Jones, who was riding a bicycle, was knocked to the pavement and was unconscious when picked up. The boy soon came around from the shock and went out in east Kinston to his home.

A colored boy, named Tom, was driving the mail wagon for Mrs. Mollie Harper, and he was arrested for reckless driving in turning a corner at such speed as he was making.—Kinston Free Press.

Several guests who came to attend the house party at Cottontale and the Wiggin-Cotten marriage, took the train here Wednesday evening for their homes, and others this morning.

MISS PEARL WINTHROPE.

OPERA HOUSE NEXT WEEK.

Three Nights of Good Plays.

The advance agent who has been here making arrangements says: The coming of the Edsall-Winthrope Company to this city next week will give the patrons of Greenville's pretty little play house an opportunity to witness at "living prices," the most modern plays perfectly staged and costumed, together with the strongest aggregation of vaudeville stars, that have toured this section of the country. Mr. Edsall and Miss Winthrope have succeeded this season in eclipsing all efforts, in their line of plays and specialties. They are using strictly royalty plays and are all new and this company has the exclusive Southern rights to all of them.

Despite the fact, that this company is carrying sixteen people, and a wealth of special scenery, and the enormous expense attached to producing these attractions, Mr. Edsall will play Greenville for "living prices" 15, 25 and 35 cts.

Monday night opens the engagement with a sensational comedy-drama, "Saved from the Sea." The scene of this gem of the play-wright's art is the coast of the Old North State. Humor and pathos are cleverly commingled and the players all seem to be as adept in portraying one as the other. Remember, living prices."

Deacons Ordained.

The ordination of Messrs. W. M. Pugh and J. C. Tyson, newly elected deacons, took place in the Baptist church Wednesday night. Rev. T. H. King, of LaGrange, who was present to assist the pastor, Rev. J. E. Ayscue, in the ordination, preached the sermon and delivered the charge to the new deacons. The service was very impressive.

Friday Night.

Get your seats for the Broomell-Reed recital in the opera house Friday night. The entertainment will be of a select order and should have a large house. Seats are on sale at Reflector Book-Store.

Office Well Equipped.

The office of the county board of education and superintendent of schools, in Masonic temple building, has been handsomely furnished with a new desk, book case, filing cabinet, table and chairs. The office is now well equipped and a credit to the county.

8,531,486 Bales.

The government report issued Wednesday of the amount of cotton ginned out of this season's crop up to Nov. 15 places it at 8,531,486 bales. This is about a million bales in excess of last year.

Joshua Simpkins.

This company appeared before a large audience in Masonic temple opera house Wednesday night. The play was well rendered, very amusing, and brought round after round of applause from the pleased audience.

The Sans Souci club will meet with Miss Irma Cobb tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Weather.

Fair, colder tonight. Friday fair, colder in eastern portion.

Just a Reminder.

Those who have not responded to the statements of subscription due The Reflector must think they were sent out merely for the fun of the thing. But seriously, we need the money, and wish every one who receives a statement would send us the amount.

MR. JOYNER REMAINS AS STATE SUPERINTENDENT.

Greensboro, N. C., Nov. 21.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the State Normal and Industrial College held yesterday afternoon to select a successor to Dr. McIver, as president of the college, State Superintendent J. Y. Joyner, who had been generally conceded as the next president, came before the board and stated that he could not accept the position, whereupon the board continued the administration of the college in the hands of the present superintendent, Dean J. I. Foust, until the close of the school year, June first, 1907, and will provide as soon as possible an assistant to President Foust.

It had been known for some days that Mr. Joyner was in doubt as to what his duty was with reference to accepting the presidency. He went from a professorship in the college to the State Superintendency and all his associates in the faculty would have gladly welcomed him back as president. The pressure upon him from many sources to remain as State Superintendent of Schools has been very great, quite a number of county superintendents and others having urged upon him that it was his duty to remain as State Superintendent. Mr. Joyner finally decided that he ought to remain in Raleigh.

The Tendency to Ease.

"Make it easy" would be fitting motto to furnish people with which to greet persons of whom they ask or seek a job. The tendency with most people is to look for an easy job. It is a question of great moment whether or not the people of this country are losing much of their will power for hard work and with this the muscular hardness to endure it. In the early days of our history men took delight in being able to endure hardships and to do things that called for manly vigor in strength of body and purpose of mind. It is different now. When you hire a man to cut a pile of wood he wants it to be soft wood and in the sun on the south side of the wood shed where the wind can't strike him. If it is some other job than cutting wood like conditions of ease must accompany it to make it attractive—and then it is not attractive. A like disposition to look for easy things clings to almost all persons, of the white and colored races alike. It does seem like most people are looking for easy places and easy jobs and are unwilling to take any other kind. Are our people losing the snap and disposition of manly toil? Are we not trying to get away from the Bible edict of long standing, that in the sweat of the face shall man eat bread?

The Baptist choir will meet at the church tonight for practice. All requested to be present to arrange the program of music for Thanksgiving service.

JUST A FEW.

Oscar Hooker returned from Richmond Wednesday evening.

J. R. Teague, of Henderson, has been here a few days.

The family of H. F. Keel left this morning for Norfolk.

Mrs. Eunice Draugh left this morning for Whitakers.

M. L. Starkey returned to Wilmington today.

Mrs. Leonidas Fleming and Mrs. J. B. White went to Washington today.

Miss Pattie Coffield went to Robersonville Wednesday evening.

Lieut. Bruce Cotten, U. S. A., who came home to attend the marriage of his sister, returned to his post of duty today.

Miss Sudie Joyner, of Hassell, who has been visiting her brother, O. L. Joyner, returned home today.

Mrs. S. C. Welis, and two daughters, who have been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. King, left Wednesday evening for their home in Wilson.

Rev. T. H. King, of LaGrange, came in Wednesday evening to assist in the ordination service in the Baptist church, and left this morning.

Mrs. G. B. King and children, of Washington City, who have been visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. M. King, returned home today.

Religious Preference of University Students.

A canvass of the students body has recently been made with a view of determining in what proportions the different religious denominations are represented in the University. It has been found that the Methodist church heads the list with 220 members. The Baptists have 151, the Presbyterians 128, and the Episcopalians 112. There are 14 Lutherans, 12 members of the Christian church, 7 Roman Catholics, 4 Moravians, and 5 who are members of the German Reformed church, while the Disciples and the Friends are represented. The total church membership amounts to 656. There are 710 students enrolled in the university at present.—Tar Heel.

SMALL FIRE.

Put Out Without Much Damage.

Just before 11 o'clock Wednesday night people returning home from the opera house saw flames coming out the roof of a pantry between the kitchen and dining room of the home of Mrs. C. J. Forbes, on Evans street. An alarm was given to which the fireman quickly responded and they were not long putting out the fire, though much of a tin roof had to be torn off to get to it. Just how the fire started cannot be explained, though Mrs. Forbes thinks it may have caught from a lamp carried in the pantry early in the night. It had evidently been burning sometime under the tin doof before discovered.

Petty Criticism.

Cyrus Small's time was largely spent in discovering the faults and shortcomings of things animate and inanimate, while Mrs. Small, as it seemed, was equally vigilant in attempting to bring forward something of which she could say, "There, you can't pick any flaws in that!"

Once she thought this happiness would be hers. A certain man in the town inherited large wealth under peculiar circumstances. It was his under the law, but when the court awarded it to him he stood up and said that, in view of all the facts in the case, he believed that the property belonged of right to another man. His action was generally looked upon as a noble one.

Mrs. Small was loud in her expressions of praise.

"Yes, I do," said her husband, "'twas a fine thing. Few men would have done it, and that's why he felt so awkward to stand up there and say what he did. He showed that he felt embarrassed by the way he stood."

"Cyrus Small, I should hope you would not find fault with his attitude when he was doing such a grand thing!"

"Oh, no; I have no wish to criticize," said Cyrus, "but if I had been on the platform, facing all those people, I should have tried to toe out a little more."

TRUE EDUCATION.

The Way Knowledge May Come to Be a Useless Thing.

The fact, of course, is that knowledge in itself is one of the most useless things in the world when it is possessed by persons who wear it simply as an isolated ornament. The only use it can have in the case of ordinary people is to enlarge the mental horizon and quicken sympathy. Of course it is a valuable instrument enough in the hands of a specialist. But that is the worst of our educational schemes, that they are all made by specialists and theorists, as if the design were to turn out specialists by the score.

To the ordinary person, for instance, the study of history is valuable, not that he may learn the movement of political forces and the development of constitutional theories, but that he may realize that there was a time when people looked, thought and talked differently, and, further, that he may learn, however dimly, the benefits of liberty and civilization. It is a fruitless quest with the majority of minds to hope to train them to have a grip of conflicting tendencies or to enable them to form a sound and catholic judgment on historical problems. In the first place, their knowledge can never be wide and sound enough for that nor sufficiently at their command. What ought really to be aimed at is to kindle the imagination, to awaken generous admiration, to set people aglow with the idea that it is worth while to make personal sacrifices in order to achieve some public spirited end, in order to make others wiser, stronger and happier. The best part of history for ordinary minds is that which deals with the lives and characters and efforts of noble minded and ardent personalities, which quickens the sense of the largeness and the romance of the world. Yet these are two things that are hurried over by the conscientious teacher as being sentimental and dilettante in favor of a knowledge of the events of a campaign or the provisions of an act.—A. C. Benson in London Academy.

No Word For It.

A traveler who has made several voyages to the arctic regions relates this incident of his first trip northward. He had accepted the invitation of a hospitable Eskimo to dine with his family. He did not expect to find the refinements of civilization among these primitive people, but he was horrified to notice that the members of his host's family, who had come to the table with unwashed and exceedingly dirty hands, dipped their fingers into the common dish and helped themselves to the meat. His traveling companion was a native who could speak English, and after the meal was over he said to him:

"Olaf, you should tell these good people that it is filthy to eat without washing their hands."

"Me like to," said Olaf hesitatingly, "but ain't got no word 'filthy' in Eskimo langwige."

Flowers of Speech.

At an education meeting the other day a zealous orator reproved his fellow churchmen for having so long been content to "take the crumbs from the dissenters' table lying down."

A correspondent of a religious journal, criticising a gross misstatement, insists on the necessity of "promptly nailing all similar lies to the mast."

An Irish Liberal was reported to have said in the house of commons that by "letting in the thin end of the wedge of land nationalization the government was laying on all sides seeds of disease which would in the future bring down the whole edifice about their heads."—London Express.

No Doubt About It.

"Dad," said Teddy, "it isn't true, is it?"

"What isn't true, my son?" asked his father, with a sigh.

"Why, this about the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Is it true that he could play on his pipes so fascinating that the rats would come out of their holes and drown themselves?"

"Well, I dunno," said Teddy's father cautiously. "It might be. Your Uncle Tom can play the cornet so that it will frighten a cow into the river and make all the dogs within five miles growl like an angry steam roller. Yes, I dessay it's true."

"At the horse, Despard; at the horse!"

then, not a hundred paces away, was the Seine, running cold and still in the moonshine. The bank on either side of the highway ran straight down without any break to the water's edge. There was no sign of a bridge, and a black shadow in the center of the stream showed where the ferryboat was returning after conveying some belated travelers across. The driver never hesitated, but, gathering up the reins, he urged the frightened creatures into the river. They hesitated, however, when they first felt the cold water about their hocks, and even as they did so one of them, with a low moan, fell over upon her side. Despard's bullet had found its mark. Like a flash the coachman hurled himself from the box and plunged into the stream, but the pursuing horsemen were all round him before this, and half a dozen hands had seized him ere he could reach deep water and had dragged him to the bank. His broad hat had been struck off in the struggle, and De Catinat saw his face in the moonshine. Great heavens! It was Amos Green.

Would Not Be Wall Paper.

Two "dusky" belles were heard discussing the various functions on their social calendars in a Gates avenue car. One was advocating a certain dance which promised to be a rousing success.

"No," said the other; "you won't catch me goin' ter any dances. Ah don't care fo' dancin' mahself, and I'm not goin' ter be the wall paper!"

This was the same "high born lady," by the way, who had to be severely reprimanded by her mistress several times before she would consent to stop using a patent face wash which announced on its label that it would give any one a lily white complexion. The lily white powdery patches on the dark background of Liza's swarthy countenance were too much for the composure of the family while she waited at table.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Vexing People.

When Dr. Mandell Creighton, afterward bishop of London, was vicar of Embleton he often gave as his evening sermon a clear expository discourse on one of the psalms or an epistle.

Mrs. Creighton in the biography of her husband quotes a fine unconscious tribute to the directness with which Creighton brought the meaning of the Bible home to the plain Northumbrian people.

A devout old woman, a constant attendant at church, was much disturbed at having the shortcomings of the Corinthian Christians made so clear.

"Oh, them Corinthians!" she exclaimed. "I've no patience with them."

Cities Built on Islands.

There are other cities besides Venice built on islands. Amsterdam and Ghent are both built on small islands, Amsterdam coming the nearest to Venice in the number of islands and bridges. Venice is built on 118 small islands, connected by 378 bridges; Amsterdam on nearly 100 islands, connected by almost 300 bridges. Ghent stands on 26 islands, joined by 270 bridges.

The charge is made against two members of the Asheville police force of "hiding out" when the negro was recently on a rampage there with a rifle and using the weapon with such deadly effect. Ordinarily policemen are expected to be brave men and ready to face danger, but when they had seen the negro shoot down five in quick succession and popping at everybody else who got in his path it is no wonder that people were scared, and in this respect the policemen in question were like the rest of the folks. But policemen are paid to face danger and more is expected of them than of others.

The value of a system of water works to Greenville was again demonstrated when the fire alarm was sounded Wednesday night. With a hydrant and hose reel station near at hand (and they are conveniently located in different sections of the town) the firemen were not long in turning on a stream and putting out the fire. The water works system and fire department are a good investment for the town.

COTTON

The South has as great an advantage over Europe today, as Europe had over the South a few years ago, when Europe got her Cotton at a price less than the cost of production. Today cotton is relatively lower than any other product of the earth. Foreign spinners recognize this. We have the demand this year as shown by the exports this season far exceeding last season up to this date. It matters not what the crop is, so much as what the size of the demand is. You have seen small crops sell at low prices. Every bale will be wanted this year unless prices go above 12 cents.

Buy cotton futures now and wire for 12 cents. We execute orders in lots of 25 bales and upwards. Will loan 90 per cent of the value on spot cotton shipped to us.

WINNING COURTESY.

The Charm and the Wisdom of the Art of Saying "Thank You."

The art of saying "Thank you" is one of the most charming accomplishments any one can acquire. Unfortunately it is a lost or forgotten art with many otherwise well bred and lovable individuals, and it is a pity that so many find it such a difficult task to frame these two simple words. Too many take any courtesies or favors which may be extended entirely as matters of course. Maybe we said "Thank you" or its equivalent very heartily and sincerely the first time the small boy next door did an errand for us, but as the small boy continued to run our errands and with the utmost willingness apparently we gradually got into the habit of accepting his courtesy as a matter of course, and after a little we never thought it necessary to thank him or only did it perfunctorily. Indeed we probably began to think our willing neighbor could do our errands just as well as not, and it is not at all unlikely that we should bitterly resent his refusal to do so. The least any one can do is to say "Thank you" for a favor or courtesy, whether extended by those with whom we come into daily contact or by strangers.

The most disagreeable people imaginable and the most selfish and disgusting are those who take anything at the hands of another without showing any appreciation. True, most courtesies are extended with no hope nor desire for remuneration or appreciation, but nevertheless every person ought to consider it a bounden duty to give a tangible expression of his appreciation for courtesies or favors, no matter how small. Even a cur will wag his tail at a kind word or a pat of the hand. Why should humans do less? Nevertheless this art of saying "Thank you" is not at all common, and there are people who will take any service or gift without a word, or perchance on great occasions they will unbend far enough to utter a grunt. Sad to say, it is not unusual, with shame be it said, to run across persons who are not a bit shy about finding fault if you don't do enough for them. It is a wise policy to cultivate a due appreciation of favors and to learn to give audible expression to them. The practice of saying "Thank you" does far more for the one who says it than for him who receives. — Pittsburg Press.

No Weapons Required.

The railway platform at Heidelberg was crowded with hurrying people of many nationalities, but the American traveler from Connecticut, who was trying to reach his family, felt that one man pushed against him with unnecessary roughness.

"See here," he said, turning on the offender, "you stop jostling me that way."

He had hardly expected his words to be understood, but the young man whom he had accosted drew himself up haughtily and said in excellent English, tinged by a slight German accent:

"I am at your service, sir, at any time and place."

"Well, now, that's something like it," said the traveler, hooking his arm into the haughty young man's. "You carry this grip of mine and take me to a good hotel. You're just the man I've been looking for and didn't know how to find."

A Lesson in the Art.

The Complete Angler—Yes, the bass is the wildest of the finny tribe all right, as this little incident will show: One day while engaged in my favorite pursuit I dropped a valuable diamond ring in the water. The following day I cast my line near the spot where the ring disappeared and soon landed a five pound bass. Now, what do you suppose the camp cook found inside that fish?

The Chorus of Novices—Haw, haw, haw! The missing jewelry, of course!

The Complete Angler—Ah, boys, you seem to forge about the willingness of the bass. What the cook really found was a pawn ticket for the ring—luck.

Climbing Mont Blanc.

It is an expensive as well as a very tiresome undertaking to ascend Mont Blanc. It costs at least $50 per person, for by the law of the commune of Chamouni each stranger is obliged to have two guides and a porter. So far as the danger is concerned, it is now reduced to a minimum, but almost every year the mountain claims a victim. Bad weather is the chief thing feared by the guides, and so swiftly does it come that a cloudless sky may in fifteen minutes turn to a blinding snowstorm, which beats you to the ground.

A PERILOUS FEAT.

Performed to Escape Death, It Could Not Be Repeated.

An engineer, employed for forty-eight years on western railroads, says that although he has had some narrow escapes, he has never been hurt in a wreck. The story of one of his escapes is interesting and peculiar. One day he had left Stockton bound east. The train was carrying a lot of green wood, cut the day before, but on the back end of the tender there was some dry wood for use in climbing a steep grade.

"My fireman was back after some of that dry wood and down where he couldn't see me or the engine. I got down on the deck and stood with one foot on the front end of the tender and the other on the sill of the engine deck, taking a look into the fire. Just at that instant the engine parted from the tender and shot away ahead.

"Of course I went down between the engine and tender, clear to the ground between the rails.

"I didn't think. I grabbed and caught the safety chains at the front end of the tender. We were running only four or five miles an hour, but that was enough. I pulled myself up and climbed up into the tender, and just then the fireman looked forward from the rear end over the pile of wood he had been heaving up.

"What's the matter? Is she slipping?" he asked.

"Yes, she's slipping," I said.

"There she goes."

"Her smoke was a mile ahead of us. She ran a good seven miles, and there we found her, without fire, water or steam.

"After she was on the pit in the roundhouse we put a plank across the pit in front of the tender and cut her loose from it. There wasn't a man in the house that could start off that plank holding to those chains and climb up into the tender, and when I tried it myself there in the house I couldn't do it either. But the fireman and I both know that the thing happened."—Davenport (Ia.) Democrat.

A Vulnerable Point.

Mr. Lapham knew that his wife was a treasure. He heard it on every hand, and he appreciated his possession. But he sometimes made a mild protest when the summer boarders grew too fulsome in their praise.

"I never saw such a beautiful disposition in my life," said one tearful enthusiast, whose baby had played with Mrs. Lapham's Sunday bonnet with disastrous results. "She always makes you feel as if nothing mattered, no matter how bad it is. I don't suppose she's ever lost her temper in all her life, has she, Mr. Lapham?"

The husband of the peerless one surveyed the landscape with his lips drawn up and out in a complicated pucker.

"Well, now, I don't know as she ever has to the extent you mean," he said slowly, "but I recollect one hot day, when she had turned and darned the foreroom carpet for company coming and found our boy Sam had thrown the paper of tacks down the well, that I stood from under for an hour or so, now I tell ye!"—Youth's Companion.

Ancient Locks and Keys.

Locks were used in the time of the Pharaohs. At Karnak the visitor is shown the sculptured representation of a lock which is almost exactly like the kind of lock used in Egypt at the present day. Homer says that Penelope used a brass key to open her wardrobe. He adds that it was very crooked and had an ivory handle. A Greek writer who lived in the last half of the twelfth century explains that such keys were undoubtedly very ancient, although still to be seen in Constantinople and elsewhere. Roman locks, like the Egyptian, required a partial sliding of the key. They were, however, more intricate.

Second Hand.

A story is told of a minister who gave the rural joiner an order to make a small wooden cupboard. When the pastor received the account he complained to the joiner about the amount and said he could have got a second hand cupboard which would have answered his purpose equally well at much less cost.

"Yes," retorted the joiner, "and I could buy a good sermon for three-pence, but e'e wadna' care about preaching them at that price!"—London Telegraph.
