THOUGH LOST TO SIGHT TO MEMORY DEAR.

Sweetheart, goodbye! That flut'ring sail
Is spread to waft me far from thee;
And soon, before the forth'ring gale,
My ship shall bound upon the sea.
Perchance all des'late and forlorn,
These eyes shall miss thee many a year
But unforgotten every charm—
Though lost to sight to memory dear.

Sweetheart, goodbye! The last embrace!
Oh! cruel fate, two souls to sever!
Yet in this heart's most sacred place
Thou, thou alone shall dwell forever;
And still shall recollection trace,
In fancy's mirror, ever near,
Each smile, each tear, that form that face—
Though lost to sight, to memory dear
—Thomas Moore.

District Meeting of Odd Fellows.

There will be an interesting meeting of the Odd Fellows district here, on Thursday (Dec 6) next at their lodge. There will also be a public meeting at the Christian church at night. The lodge will meet in session at their hall at 2 p. m. Will also meet in the hall before the public speaking at night. The lodge will move in a body to the church, where several excellent addresses will be delivered. R. W. Smith will deliver the opening address, Grand Secretary B. H. Woodell is expected. Also Ex-Grand Master Plato Collins, of Kinston. Dr. James, of Greenville, and others will grace the occasion. The public are cordially invited.—Ayden Baptist.

The Bazaar.

The ladies who are conducting the bazaar in Perkins' hall had another successful night last night. The crowd was large and receipts very satisfactory. The bazaar will probably close tonight. There are yet many handsome articles for sale and supper will be served as usual. The entertainment feature tonight will be participated in by several of Greenville's best local talent.

Burglar Alarm.

H. A. Blow has taken the agency for the Twentieth Century burglar alarm and was showing samples on the street today. It is a handy device and it is impossible for a burglar to open a door or window to which one of them is fastened without giving an alarm.

You get near the real valuation of a man when you see him put a penny in the offering while he sings, "Take my life."

Through humility is the best preparation for true greatness.

When a man is drifting with the stream he is likely to think that the stream has ceased to flow.

There's a lot of people so perfectly good they cannot give the rest of us a chance even to be pretty good.

It is almost better to be married than never to have been engaged.

If a girl has the toothache she'll try to account for it in some romantic way.

If parents had been the kind they tell their children to be they would have been freaks.

"THE UNITED STATES," HIS.

A Senator's Idea of the Presidential Form of Expression.

From the staid committee on revision of the laws, now at work in the capital, comes the first of these stories "lighter vein" which from time to time give Washington excuse to smile. The fact that the first of the vintage of the winter is "on the President" has not tended to make the snicker less audible.

They were discussing the perennial question of the plurality or singularity of the phrase "United States of America." Division arose as ever. There were those who favored "the United States in its entirety," and others who demanded "in their entirety." The "its" and the "theirs" were at it hammer and tongs, and one distinguished Representative was warmly defending the collective singular view of the case.

"The idea of the United States as a unity is the universal one," he declared, "and I think the time has come to drop plural pronouns and verb forms. Not 'the United States, their interests, navy, army, law, &c.,' but 'the United,' and the like.

"And," he concluded in a nothing-more-to-be-said tone, "I believe the President favors this view."

"H-h-m-m-m-," broke in a Senator, "maybe so, but I thought Mr. Roosevelt was committed to 'the United States, his,' the United States, him, etc. I may be wrong."

There was laughter ranging from Democratic guffaws to discrete Republican gurgles—Washington Dispatch to The New York Times.

Inflated Values.

The South is experiencing an era of real prosperity and it would be a wicked soul, indeed, who could for a moment, wish it otherwise, for long enough has this great section of the country had its peculiar draw-backs in material prosperity. But is there not some danger that values may be set too high on certain things? It takes labor now, as it ever has, to provide farm crops, and if the value of farm lands be inflated beyond reason the great prosperity of the farmers may prove disappointing. It is well enough to hold down the spirit of speculation; nay, it is dangerous for the speculative spirit to get hold of the people at all. A steady growth with level dealings is the safest policy everywhere—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Costliest Cook in the World.

Mrs. Rosa Lewis, chief culinary artist of the Cavendish Hotel, London, is believed to draw a larger salary than any other female cook in the world. She is paid $15,000 a year for her services, and so wide spread is her fame that graduates from her kitchen are always sure of good positions.—Exchange.

Weather.

Fair, colder tonight and Friday.

Why the Lecture Ended.

A certain professor was giving his pupils a lecture on "Scotland and the Scots" "These hardy men," he said, "think nothing of swimming across the Tay three times every morning before breakfast."

Suddenly a loud burst of laughter came from the centre of the hall, and the professor, amazed at the idea of anyone daring to interrupt him in the middle of his lecture, angrily asked the offender what he meant by such conduct.

"I was just thinking, sir," replied the lad, "that the poor Scotch chaps would find themselves on the wrong side for their clothes when they landed!"—Lippincott's.

Wants 200-Pound Wife

George Marshall, of Granville, a widower, advertised for a wife who could tip the beam at 200 pounds, was opposed to race suicide, was charitably inclined, and could bake good bread. No society butterfly, clubwoman, or physical culturist need apply, he added.

A colored woman, dragging three children, was the first applicant. One buxum widow was up to requirements in every respect but weight. She traveled several miles afoot, only to be rejected. Marshall has received several more applications, but none is satisfactory.

Marshall is related to members of the German nobility. Becoming offended at his parents, he left his aristocratic home and vowed never to return or give any information as to his whereabouts. He has kept his determination since he came to this country, forty two years ago.

Marshall's wife died several years ago. Every night after her death he visited her grave, rain or shine, and sobbed aloud for her return to life. One night he disinterred her body.—Fort Edward Dispatch to the New York World.

Mildred and Rouclere.

These charming entertainers with their splendid company appeared in Masonic temple opera house Wednesday night. The audience was not large, yet fair in size, several local causes preventing the people going out as they would have done had conditions been otherwise. The entertainment was the best that has been here this season and the audience fully appreciated it. While every part of it was good, the illusion work was most marvelous. We believe the company makes a mistake in playing only one night stands, for the character of the entertainment would draw well the second night.

A nice thing about being corrected is the more people think you are a fool the more you think they don't.

There is nothing that makes a really good woman so triumphantly virtuous as to go out to dinner and have something wrong with her hostess' cooking.

THE MAN TO FIT THE ASSIGNMENT

Small for Rivers and Harbors Committee.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—The North Carolina delegation in Congress is very anxious to secure the appointment of Representative John H. Small on the Committee on River and Harbors to succeed the late Mr. Lester, of Georgia. Mr. Small is the choice of Minority Leader John Sharp Williams for the committee vacancy, which means that his appointment will be recommended to the speaker. Of course, the speaker, could veto choice of Mr. Williams, but this would be most unusual. There was significant action today by the River and Harbor Committee, which looks good for Mr. Small. The committee decided for the first time in its history to apportion the work of preparing the River and Harbor bill among the various members. Each member is made a sub committee, and is to take up the river and harbor work by States. For instance, Mr. Sparkman, of Florida, will look after the matters pertaining to the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, and his recommendations will form the basis of the river and harbor bill for those States. The important fact is that Mr. Sparkman has the States of North Carolina and South Carolina on the list only temporarily, and the announcement is made that they will be taken in charge by the new member of the committee. As each member of the committee looks after his own State, it is to be inferred that the new appointee will be chosen from one of the Carolinas.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Baptist State Convention.

Greensboro, N. C., Dec. 5.—The noon trains brought in many delegates and preachers, who are here to attend the 47th annual session of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention, which convened in the splendid new church on West Market street this afternoon at three o'clock. Most of the delegates will arrive on tonight and tomorrow's trains the real work not beginning until tomorrow. It is expected that eight hundred delegates, pastors and visitors will be here during the week. The white Baptists of the State number 200,000, and if each church should send the representation it is entitled to, there would be at least 4,000 delegates from every section of North Carolina.

Dangerous Tree.

There is a dead tree on Dickinson avenue, not far from the intersection of Washington street, that ought to be removed. A large limb was blown from it this morning and came down with a crash on the side walk, breaking several telephone wires as it fell. If any one had been passing at the time serious damage might have been done with the possibility of a suit against the town.

Thrifty Set of Colored People in Town of Morrisville.

Morrisville, N. C., Dec. 5. The colored people of this town killed 3,200 pounds of pork today and they have half as much more to be slaughtered later in the season. Bud Sims led the procession with a 300 pound porker. The white people of this town are pleased with the thrift of their colored citizens. If there is another town of equal population where the negroes are doing as well they would like to know about it.

Jones Had to Settle.
Colonel John H. George of Concord, N. H., was in the latter part of his life in New York on an important case for the Boston and Maine railway. He was accompanied by Frank Jones. At the noon hour they left the courthouse and stepped into a Park row restaurant largely frequented by newspaper men. Colonel George was greatly amused to hear the waiters call off to the cook such orders as "Sinkers and cow," etc.

"I can give that waiter an order he won't abbreviate," said Mr. Jones.

"Bet you the drinks you don't," replied Colonel George.

The Portsmouth man said, "Peeched eggs on toast for two, with the yolks broken."

The waiter walked to the end of the room to the dumb waiter and yelled:

"Sinkers and cow! Sinkers and cow!"

The waiter returned and paid several dollars for the drinks in the restaurant.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Threw Himself on the Beam and Saved the Express.

It was a lovely night. The stars were twinkling, the moon was shining, the dogs were howling, the cats were holding forth in chorus—in fact, everything was peaceful and quiet. I was strolling along the track when suddenly I saw a beam lying across the rails. I looked at it; but, much as I wished, I hadn't the power to move it. I was in a tremble. I did not know what to do, for just at that moment I heard the rumble and roar and rattle of a coming express. Nearer and nearer it came. Louder and louder grew the noise. What was I to do? I couldn't lift it. I was powerless. All at once an idea struck me. I put my body between the train and the beam, and the train—thank goodness, the train passed on without harm.

It was a moonbeam!—Judge.

Feminine.

Mrs. Caller—I'm going to get a divorce from my husband.

Mrs. Neighbors—Indeed!

Mrs. Caller—Yes, but it's a secret yet, so you must not say anything about it.

Mrs. Neighbors—Oh, very well. I'll be just as careful as you are.—Detroit Tribune.

Cost of Training.

She—It costs an awful lot to learn to play the piano. My father spent nearly $1,000 on my lessons.

He—That's nothing. It cost my father $5,000 while I was learning to play the races, and I can't play 'em very good at that.—Chicago News.

Vindication.

"What do you think of this idea of spelling reform?"

"It's all right," answered Farmer Cornstossel. "I'm glad to see it. I allus did want somethin' to happen to take the conceit out o' the school-teacher that used to lick me fur not doin' things his way."—Washington Star.

Still in Doubt.

"So your marriage was a failure."
"I don't know. The courts haven't yet decided upon the amount of alimony."—Philadelphia Press.

RISE OF THE LATCHKEY.

Over in England the possession of a latchkey has lately been held in the courts to have an important bearing on the electoral rights of a man claiming to be a householder. With us the latchkey has grown so universal as to be no indication of a man's status or a woman's either, for that matter. Not so very long ago the American woman's right to the latchkey was subject for jocular argument pro and con, but women's latchkeys are now as common as men's. For an institution that dates back only about seventy years the latchkey has stepped with some suddenness into its place of a universal necessity.—Boston Herald.

D'Annunzio and His Dog.

Gabriele D'Annunzio has erected a monument over the grave of his dog. The inscription on it is a lengthy one, beginning with the words, "Sacred to the imperishable memory of my greatest and most faithful friend." The dog was killed by a peasant some months ago. The novelist prosecuted the man, who at the trial in Florence said that he killed the dog because it worried his hens. The author had engaged the services of two notable counselors at an expense of $1,000 to prosecute. He won, and the peasant was sentenced to ten days' imprisonment.

AMERICAN IDEALISM.

It has frequently struck me in listening to impressions received in America by foreign travelers that the American in his deepest nature is a realist who strives for power and wealth and outer comfort; that the object of his life is to pile up the mighty dollar. People who speak thus seem to me blind to everything which lies below the surface. They seem to have studied the mills and factories of the industrial centers and to have neglected to read or understand the character of the American man or woman.

Since my first arrival in America
I have held that the real spirit is idealistic and that the average individual American is controlled by idealistic impulses. Those who may contradict me cannot have sounded the depths of the philosophy of Ralph Waldo Emerson or studied the life and read the speeches of Abraham Lincoln and considered their far reaching effect on the American people.

In Lincoln's great character nothing can be more striking than the way in which he combined reality and the loftiest ideal with a thoroughly practical capacity to achieve that ideal by practical methods.—
Baron Speck von Sternburg in Forum.

Lung Fishes.

Several examples of a zoological paradox—a fish which would be speedily drowned if placed in deep water—have just been added to the collection at Regent's park. This is the African walking fish, which spends the greater part of its existence upon the mud banks of tropical rivers. Its method of progression has been described by naturalists as of the "hop, skip and jump" variety, and when journeying inland, as it does over long distances, it climbs by means of the breast fins over the roots and even into the boughs of trees. These curious creatures, which belong to an important group known as lung fishes, form a connecting link with the higher forms of life, the air bladder being converted into what is practically a lung. When the rivers dry up in the hot season they bury themselves in the mud, breathing in the air like a frog or a newt. In Australia there are several varieties of lung fishes, one of the largest, which is much esteemed as an article of food, sometimes attaining a length of six feet.—London Graphic.

WATER LILY SEEDS AS FOOD.

People who feed on water lilies have recently been made the subject of a special study by government scientists. They are a tribe of Indians, native to southern Or-gon and dwelling at the eastern foot of the Cascade mountains. "Klamath," they call themselves, and their harvest of the food in question is obtained from a vast shallow area of fresh water, 10,000 acres of which are covered in the summer time with "wokus," as the plant that furnishes the crop is named.

The plant is a great yellow water
lily, known to botanists as Nym-phaea polysepala, and it seems to have furnished a staple food of the Klamath in primitive times. Living, as they do, on a government reservation, they are less dependent upon the crop for food than in former days, but it is still regarded by them as a delicacy. Not the flowers themselves, but the seeds, are eaten, the seed pods being gathered in August by the women of the tribe, who use for the purpose queer looking dugout canoes, pushing the boats through the thickly growing lilies by means of poles.—Myerson's Magazine.

Mr. Moody's Gallantry.

Attorney General Moody was once riding on the platform of a Boston street car, standing next to the gate that protected passengers from cars coming on the other track. A Boston lady came to the door of the car and as it stopped started toward the gate, which was hidden from her by the men standing before it.

"Other side, please, lady," said
the conductor.

He was ignored as only a born and bred Bostonian can ignore a man. The lady took another step toward the gate.

"You must get off the other side,"
said the conductor.

"I wish to get off on this side,"
came the answer in tones that con-gealed the official into momentary silence. Before he could explain or expostulate Mr. Moody came to his assistance.

"Stand to one side, gentlemen,"
he remarked quietly. "The lady wishes to climb over the gate."

The evidence is that even the governor can go wrong when it comes to granting pardons to prisoners. The next legislature might do a wise thing, and no doubt take a responsibility off the governor that he would gladly be rid off, by establishing a board of pardons.

The reading public can now take a rest on the Gillette case, the court having found him guilty of murder in the first degree and passed sentence upon him accordingly. But Thaw will occupy top of column space for sometime to come.

No More Isolation on the Farm.

In the past few years the farmers of Brantley county have fitted up their country homes with nearly every convenience, such as bath and toilet rooms, telephones and furnaces. With mail delivery every day and good roads they are even more comfortably situated than their city brethren. John Leidy, a farmer living near Robinson, has gone them all one better by installing a complete electric light plant on his place, which lights his house, barns, cow-sheds, corn-cribs and granaries. A gasoline engine runs the dynamo for the plant.

North Carolina Conference.

Rocky Mount, N. C., Dec. 5.—Great is Methodism in North Carolina. Conference reports show a year of unequalled achievement and is a year of unprecedented opportunity. In the denomination is seen a depth of purpose and a breadth of effort, and the Spirit of God is with it.

Conference held its initial session this morning, there being 150 members to respond to the roll call. It is a venerable body of men, and the glorious sight awakened something in the soul like spiritual exaltation. Amn, song and prayer and the administering of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, friend met friend and there was an immeasurable-ness of good feeling. The places filled the church, and the large auditorium became a heavenly place.

Bishop Wilson, whom someone has called a prince among the sons of God, one beloved throughout the South, a prophet of the higher truth, and a man of God-like countenance, is an inspiration and benediction to the conference. His words are as food and drink for the soul, wholly satisfying. In this day of commercial and industrial degradation Bishop Wilson preaches the gospel of the luminous life, the love of God to the uttermost. He sounds the possibilities in the human breast, and doubt becomes evanescent before him like morning mists before the rising sun. He breaks the shackles of superstition and leads the faithful into the fulness of liberty in the Kingdom of God.

Much of the day has been spent by the members in friendly conversation. In this is a cross fertilization of ideas which stimulates a nobler denominational sentiment, unifying the conference in spirit.

About Night Glasses.

A night glass is simply a small telescope made in the form of an opera glass. The glass in the end toward the object to be viewed, known as the object glass, is a lens of unusual power, which will concentrate a large amount of light. Thus objects can be seen at night more distinctly through this glass than when viewed by the naked eye. Of course, the degree of distinctness depends primarily on the degree of light existing, and nights of absolute darkness are not taken into account at all. Equally, of course, it is quite absurd to say that with a night glass objects can be seen, even on the clearest night, as well as by day, for they cannot.

About Spiders.

Rightly considered, a spider's web is a most curious as well as a most beautiful thing. The majority of children suppose that the spider's web is pulled out of his mouth and that the little insect has a large reel of the stuff in his stomach, and that he could almost instantly add feet, yards or rods to the roll.

The facts are that the spiders have a regular spinning machine, a set of tiny tubes, at the far end of the body, and that the threads are nothing more nor less than a white sticky fluid, which hardens as soon as it comes in contact with the air.

Blind Child—A Game.

All the children stand in a ring around blind child, who has been chosen by counting out and blindfolded. The others join hands and skip around her in a circle while she counts ten slowly; then all stand still while she advances and touches one. She tries to guess the name of the one touched by feeling her face, dress, etc. The one whose name she guesses correctly becomes blind child next time.

Our Coast Line.

The coast line of the United States is 5,270 miles, divided as follows: Atlantic, 2,163; gulf, 1,764, and Pacific, excluding Alaska, 1,343. The greatest extent, excluding Alaska, east and west, is 3,100 miles and north and south 1,780 miles. These are geographical facts that it would be well to remember.

Interesting Facts.

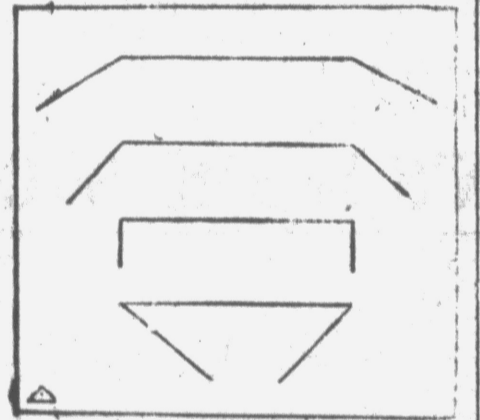

A horse always gets up fore parts first and a cow directly the opposite. Corn on the ear is never found with an uneven number of rows.

Fish, flies and caterpillars may be frozen solid and still retain life.

A snake comes down a tree head first and a cat tail first.

Optical Illusion.

Here is an optical illusion. The horizontal lines in the picture do not seem to be of the same length.

but they are, as you may find by measuring them or by holding the paper on a level with your eye.

Surprised Rabbit.

Secure a young rabbit and after skinning lay it in salt water for half an hour. Then dip into boiling water, wipe dry and rub the surface with olive oil or sweet butter. Dust with pepper. Put a gridiron over a bed of live coals, lay the rabbit on it and cook tender, turning frequently, so that the surface will not become hard and dry. When done and nicely browned transfer to a buttered serving platter. Have ready a sauce made of four teaspoonfuls of vinegar, one of currant jelly and a pinch of mustard. Pour this over the rabbit, rubbing it in well, and serve at once.

Washing a Sweater.

Use pure soap and water not too hot in washing a sweater. Never rub soap on the sweater. Make suds instead. Rinse the sweater in water of exactly the same temperature as that of the washing water. Every laundress knows that rule for woolens, but not one in a thousand follows it conscientiously. Never hang a wet sweater up to dry. It will sag and stretch and be ruined. Lay it on a clean cloth on the grass in the fresh air and sunshine if you can. If not, lay it on a flat surface anyway or hang it up in a cheery cloth bag and let it dry that way.

A Long Legged Deer.
 A huge, finely mounted antlered
 head hung just above the sideboard in the dining room. This trophy of some huntsman's skill was fastened so firmly to the wall that the glistening neck seemed to be coming right out through the plaster. Robert, who was seeing this decoration for the first time, eyed it with lively curiosity and very evident uneasiness. It looked almost too life-like for comfort.
 Finally the boy, asking to be excused, slipped from his chair, tiptoed into the next room and then, flushing with embarrassment, returned to his place at the table.
 "What's the trouble, Robert?"
 asked his host.
 "I wanted to see," explained candid Robert sheepishly, "if that antler's legs were really as long as they are if he were standing on something in another room."

DECENCY A BUSINESS ASSET.

It used to be an accepted theory that the business world has nothing to do with the private life of business people. As long as a man attended honestly to his business occupation, was true to his obligations and paid his debts, that was considered sufficient. It is no longer considered sufficient. The business world, before it will accord to any man the highest rate of credit, must be shown that the man is not only faithful and reliable, but is not addicted to habits and occupations which may impair his standing. The Wall Street Journal recently went so far as to declare that the business world has a right to know of any business man "not only where he spends his days, but where he spends his nights. It has a right not only to know his financial standing, but also his status in the scale of social decency. The man who is faithful to the duties of his office and false to the standards of domestic decency must have his financial credit marked down and the business confidence of his fellow men lowered to the class of extra hazardous risks."—Baltimore Sun.

Winter Rhubarb.

Rhubarb is a vegetable easily raised in the cellar in winter. For forcing, or cellar growing, select and safely store away strong, big clumps of roots at least four years old and of early varieties. They may be planted at any time after they have had a short rest. If a succession is wanted a few are brought in at intervals of two weeks. On the bottom of a trench a foot deep place a four inch layer of fresh horse manure, followed by a two inch layer of loam. The roots are to be set in this trench, one foot apart, with the dirt carefully packed about them. When you have finished the plants and excluded all light, the bed can be left to itself for an occasional watering. The crop will be ready in from one to three months, the time varying with the temperature, the vitality of the plants, the season and other factors.—Suburban Life.

Smile!

Have you tried smiling? It is the latest remedy for all the ills of the flesh and the spirit, and it is cheap. All that is necessary to do to try the new "smile cure" which, we are informed, the London doctors are recommending is to lift the corners of the mouth slightly by means of the facial muscles, expanding the lips and showing the teeth. Practice this before the looking glass night and morning until the smile has worn in, and the beneficial results will be forthcoming, it is seriously asserted. There is no state of affairs so discouraging that it can't be bettered by smiling over it, and there is no joy in life so joyous that it will not spread a little wider over the surface of the globe with the coaxing of a smile.

If you have trouble bear it and grin—Smile and smile till the smile grows in.

—Albany Argus.

A Crusher.

George Hoadly, ex-governor of Ohio, once related that the hardest setting down he ever experienced fell to him while campaigning in his own state. Tired and out of sorts, he arrived at a little town one evening and went to the only hotel in the place. The proprietor stood coatless behind a little desk smoking a cornob pipe. After Mr. Hoadly registered his host said, "Take yer grip up to No. 10, down at the far end of the hall." With some exasperation the state's chief executive said, "I am George Hoadly, governor of Ohio." The man ed him over calmly and r... "Well, what d'ye want me to... kiss ye?" The governor went meekly to bed.

Not Her Personal Sentiments.

Apologetics have just been made to Marie Corelli by the London Daily Mail, which quoted as a personal expression the following passage from her novel "Temporal Power." "I have never loved any man, because from my very childhood I have hated and loathed men. I loathe their presence, their looks, their voices, their manners—if one touches my hand in ordinary courtesy my instincts are offended and revolted, and the sense of outrage remains with me for days." Those, it seems, are not her personal sentiments.
